Brodhead City Council is getting things done

By: Mike French

In a short meeting, the Brodhead City Council held their regular monthly meeting Monday night at City Hall in Brodhead and, once again, Mayor Walter Cash and the council members are keeping the promises they made before the November

In fact, Brodhead as a city has been growing and the city has been spruced up since the election in ways that have previously gone unattended.

For example, the curbs are now painted throughout the city, a new, larger flag is being ordered to fly at City Hall, the shelter at the little park is scheduled to be torn down next week and a new shelter built, the sewer plant has new pumps and electrical wiring, city sewer lines have been repaired and most leaks have been fixed, a police officer has been hired to patrol the city and slow drug use in the community and the recent Little World's Fair held in Brodhead, (once a nationally-known event) was once again a huge success after the city hired a new company to run the castle County Judge/Executive Doug Bishop. "The grounds were clean, there were no glitches or problems, the midway workers were friendly and nice and dressed very well and the family atmosphere was clear to anyone who attended."

Councilman John Burton agreed. "This is what you get when you hire quality people to run the midway. Plus the Brodhead Fire Department did an exemplary job throughout the fair," he said. "Hats off to the volunteers who kept the fair safe and clean and to the crews who ran the midway,"

Burton also pointed out that, unlike in recent years at the fair, children who played the midway games all won a prize.

City Clerk Becky Bussell pointed out that the operators of the fair took four hours out of their schedule last Thursday to open the fair to handicapped people and elderly residents. "They took these elderly people in a golf cart and let them ride any ride they wanted or play any game they wanted all for free and then brought them back," she said. "They did everything right and showed caring for the community. They were clean and honest people. With this kind of fair, it can be as big as it used

Bishop agreed. "I sincerely hope you hire the same company next year."

Burton said he and the council agree and plans are to use the same company for next year's event.

Burton also announced to the council and those present that he has arranged to have two surplus police

Livingston commission discusses upcoming Labor Day festivities

The Labor Day weekend will be a big one in the City of Livingston, according to Livingston Mayor Jason Medley.

At Tuesday night's regular meeting of the commission, Medley detailed the events, of the 33rd annual event, that will begin at 7 p.m. on Friday night, Sept. 1st with gospel singing, featuring several groups, and continue on into Saturday and Sunday.

On Saturday, following the 5K Livingston Leap and a homestyle breakfast in the school cafe, the parade will begin at 11 a.m., followed by an awards ceremony. In the afternoon there will be an LVFD Horseshoe Tournament at 2 p.m. and various entertainment will be provided.

On Sunday, the day will begin at 1 p.m. with a devotional by Bro. Bill Hammond, followed by a pet show, a watermelon eating contest, a Paul Ponder Pink Pig Pie Auction, an ugly woman contest, a performance by Rusty and the Greenhorns and at 10 p.m. the weekend's festivities will come to a close with a fireworks display.

Also during the meeting, Medley and Larry Davidson of the Rockcastle Outdoor Company discussed with commissioners their plans to open up city roads to ATVs/ UTVs.

Davidson told the commissioners that if city, county and state roads could be opened to "insuranceowning street legal vehicles" the increased traffic in Livingston would be a big boon to the city.

Medley said that today's UTV riders were a different breed than in the past. "Today's riders are more family-oriented." the mayor said. "Once Mom and the kids get tired of riding, they would have activities to entertain them, here, such as kayaking, tubing, a basket-

Due to forces beyond my control (a gallbladder attack that wouldn't go away), has been resolved.

I absolutely hate to be at the mercy of doctors and hospitals and have the "If I don't acknowledge it, it doesn't exist" mindset down pat. I tried that for over two years with my gallstones but finally had to admit defeat last week when it insisted on exiting my body (in a pretty painful way, I might add).

One of the nurses in preop was pretty funny. One nurse said to me, "Well, you decided to give up on your gallbladder?" And, I answered, that yes, after giving it two years to behave I decided it wasn't going to. Another nurse standing there said, "I did the same thing with my ex-husband before getting rid of him."

Probably the most horrible part of the entire process was the Barium I had to drink - twice! - in order to get contrast on my x-rays. The sight of an old woman crying and sniveling constantly during the process couldn't have been a pretty one for those who had to witness it.

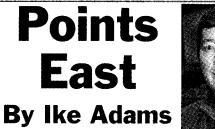

Anyhow, the saga of my gallbladder has finally played out and I am now without that body part, and the appendix they took as part of the deal. There remains a little sharp pain on the right side and I am debating whether or not to demand a recount of the items, that were put into my abdomen during the surgery, to make sure they were all taken out at the end.

