Environmental Response Teams from Frankfort were on the scene on Mullins Station Road after this tractor/ trailer overturned Tuesday and spilled ammonium nitrate into Roundstone Creek. No one was injured during the accident and officials say the road slipped due to recent heavy rains causing the truck to overturn. Ecotech USA is testing the creek waters along with the Department of Fish and Wildlife since an unknown amount of the toxic chemical spilled into the creek. The creek can be seen at right, directly below the truck. Response teams are filtering the water until they can determine how much of the chemical may have leaked into the creek.

I hit the occasional period when I contemplate writing this column and every thing I say seems so trite, or controversial, that I decide it's just not worth the effort. The last few weeks has been one of those peri-

I have instead spent my spare time reading, watching TV, managing a little work at the Signal and just generally vegetating.

It has been an uptick in my enjoyment of watching TV that I once again managed to get a spark of interest in the Reds. I started watching them this summer, in the midst of their surprising win streak, and that was very entertaining. I'm a fair weather fan, I'll admit, and their dismal performance against the Pirates this past weekend just about turned me off them. But, I decided to tune into Monday night's game, which seemed destined to be a repeat of their weekend performance. However, in the bottom of the ninth, with two out, they managed to score two runs to beat the Cardinals 2-1. That has given me the desire to watch them again so that strand of entertainment is still open to me.

Let's face it, summer TV fare is terrible, if you don't like reality shows, and I don't, the pickings are pretty slim. I have even been forced to turn to Amazon Prime and recently binge watched "Doc Martin' which I find entertaining.

The main character is terse, rude, judgmental and has a touch of OCD, all qualities that aren't particularly lovable but somehow it works for me -- birds of a feather?

In fact, the only reason I ever look forward to Winter is the quality of TV shows improves somewhat and I get to close my pool.

It seems that, as I age, summers get shorter and

Pant Stretchers

The older I get, the more I am amazed at the cycles that make up parts of my life. For example, I almost exclusively wore blue jeans for the first 20 years of my life, and I recently realized that I now wear jeans almost every day. The only difference (except for the size) is the brand.

When I was a teenager, we all wore Levi jeans, which we had "pegged" tightly around our legs. I can see my mother (Bee) sitting at her sewing machine making sure that the circumference of my jean cuffs were only 13 inches around. I have no idea who decided that 13 inches was the magic number for teen trends. I suppose we read it somewhere.

Another distinct memory that I have concerning my Levi's is how my mother dried them. She worked very hard making sure her boys had what they needed to wear. When I was about twelve-years-old, Bee purchased a couple pairs of pant stretchers. I believe they came from the Okay, since sitting down in front of the keyboard and computer monitor exactly two hours ago, I have been to the front porch to watch a sunrise that must have happened far above the clouds because I saw nothing bright enough to even hint at sunlight. All I know is that it gradually became light enough to see a drizzling mist and reveal the fact that it's going to be too muddy in the garden to pick the row of Roma beans that, to me, taste slightly better than having no beans at all. Loretta loves them so I'm bound to grow them in the spirit of maintaining domestic harmony.

I'm anxious to get them out of the garden only because I want to try planting a late crop of heirloom "Little Ettes" from seed I saved from the first planting we harvested earlier this month in the same space the Romas currently occupy. If I can pull it off, it will be the first time I've grown two crops of the same variety using seed I saved from the first one. If it works, it will be worth far

Aces Over

By: Mike French

Most of my life has revolved around music. I know a lot of people who say music is important to them, but they usually mean they listen to music a lot. In my own life, music has been the center of what I do and how I paid the bills for many years.

While I traveled the country as the harmony singer with Vern Gosdin, our album went gold (meaning it sold over a million copies) and I spent every waking moment either playing music, rehearsing music, learning music, or writing songs.

For many years, before and after Vern, I spent all my time at Renfro Valley recording the Sunday Morning Gatherin' and performing on every live show they had.

I have spent well over half of my waking hours, in my life, either playing, singing or working somehow in the music industry.

I have been blessed to play with the two biggest bands in Bluegrass music and the top country band in the nation (in those days).

I've had the blessing of playing for 80,000 people at a time, traveling around on Silver Eagle buses with catered meals, rubbing elbows and chatting with people like Randy Travis, Don Williams, Dolly Pardon, Charlie Daniels and many more. Visa ili w snoomo

F ve also had that backroom experience of plays ing in many local bands and have been blessed to play the biggest venues in the country.

I have felt very proud when my mother and father sat in their living room and watched their son perform on Hee Haw and on the Grand Old Opry among many other television programs.

My musical career reached goals that I only imagined as a lad, as I slumbered at night and envisioned myself playing for thousands of people.