I will have to admit to some anxiety over the recent dust-up between our country and North Korea. When you have a madman in charge of a country with nuclear capability, and a U.S. President who takes offense at his threatening our country with a nuclear strike, there is the chance that WWIII might get underway. I cannot disagree with President Trump's rebeen the same, but one can only hope that our military has the capability to back up the President's line in the sand after years of a Democrat President systematically weakening our military.

The events in Charlottesville, VA over the weekend, resulting in the death of a 32-year-old woman, were truly horrifying. Also horrifying is the main stream media's portrayal of the anti-protest demonstrators as that instead of the radical left wing of the Democrat party that they are. No one of any sense whatsoever would support a demonstration in support of "White Supremacy" but the pendulum swings both ways in that no one of any sense whatsoever should support anti-facist demonstrators, whose mission clearly is to stop any form of disagreement with their ideology, otherwise known as fascism.

At some point, the hateful, violence-inducing rhetoric by the left has to stop, otherwise our country is going to be pushed to the brink of a second civil war -- something unthinkable.

I spent many late evening hours, during the last half of July and early August, sitting on the front porch listening for the first katydid call of the year. It was not until the night of August 4 that I finally heard one. However, my hearing is nowhere close to being as keen as it was just a few years ago, which means I might have had one talking up a storm under the swing before then and simply didn't hear it.

A fellow with much better hearing than yours truly, who lives down on Lake Cumberland, near Somerset, claims he heard the first one on July 26 and has boldly posted on the internet that Pulaski County can expect its first frost on October 24. If my hearing is any good, we shouldn't get a frost on Charlie Brown Road, here in Paint Lick, until November 10!

For those of you who don't know what I'm talking about, I grew up being told that the first frost in autumn would occur 90 days after the first katydid started calling. Katydids are relatively large, light green insects that look like someone tried to make a grasshopper and really messed up even though they got the legs right. They usually don't start "calling" until after dark when they make an impressive loud sound by rubbing the upper portions of their wings together. If you have a bit of imagination the squeaking noise sounds like they are saying "kady-did, katy'did, katydid" over and over and over

Dear Journal,

The Four-Leaf Clover
Each morning when I walk my Sheltie, I keep my eyes focused on the white clover in my yard, scouting for one with four leaves. I desperately want to find just one of these plants. In all of my many years, which are advancing rapidly, I have yet to find my first specimen of a four-leaf clover.

My mother (Bee) was blessed with an uncanny ability to spot them herself—and she didn't even have to be up close! She could just be standing in the yard, chatting with someone, and ever so easily just walk a few steps and pick one up. I never knew anyone who could find four-leaf clover like Bee could.

Keep in mind, the chances of discovering a single four-leaf piece of clover are one in ten thousand. Those odds meant nothing to Bee. When she located one, she carefully spread the tiny leaves and placed it between the pages of one of her books. As an avid reader, she had a rather large collection of books. Bee would tuck her treasure away, only to discover it once again when she re-read one of her cherished volumes. The pages of those texts were filled with her flat, preserved clover leaves.

In 1620, John Melton wrote, "If a man walking in the fields find any four-leaved grass, he shall in a small while after find some good thing." Even though the four-leaf clover is usually associated with good luck, that was most assuredly not my mother's reason for her constant search. Bee certainly did not adhere to the idea of "good luck." Nevertheless, she loved to locate these rare plants.

I have memories of being a small boy and hearing the well-known voice of Arthur Godfrey singing "I'm Looking Over a Four Leaf Clover" coming from the radio in Bee's kitchen. That song reached the number 13 spot on the Hit Parade in the year 1948. Bee would sing along:

I'm looking over a four-leaf clover

That I overlooked before First is the sunshine, the second is rain,

Third is the roses that bloom in the lane.

There's no need explaining The one remaining is somebody I adore.

Even to this day, I can still see my mother causally walking in our yard looking for her special clover plants. It was a habit that she continued throughout her life. I think it was a challenge for her, and she was the best at her hobby. When she passed

It seems like there's a conspiracy. No, not the on e where the left wing media quotes 100 Trump critics and 1 Trump supporter to make them appear to present both sides. Not that

No, not the one where politicians are removing American Historical Monuments and statues because it offends someone, just to get a few more votes. Not that one.

No, not the one where Black Lives Matter and Black Educational Television (BET) are award winning, recognized organizations, but White Lives Matter and White Educational Television is racist. Not that one.

I mean the one where business owners and manufacturers keep an eye on what I like, and then discontinue it.

It seems that throughout my life, when I found something I really liked, it was soon gone with no explanation.

One of my favorite places to eat was Taylor's in Richmond. The fries were so greasy that ketchup wouldn't stick to them and you had to balance the catsup on the fry as you lifted it to your mouth.