I do all that bragging just to point out, I'm no one important at all. If I hadn't told you about all that, you probably never would have known.

I'm certainly no unique musician or singer. I know a hundred people within 20 miles of where I sit right now, who can outplay and outsing me all day long.

I simply happened to be in the right place at the right time in order to reach those heights and goals that I dreamed of as a child.

Because of some of those achievements, musicians that I meet sometimes have heard of the "big time" playing I have done and expect me to be summer. The weather has been, for the most part, temperate and I only caught myself once complaining of the heat. I immediately apologized to the person I was talking to because I swear every winter that I'll never complain about summer again and, besides, I threatened to throat punch son-in-law Spencer the first time I heard him complain about the heat.

I haven't spent a lot of time watching the news, it's depressing, and I am still having a hard time coping with the amount of vitriol, disgusting remarks and just plain meanness directed at our President.

Would I like for him to be a little more tactful? Yes. Would I like for him to be a little more polished in his interactions with the press and public in general? Yes. But, since I felt that he was by far the lesser of two evils, I voted for him and will do so again if he chooses to run for re-election because I sense in him a love for this country that seemed to be lacking in our past President.

The mid-term elections should be interesting, particularly the Barr-McGrath race for representative in Fayette Co. and surrounding areas.

I think this election nationwide will go a long way toward deciding the future of our country.

Of course, I'm hoping that Republicans keep control of the senate and house, particularly since the Democrats' platform appears to be taking back the tax cuts, doing away with ICE and open borders, just for starters. And, of course, they have vowed to impeach President Trump if they gain control of the house, exactly on what charges I am not sure -maybe the fact that they just don't like him?

Anyway, it's an exciting and somewhat scary time to be alive and I'm glad I'm still here to witness it.

"Memories"

Montgomery Ward's catalog.

Those stretchers were used to insert inside the legs of my jeans after they came out of the washing machine. Keep in mind, this was a wringer-washer. Bee carefully placed the metal stretchers into the exact center of both legs and then hung them on the outside clothesline. When dry, my jeans appeared to have been ironed with a perfect crease down each 13-inch leg. The memory of that style varies greatly compared with the jeans I wear today.

I remember one time when Bee had hung my jeans with pant stretchers on her clothes line, and they froze solid. She brought them in the den, near the Warm Morning stove, and literally propped them up against the wall to thaw. That was a strange and funny sight. I guess that is why I remember it so well.

I also recall that we had to be careful when playing outside in the yard near Bee's clothesline. On a windy day, you could get "judochopped" by a flailing pant leg. Anyone who remembers seeing them hanging on a clothesline can tell you that it could make for quite a vision. If you were not familiar with stretchers, you could be surprised at the sight. Watching a woman carrying the pants back to the house before removing the stretchers could also make for a strange-looking spectacle.

My mother used those pant stretchers during the late 1950s and early 1960s. When I went away to college in 1962, I don't remember seeing them after that. I also don't remember being concerned about it. Broken-in jeans became acceptable.

Today, even as a senior citizen, I continue to wear jeans almost every day. About the only difference is that I now purchase "relaxed fit" Lee jeans. I think it would be complete torture to try to get my old legs into those 13-inch pants. I don't know that it could be done. But I will admit, now that would be a sight to see.

this super human player. I've actually heard young, beginning players at a jam session say things like "Oh, that's Mike French. Teach me some stuff on guitar" etc.

But then, I always get to see these young whipper snappers pick up a guitar and do things I didn't know was even possible.

I'll admit that sometimes I feel proud of all I have done and though I realize I am certainly nothing special, I feel all big-headed and cocky when I'm around these kids starting out.

But I have to be careful about bragging because I find that usually after I relate my big story about life on the road with Vern Gosdin and of the musical adventures I have had, it is inevitable that someone will say, "uhmmm, and who is Vern Gosdin again."

It seems all the accomplishments that I maybe should be proud of, weren't even of my actual doing. I didn't accomplish anything because I'm 'just that good.' Nor did I deserve it from a lifetime of practice and desire because I know hundreds who have practiced harder and desired it even more.

The truth is, all that I have done in music was pure luck. When I walk down the street, no one knows who I am or what I have done.

All my achievements haven't created world peace and I have $67 in the bank. (Of course my truck insurance is overdue).

I bring this up because I was at my dad's grave recently, pulling some weeds and cleaning his stone, and I began looking at the hundreds of stones there.

Names I have never heard were all around me. Dates showing when this person passed away and I never knew anything about it. This person's death was a huge event to many people. But to the rest of the world, it's just another stone and only a few even know it is there.

I stood at one stone in particular for a long time because it had a little guitar carved into the granite. I began to wonder what he must have experienced in his life.