As you ate the burger, you had to keep flipping it over because if you kept it in the same direction, the grease would soak whichever bun was on the bottom.

The tomatoes were thick and juicy and the lettuce was crisp and cold.

Then one day I went there and the people there asked me if I was filing for divorce. It had become some government building or something.

Taylor's was gone. (insert sad face here).

So there was a steak house I liked in Kingston. A good old fashioned steak house where you didn't get dressed up to go there. You just went and ordered a steak and they brought it to you in a plate with the edges of the steak hanging over the sides because it was so large.

Suddenly, before I knew it, the building became a flea market thing. I enjoy the flea market. It's a nice one. But where did my steak house go?

My favorite candy bar of all time was called "Side Kick". It was two pieces in the wrapper like the Mounds candy bar is. Except, it was chocolate over some crunchy peanut butter.

I gave banjo lessons at Curriers Music World for quite some time and between lessons I walked to the store and got a Side Kick candy bar or two every evening. It was delicious.

One day, the store was out of them. I nearly panicked but thought they would restock. They never did. I never saw another Side Kick candy bar. I can't even find it on the internet to order some.

Did someone figure out they caused a disease and stopped making them? Did the FDA ban them from existence? I have no idea. I just can't get one.

One of my favorites got returned and I am going to think it's because of my complaining. Applebee's had a Bourbon Street Steak that I loved better than butter (and that's saying a lot).

I got it every weekend for several years. I never got tired of it.

Then one day I went into Applebee's and the decor seemed a little different. I

Frankfort Update...

By Jonathon Shell State Representative Drug Scourge Demands Further Attention

Appala chia, as well is the state and nation at arge, are facng an epitemic like no other: opioid addiction. So nuch so that President Trump ecently officially declared he opioid epidemic to be a national emergency.

It is welcome news that his issue is finally being aken seriously, on all levels of government. Prescription irugs are ravaging our comnunities, and every single overdose is a stain on the fabic of our society. This truly s a national crisis, and one hat has hit all corners of our country, including people of ill ages and all incomes.

The rate at which generaions are becoming addicted s alarming. Even worse, adtiction to harmful substances s taking a large toll on one of the most vulnerable classes of our society: infants. According to JAMA Pediatrics, for every 1,000 newborns in Kentucky, 15 are born adticted. Drug overdoses are also the leading cause of death for Americans under 50, with opioids like heroin and fentanyl being the primary drivers of drug over-

This crisis, which has hit all types of communities, has not gone unnoticed. Every time you open the newspaper, there are stories about a deadly overdose, or about some sort of crime that was committed because of drugs. In the face of so much chaos, the drug scourge has also not gone unnoticed policymakers.

Some serious steps have been taken to help combat this crisis in Frankfort, as well as by our federal delegation in Washington D.C. We passed legislation in the House this past session to limit the supply of addictive prescription drugs that are not medically necessary, as well as to improve the state's prescription drug monitoring system and stiffen penalties for drug traffickers. Governor Bevin signed all of these measures into law. The federal government also authorized $1 billion in funds for opioid abuse treatment and prevention near the end of last year, and we finally have leaders in our

was a "Von-" (sometimes this was dropped by some families and denoted a royal line according to Ancestry.com) Slagle, Grandpa grew up on a farm and had little if any formal education. When he was just a young man, probably in his early teens, his mother died. His father, James, a Confederate, soon remarried a woman who had some children of her own. Grandpa had four sisters from the union with the 'Von' Slagle.

As the months passed, he found himself being treated poorly by his stepmother and her children. I don't know about how the girls were treated. If they were treated poorly, they weren't in a position to leave as young ladies of that era didn't leave home until they married. Evidently, his father tolerated this. Grandpa soon found homelife had become unbearable, so he went out into the world to find his own way early in life...

He found himself boarding with a professor at the University of Tennessee in Knoxville. In exchange for food and shelter, he kept the professor's greenhouse and did chores around the house for the family. The professor had an extensive library that Grandpa had access to. Over the years, Grandpa grew into manhood, and over the years, the professor tutored Grandpa. He learned to read and write. He read the classics, poetry; he was taught science and high mathematics, and all about history and civilizations. He had a keen mind for learning and could quote long passages of poetry and quotes from the classic pieces of literature all from memory. The professor wrote Grandpa a "diploma" explaining that he had been personally taught by him and had the equivalent of a college edu-

One day, Grandpa decided to go out into the world again to make his own way in life. He was probably in his twenties by now, finding work with the American Association, a British investment group, and began a "white-collar" job making pretty good money for that era. He rarely went back home as it only caused bad memories to surface, and of couse, his step-family wanted money, too. They weren't a bit too ashamed to ask either. His father died and he went to the funeral. As far as I know, that was the last time Grandpa went home. He lost touch with all of his four sisters, too, never seeing them again.

He grew to be successful and one of the most intelligent men of his time. He traveled frequently on business, and when my grandma was about five, and being the oldest, he often took her along. This would have been about 1907. My grandma often told me when I was about five years old, "I rode on the train and Dad and I stayed at the finest hotels. I still remember the fine dining rooms and food. He always hired one of the maids to help me with my bathing, dressing, and combing my thick, long dark hair to be put in braids." She "took after" her father. She attended Cumberland College staying in Johnson Hall and studied Latin and had a mind for math. She became what would be known as a secretary or legal secretary etc. today. She married my Grandpa Norton and never used a great deal of her learning. But that is another story.

nation's Capital who are taking an active role in this fight. But we have monumental challenges on this issue ahead of us, leaving much to tackle.

It's easy to realize the burden that drug addiction places on children and families. Broken homes and neglected children are direct results of this epidemic-but there are other far-reaching consequences stemming from drug abuse.

While the true promise of America has always centered around finding a good job to support your family, the American Dream has been threatened by the drug epidemic. Many of our citizens are simply unemployable now due to the inability to pass a drug test. This leaves more people dependent on government services instead of working, and keeps business owners from being able to maintain a strong and healthy workforce.

This is a major reason why I have pushed so far for an essential skills curriculum in our schools, which would educate our young people about the importance of remaining drug free, as well as knowing what all being a Steak, with new, red potatoes." It's back apparently. Man, Many other things I have liked have disappeared over the years. I could go on for ever listing things I liked that you just can't get anymore. I see one coming now. I like Pepsi in a 12 ounce can like I've been drinking for 35 years. But more and more often I am going to stores to find they don't have them. All they have is Pepsi in that new big, tall can. I hate that big, tall can. It doesn't fit my stockpile of can cozies that I have spent years collecting. It's so tall, the Pepsi is hot and flat by the time I drink it all. And it's so tall that everytime I reach to my end table I knock it over. But the unstable, overkill new can must make more profit somehow because everyday I find less and less stores carrying my standard, original, 12 ounce can of Pepsi. Oh well, move with the times I suppose...and hope newspapers and banjos are never discontinued.

"Points East"

There are so many of them calling right now, in our neck of the woods, that it's difficult to distinguish, just one, from the virtual chorus of hundreds that are looking for love in the fields around my house. But all I have to do is turn on the porch light and I'll usually have one or more within ten feet of where I'm sitting in just a matter of minutes.

Katydids come in a host of shapes and sizes. In fact there are upwards of 6,000 species. I know, for sure, that at least half a dozen of the one's I've seen do not make the "katydid" call but sound almost exactly like crickets. The harbingers of frost are significantly more elongated than most other species. I had a couple one night last week that looked like pale-green quarter coins with legs and wings. I watched both of them for several minutes and the sounds they made was very much like that of a cicada/common locust.

Another one, at least 3 inches long and an inch tall was perched on the porch railing was making the traditional "katydid" call as fast as its little wing shoulders could rub across its back.

If you have a computer, google katydid. There are numerous websites where you can hear them make their sounds and watch them while they make it. If you don't have a computer, just step outside, after dark, anytime between now and frost with a flashlight and listen. Chances are very good that a katydid is calling within a few feet of where you're standing, especially if there is any shrubbery nearby. But be advised that they are masters at camouflage and will look like part of the leaf or grass they are calling from. On the other hand, if I can do it, almost anybody should be able to find a katydid this time of year.

In the meantime, my brother, Andy helped me plant 4 hoops of red-eye fall beans, the equivalent of about 40 feet of straight row, on August 3. I told him I still hadn't heard a katydid so the beans had plenty time to make a crop before frost. They only need about 60 to 65 days.

That was before I'd found the post from Pulaski County that predicted frost on October 24. Even if that fellow is correct, our late beans should safe. If the first katydid I heard is correct, I should be able to save enough redeye seeds for everybody in the family.

Loretta, on the other hand, says she is not going to be buying any country pork to season the beans until she sees a bucket full ready to break sitting on the kitchen table.

working adult entails. Continuing to create new economic opportunities is also vital to creating a better quality of life for all.

In addition to working to prevent opioid addiction from further taking root in our communities, I will also continue to push for safe and effective forms of drug treatment. Many of our counties are already taking the lead on this, implementing innovative new techniques that will go far in tackling this epidemic. I highly value the work and considerations of our local officials when crafting policy for the entire state.

In order for me to continue working to solve difficult issues, it is imperative that I receive feedback from you. Please do not hesitate to contact me via email at Jonathan.Shell@lrc.ky.gov, or by phone to my office at 1-800-372-7181 with any questions or concerns.