He passed 20 years ago and I stopped and considered what he may have accomplished with that little guitar.

Was he proud of his music? Was his family proud of him? Did he reach childhood goals? Was he 'just that good?'

I have come to the conclusion that no matter what we accomplish in our life, we all end up in the same size hole. No one is better or worse than any other. The next time you notice a stone, stop and give some thought to the accomplishments this person may have had.

It's not just a stone. It's a lifetime of achievements. Imagine the many things this person must have been proud of. The adventures he experienced. The disappointments and successes, the surprises, the wins, the losses, the laughter, the tears.

I suppose when a stranger walks by my stone, they will have no idea of how lucky and blessed I was.

But now that you have read this article, if you happen by a stone some day that says Mike French, maybe you can think to yourself, 'that was one blessed fellow.'

more than the effort it took. "Little Ettes", a gift of seed from my friend, Cindy Williams in Blackey, Kentucky, are, by far, the best tasting new bean discovery I've made in well over 15 years. If the second crop works, I may even have a few seeds to share.

Okay, I am hopelessly past the Letcher County Mountain Eagle deadline but maybe Ben Gish and Sam Adams will still find room for the column because they like to see their names in the paper. In the meantime I have made a run to the post office to mail a package that may or not make it to its intended destination, 130 miles away, before the seeds inside it sprout. It contained fewer than 200 very small seed beans and cost $3.50 cents in the cheapest postage available. If I'd known this before daylight, I'd have had plenty to write about. And, sometime soon, I intend to do just that.

I've also taken another coffee break on the front porch and attempted to read my cat's mind in case she was pondering some earth shaking matter worth writing about. I'm pretty sure, however, that the only thing most cats ever think about is how stupid everything else is. And that seems somewhat ironic coming from a critter that will spend hours chasing a little red dot projected from a laser light pen when they aren't sleeping or sitting around looking stoic.

And just when it feels like my brain may be rising from the dead, I notice that my allotted word count is rapidly approaching the magic number 700. Just remember that if you ever do wake up brain dead, it does not necessarily mean that the rest of your carcass is not still among the living.

And that seems somewhat ironic coming from a critter that will spend hours chasing a little red dot projected from a laser light pen when they aren't sleeping or sitting around looking stoic. And just when it feels like my brain may be rising from the dead, I notice that my allotted word count is rapidly approaching the magic number 700. Just remember that if you ever do wake up brain dead, it does not necessarily mean that the rest of your carcass is not still among the living.

Yards to Paradise

By Max Phelps Give Your Front Entry a

Spruce-Up If the front of your house happens to look a bit bleak, tired, or lacks imagination and appeal, perhaps there are some simple and inexpensive things you could do to change that up a little. Some of them you probably can do yourself, some will require the advice of a professional. There are major projects that you can hire experts for, but most of the following ideas you probably can probably draw up and perform yourself.

A boulder, or even several, can be a quick way to change the appearance of a yard. They should be situated and maybe planted in such a way as to look like they were always there, and you built or designed around them. (A couple big rocks dropped off the tailgate of a pickup truck to keep traffic off the lawn; well, will probably look just like what it actually was

A wall, not too tall, can give a bit of privacy nears the front entry, yet not block the view. Walls of natural stone are ideal, either masonry work, or dry stacked. But tumbled concrete units or faux stone adhered to concrete blocks may be more suitable for the do-it-yourself project.

Add some raised beds. or just dump a load of dirt and rake it out to create some undulations in a flat boring yard. Using dirt excavated from where you are building a new walk, a new patio, or installing a water feature can also be the source of dirt for raised areas. I once made a winding path through a backyard in my hometown. I took the sod that I cut with a sod cutting machine to make the space for the new walk, and flipped that grass upside down and stacked the pieces to create mounded areas in the lawn. Then I installed small pebbles for the walk. In a few weeks, the piled grass had died and decayed, making earthworm-rich planting soil. The homeowner then planted flowers and mulched these beds.

A small patio or a small wooden deck can instantly transform an entry. An arbor or pergola can be constructed such that you walk under it as you leave the house, or your guests approach the entryway.

A stone or brick or some other masonry or acrylic cover-up of a chipping or cracked sidewalk or drive-way can go a long way in giving your place a quick facelift.

And landscaping with plants is perhaps the simplest of all ideas. Yet, it is botched more often than not. The inexperienced person may buy plants that look great individually, but end up not combining for a good look when planted together. Sometimes going to a nursery and showing them a picture of your yard, or sending a friend or a landscaper an email requesting ideas can work out ok. But, beware, nurseries want to sell plants-the more expensive ones they make the most profit on especially. (Also, if you want your yard to look distinguished and not like others nearby, you probably don't want to go seek out the same person who provided the design for the neigh-

Adding color, including the color green which is especially useful in winter, to your front entry is usually a good idea. Just don't do it the way the next door neighbor did theirs if you want your front entry to look special.