KSP Post 11 receives eight additional Troopers

Kentucky State Police Post 11, London is pleased to welcome 8 additional Troopers to the area.

The Kentucky State Police Academy presented diplomas to 41 new Troopers at ceremonies held in Frankfort on Friday, August 11. Their addition to the force brings the agency's strength to a total of 866 troopers serving the citizens of the Common-

The eight Troopers assigned to Post 11 are: Shawn M. Boroviak, London; Keegan T. Bray, Somerset; Adam Cole Dodson, Monticello; Jordan P. Hopkins, London; Matthew Kyle Parmley, Monticello; Travis Lane Thompson, Somerset; Seath A. Whiles, Somerset; and Logan T. Wolfe, Manchester.

Troopers Boroviak, Wolfe, and Hopkins will be assigned to Clay County. Troopers Thompson, Dodson and Parmley will be assigned to Pulaski County. Trooper Whiles will be assigned to Rockcastle County. Trooper Bray will be assigned to McCreary County. Assignments are made based on manpower and calls for assistance needs. The assignment of these additional Troopers increase KSP Post 11's strength to 60 serving the (7) counties of Clay, Laurel, Rockcastle, Whitley, Pulaski, McCreary and Wayne.

For Jackson Energy

Eclipse will not impact service

Next week's solar eclipse will not impact electric service for Jackson Energy's more than 51,000 members. While national media reports the event will sideline 9,000 MW of solar farms nationwide, affecting 7 miltion homes in other parts of the country, the August 21 event will not interrupt service from Jackson Energy's ower supplier, East Kenzucky Power.

"Although the eclipse will reduce solar power generation nationwide, our cooperative system has diverse generating capacity of more than 3,100 megawatts of ower produced from natual gas, coal, hydro and landfill gas," says Jackson Energy President & CEO Carol ball gym, horseback riding. It's an opportunity for a new audience and it's time for Rockcastle County to get ahead of these trends.'

Medley was referring to the fact that 17 states in the country have already made public roads available to recreational vehicles.

Davidson, who is constructing minimal cabins on property he owns on 1955 below Fish Point Park, said that John Hamilton was putting in 20 full-hook-up campsites on Lower River Road and planning 10 more at a minimum to accommodate overflow campers from Wildcat ATV in Laurel County. Davidson has asked the Rockcastle County Fiscal Court to pass an ordinance, like the one passed by the City of Evarts in Eastern Kentucky, opening county and state roads to the ve-

Medley suggested that a permit-system could be put in place which would guarantee that recreational vehicles using the roads would have liability insurance.

Kentucky Power and other Kentucky Touchstone Energy cooperatives are also members of PJM, the world's largest centrally dispatched grid. PJM coordinates more than 176,000 MW of electric generation in 13 states and the District of Columbia, and provides Jackson Energy and other cooperatives with competitively priced power, access to reserve capacity and a diverse power supply.

PJM expects a temporary reduction in solar power during the eclipse, and will use its reserves for replacement generation.

"The eclipse is not expected to have any impact on our ability to continue providing affordable, reliable power to our members on August 21," Wright says.

told television news crews that the road was black with the misty rain and it was dark because of the time of morning. Drivers said it was very difficult to see and they understand why the truck couldn't see the pedestrian crossing the roadway.

Public Affairs Officer Stephen Douglas, with the Kentucky State Police Vehicle Enforcement (KSPVE), said the weather may have played a part in the accident but he suspects the victim was impared by alcohol. "It's not normal behavior to be walking on I-75 at 4 a.m," said Douglas.

Several agencies responded to the scene, including local sheriff's department, Mount Vernon Police Department, Mount Vernon Fire Department, EMS and and Kentucky State Police.

KSPVE Officers said the body of Ginenez is scheduled for an autopsy to determine alcohol levels and officer Toby Curry and Officer David Burton are continuing the investigation.

cruisers donated to the City of Brodhead at no cost from the Lincoln County Sheriff's De-

"This will help the city in several ways," said Burton.. "We only have one cruiser but now if something happens to it, we will have a back up.'

The council members also agreed that there are hopes, and perhaps even plans, to hire a second Brodhead police office in the future once some other projects in the city have been completed and the issue has been discussed in a public forum.

The councilmembers have also attacked the issue of a Nuisance Ordinance in the city and had originally planned to hold the first reading of that ordinance during Monday's meet-

However, Burton said during the work session last week to finalize the ordinance for first reading, members found a paragraph that was not appropriate and decided to wait until next month after city attorneys change the wording of that issue.

"The way the original ordinance was worded, it was basically illegal to park your own car in your own driveway for a certain period of time," said Burton. "We are having that changed to only include vehicles that pose some threat or danger to the public."

In final action, resident Don Cash told the council that he recently finished a new home in Brodhead and he thanked the city for all the help during the process. "The city worked with me in every way possible and made the process smooth for me. I wanted to thank you for that," Cash said.

Bill Cash also attended the meeting and asked the council for help cleaning up Sycamore Street in Brodhead. He said the signs were unreadable because of overgrown weeds and bushes.

Councilmembers agreed to visit the site and help in any way the city can.

At the end of the meeting, Mayor Cash asked for a closed session with council members.

The Solution Is Near By Howard Coop

The old house of my childhood, torn down and replaced in the fourteenth year of my life, wasn't much. It was built on an inadequate foundation with rough lumber and covered with hand-riven oak boards. It shook when the north wind blew, and it leaked when a hard rain came down. In the winter, it was heated with a fireplace.

In 1916, Edgar A. Guest wrote, "It takes a heap o' livin' in a house t' make it home, " and that transformation is possible. Going east on Hegira Road, the old house of my childhood was the first house on the north side of the road. But it was more than a house; it was a home, for there was "a heap o' livin' in" it. Daniel A Poling said it so well, "It is not where you live but how that matters."

The how in that old house mattered much, for that how turned it into a home. In it, there was a lot of loving care, and from our earliest days, we were taught to assume responsibility and, without complaining, do our share of the work. When we did something right, we were genuinely encouraged, and when we did something wrong, we were disciplined with loving care. At every meal, we were taught to bow our heads, and, whether there was little or much on the table, give thanks for what we had. Every day, without exception, ended the same way. We sat, winter and summer, silently in front of the fireplace while our father read a chapter from the Bible, and we knelt in front of our chairs while he fervently prayed for our heavenly Father to bless us and guide us in our daily activities.

While we talk about the widespread problem of juvenile delinquency and attempt to deal with it, it just may be that the solution is near: "a heap o' livin' in a house" that will make it a home where children are giving responsibility and lovingly taught by good parents what is right and what is wrong.

No admittance signs, orange flagging and orange paint will mark the off-lim-

Visitors to Rockcastle River WMA will find it primarily forested. About 30 percent of the area is open land. Several ponds ranging from half an acre to almost 6 acres are scattered across the property. Daily creel limits on the WMA are 10 bluegill or other sunfish, four catfish, 15 crappie and one bass longer than 15 inches.

Rockcastle River WMA is not listed in the current Kentucky Hunting and Trapping Guide. It will be open for hunting under statewide regulations for squirrel and other game with some exceptions. The modern gun deer season will be open for two consecutive days starting the second Saturday in November. The area will be closed for all muzzleloader deer, grouse and bobwhite quail

Meadow Creek WMA in Wayne County is another new offering in the Southeast Region. The property is off KY 1619 about 20 minutes northeast of Monticello. The terrain is flat and much of the property is planted with new trees but there are mature woods along the property's western edge.

Meadow Creek WMA is open for hunting under statewide regulations except the early muzzleloader deer and modern gun deer season are closed.

Mamaw's

Kitchen

By Regina Poynter Hoskins

I made this for church pot luck several times while in California.

Brother LeCroix, a visiting preacher, and his wife happened to be there one day. As I had come to expect, several people did ask for the recipe. One of them was Mrs. LeCroix. She said they loved the taste, had never tasted anything like it, and wanted to make it for Thanksgiving.

Two Thanksgivings later got a nice note from Mrs. LeCroix thanking me for therecipe. She said she had decided not to make the casserole two Thanksgivings in a row, but her son had insisted he would not come to dinner unless she made it. She concluded that she had been fixing the dish for every occasion since I had given her the recipe, and she would probably have to fix it from now on. I wasn't sure if she was upset with me for getting that tradition started or really thanking me.

Stable Minds help those who help others

Guests utilize horse power

By: Mike French

The Stable Minds organization visited Rockcastle County Tuesday, August 15 at the invitation of retired KSP trooper Gary Lane, who owns the horse farm Windswept Stables on Hereford Road Brodhead.

Lane was familiar with the group and the benefits they can provide to officials, from all walks of life who deal with drug abusers, so he invited them to use his stables for events.

Many events have been held each year at the stables and the next event is planned for September 2 and 3 and will focus on veterans and PTSD..

"I have found that it's the one that you really want to get away from and avoid, that you should give the most attention to and work with," Lane told the large crowd who gathered in his barn for the seminar from across the country.