Container gardening is a easy solution to a nondescript front entry. Placing a large pretty pot carefully planted with flowers, some trailing vines and at least one upright plant, can be one of the simplest ways of working a quick miracle. A pair or a grouping of attractive containers well-planted with pretties will be a instant winner. By changing out the plants when some begin to look ratty you can keep container gardens looking fresh and pleasing all summer.

A new or freshly repainted front door, door trim, or even new paint on the whole house (even painting a brick house) can be a way to make an impression in short order.

Don't forget the simplest ideas of all for a quick fix for curb appeal. Trim up overgrown trees and shrubs, and spread some fresh mulch.

Any one of these ideas could give your place the spruce-up your entry needs. Several in combination can really make yours the sharpest home entry in your community.

teers ready to help. The Rockcastle Association of Kentucky Baptists is ready and willing.

"We don't want any child to head off to school without supplies," said Katheryn Pope, self-funded Kentucky Missionary. "Thanks to a lot of dedicated volunteers, they won't have to,"

The association is holding their third annual backto-school event this Saturday, July 28, at the Community Outreach Center in Brodhead from 6-8 p.m.

And it is not just a place to pick up school supplies, it will also be a celebration and community event.

"We are going to have a great time and we invite everyone to come out and join us and while they are there. they can pick up supplies for this year," Pope said. 1941

This particular event is a little different than many events that may help with school supplies or children's needs. The book of rules, that describe eligibility, qualifications and limitations required to participate, is blank. No one needs to call, or set up an appointment, or fill out an application. The only requirement to qualify or be eligible for the free supplies is that you show up.

Pope quietly smiles as she describes the event in a soft voice. "Anyone, of any age, at any school in the county, is welcome to join us," she said. "Come on out. We are going to grill hot dogs have games and live music and a great time."

Throughout the year, the association collects funds and materials to help with the program. "It's by word of mouth that people find out about us," Pope said. "And these wonderful people give of their time and money to make this happen for children and it's open to

In fact, last year over 100 local students attended the event and received supplies of all kinds with over 50 volunteers present to help distribute everything, including the hot dogs.

This year, the volunteers are separating supplies into different bags, depending on the age of the student. "We have supplies for elementary, middle school and high school students separated out because they need some different things in high school than in elementary school," she said Pope is visibly excited about the event and says the volunteers are also. "We have such a wonderful group of volunteers and people who donate, all just to help these children. We helped over 100 last year and we expect more this vear. And, if you are putting this story in the newspaper, I'm going to go get a lot more supplies," she said. Though Pope is not one to take credit for such programs that give to those in need, she is a huge part of this and other projects in the county. However, if you ask her how such volunteers are organized and how such programs and projects are scheduled and how supplies are maintained and gathered and separated and where materials such as grills and plates come from, she has a simple answer.

"If you really want to know who is behind all of this...it's God."

"Bussell"

Bussell, a 1999 graduate of Eastern Kentucky University, says he is excited about the new position. "I am eager to get started," he said. "It's exciting and we are working hard making sure everything is ready for the start of school on August 15."

Bussell says he has an approach in mind in his new position and it's the same approach he uses in any school setting. "I have a student's first mentality," he said. According to Bussell, everything he does, and any decisions made at the school, will be based on that Bussell says he is at a special advantage by leaving the elementary school and going to the high school. "The best part is, though I will greatly miss the students at MVES, I'll have them again someday when they come to RCHS.'

Bussell said he will also miss the staff at MVES. "There is such a wonderful staff at MVES. I had a great experience there and greatly enjoyed working with everyone at the school. At the same time I am looking forward to working with everyone at the high school. They too are a dedicated group of people.'

Superintendent David Pensol said he is pleased that Bussell was interested in the position. "A high performing school must have a high performing principal. Mr. Bussell brings experience, strong leadership skills and exceptional instructional knowledge to his new role. Being only days away from the beginning of the 2018-19 school year, we are looking forward to the guidance and positive impact Mr. Bussell will have on RCHS students as well as our entire community."

Pennington is a 15 year veteran of the Kentucky State Police and is assigned to Post 11 in London which serves Rockcastle County.

He is the son of Linda Murphy of Berea and Jerry Pennington of McKee.

Also, Rockcastle resident KSP Detective Beniamin S. Graves was named the top Detective at Post 11 and was a nominee for Detective of the Year.

'You stand between us and chaos," said Hampton