The seminar uses horses and their emotions and actions to help drug abusers find a way to let go of their problem and calmly face the

"Locking people up isn't the answer," said Lane. "We have to get through to them and these horses can provide an avenue for us to do that.' Lisa Krystosek, JD, LPC, and her partner Kelly Ramey, EAI, WiT, Equine Program Director, stood in front of the crowd of guests providing them with tools to address the problems they face in dealing with drug abusers in their profession.

The event is officially referred to as a training seminar for officials for atrisk children.

However, Krystosek said anyone who deals with an addict, or is an addict themselves, is welcome to come to the seminars and utilize the horses as a way to "get in touch with one's real emotions. Horses cannot lie and they don't care what you are addicted to and they can't speak English," she said. "They use nothing but body language to communicate with a human."

Lane agreed. "Horses live in the moment. He evaluates the situation around him, reacts to it and then simply goes back to grazing and ignores what just happened," he said.

Lane also said this is part of the goal with drug addicts. "The abuser simply can't let go. These horses can show them how to let go and move on," he said.

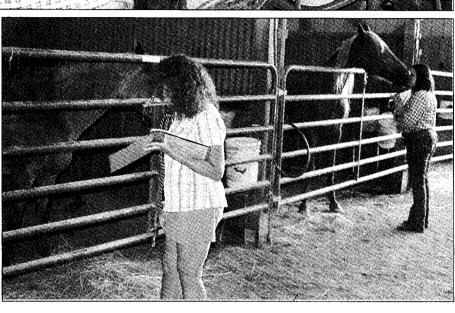

According to Lane, over 300 people have been involved in the seminars held on his farm but the Stable Minds group travels across the country giving the seminar and has helped nearly a thousand people, according to Krystosek.

Ramey said all walks of life from homeless people to attorneys, and drug abusers to parents are welcome at their seminars and each of

A large crowd showed up for the Stable Minds seminar at the farm of retired Kentucky State Police trooper Gary Lane. The organization travels across the county using horses as a means to help those who deal with drug addicted youth and treat the sickness by letting the horses help the addicted person to get in touch with their emotions. Lane has had many similar seminars on his farm in Rockcastle County. Shown at right, some of the guests met the horses and were told to write their emotions

Commissioner Quarles helps deliver freezers to food pantries in five counties including Rockcastle

Agriculture Commissioner Ryan Quarles brought a little hope to Eastern Kentucky's less fortunate on Monday when he helped deliver freezers donated by Farm Credit Mid-America and CoBank to food pantries in five counties.

"Thanks to the generosity of these agricultural lenders, food pantries throughout the Commonwealth will be able to accept donations of meats and other frozen foods," Commissioner Quarles said. "This will enable the food pantries to help their clients get the proteins they need for a healthy, balanced diet. This is a giant step in the mission of the Kentucky Hunger Initiative to seek solutions to chronic food insecurity in Kentucky."

"The gift from Farm Credit Mid-America and CoBank thanks to Commissioner Quarles' Hunger Initiative will substantially increase the ability of Kentucky's food bank network to distribute donated agricultural products," said Tamara Sandberg, executive director of the Kentucky Association of Food Banks. "We are grateful for this investment in the fight against hunger in Kentucky.'

"As organizations dedicated to supporting agriculture, we believe it's important to make the hard work of farmers more visible to the people who benefit," said Mark Barker, senior vice president of Farm Credit Mid-America. "We appreciate the opportunity to join in the Hunger Initiative and are pleased to donate freezers to food pantries across the state so that they can accept and store more frozen protein raised by Kentucky farmers."

Farm Credit Mid-America and CoBank recently announced that they would provide more than 120 chest freezers for Kentucky food pantries. The rollout on Monday started with a joint news conference of the Kentucky Department of Agriculture and the Kentucky Association of Food Banks in Winchester and continued with deliveries to food pantries in Mount Vernon, Somerset, London, Corbin, and Manchester.

The Hunger Initiative is a first-of-its-kind effort in Kentucky that Commissioner Quarles launched in the spring of 2016 to bring together farmers, charitable organizations, faith groups, community leaders, and government entities to look for ways to reduce hunger in Kentucky. During a factfinding tour of the state in the summer of 2016, Commissioner Quarles found that many food pantries lacked the cold storage they needed to accept meats from local farmers.

Map the Meal Gap 2017, an annual study by Feeding America, revealed that one in every six Kentuckians - including one in five children – was food insecure in 2015, meaning that consistent access to adequate food is limited by a lack of money and other resources at times during the year.

For more information about the Hunger Initiative and the Hunger Task Force, go to kyagr.com/hunger.

Local businesses, community encouraged to attend

KY Chamber VP will speak with Rockcastle Chamber

The Rockcastle County Chamber of Commerce is meeting on Tuesday, August 29 at noon at Limestone Grille.

Kentucky Chamber of Commerce Vice-President of Public Affairs, Ashli Watts, will be the featured speaker. Watts will discuss the Kentucky Chamber's efforts to improve the business climate in the state.

The meeting will also include a presentation honoring the leadership of Representative Jonathan Shell during the 2017 regular session of the General Assembly. Shell, who represents Rockcastle County, is the state's first Republican House Majority Leader.

Chamber members and the public are encouraged to attend. For more information, contact Steve McKinney at stevemc1964@gmail.com.

Agriculture Commissioner Ryan Quarles, Mt. Vernon Utility Clerk Jill Medley, Mt. Vernon Project Manager/Mayor's Asst. Crystal Rush, Rockcastle County Judge Executive Doug Bishop, CAP Program Manager Carolyn Lindsey, Tamara Sandberg, executive director of the Kentucky Association of Food Banks, and Mike Halligan, CEO of God's Pantry Food Bank, delivered a chest freezer to Grateful Bread Food Pantry on Monday. The freezer, donated by Farm Credit Mid-America and CoBank, will enable the food pantry to accept donations of meats to distribute to its clients. (Kentucky Department of Agriculture photo)

Pride Spring Cleanup very successful this year

By James Renner Rockcastle County Solid Waste Coordinator

I would like to take this opportunity to thank all the groups and individuals that participated in the 2017 Rockcastle County Pride Spring Cleanup. Once again, we had a very successful Spring Cleanup!

There was a total of 399 volunteers (including inmate labor) that worked a total of 459 hours to clean up 1601 bags of trash, and 317 tires over a span of 166.71 miles along 71 different stretches of roadside. These numbers do not include the totals from the Cities of Brodhead, Livingston or Mt. Vernon.

Congratulations on an outstanding Spring Cleanup! The following groups and individuals participated: University of Notre Dame; Concerned Citizens of Cleft Rock: Edna Renner, Stephanie Sizemore, and Bella Cromer; Brindle Ridge Baptist Church: Mike Sowder, Judy Sowder, Ron Roberts, Kim Ramsey, TJ Ramsey, Larry Bullock, Melanie Childress, Marcia Coffey, Zach Coffey, Makayla Coffey, and Alfred McNew; Freedom Baptist Church: Tabitha Bullock, Debbie Bullock, Danny Bullock, L.A. McKinney, Carolyn McKinney, C.S. Lesha Cromer, Jackson Cromer, Doug Singleton, Jeannie Singleton, David Sargent, Kim Sargent, Andrew Sargent, and Caleb Sargent; Grace Baptist Church: Melvin Harrison, Dwayne McKinney, Reva McKinney, Sarah McKinney, Sawyer Williamson, Chris Miller, and Zack Miller; Cecil McKinney JR Family: Cecil McKinney Jr, Adam McKinney, and Andrew McKinney; All-American Club/Nami Cumberland River: Wayne Bullock, Cassie Kendrick, and Christin Hardesty; Concerned Citizens of Pongo: Regina Munguia, Nathan Munguia, Jonathan Munguia, Erika Munguia, Victoria Munguia, Joey Smith. Kaylan Bullock, Zoey Holland, Stephanie Sizemore, Bella Cromer, and Edna Renner; Friends of Crooked Creek: Christie Green, Charlie McGuire, Darrell

Hager, and Ira Hager. Photos were not available for all groups and/or indi-those have attended the events.

Crowd members spoke during the event and told those in the seminar, "I have learned a lot through horses" and "I have found that energy flows through the horse and this is a way to help us help those who need us."

Officials said, guests don't actually ride the horses, instead they communicate with the animal and feel their emotions. Guests were asked to go to three horses on the site and not touch them and not speak to other guests and write what they feel as they look each horse in the eye.

Organizers say this helps humans feel their own emotions and to see where their problems may be coming

"The goals of the organization is to increase emotional resilience, explore grounding and centering, conflict resolution and to read the messages behind emotions. Horse-powered learning can create and maintain healthy relationships", says organization's website. Anyone is invited to attend the seminars and anyone interested in the equine experience.

For more information about the seminars or their future events, visit www.stableminds.org. or email a counselor at CounselorLisa@stableminds.org.

ATTENTION

Mount Vernon Waterworks Customers

Mount Vernon Fire Department along with Mount Vernon Waterworks personnel will be conducting the testing and flushing of fire hydrants beginning Monday, August 21st and lasting through Wednesday, August 23rd. This process could cause water to be slightly discolored.

During this time, water customers should allow water to run for a short period of time to make sure no discoloration is present before cooking or doing laundry.

While crews are out opening hydrants, large amounts of water could possibly be present in some roadways. Please use caution in these areas.

Thank you for your cooperation.

If you should have any questions, please call:
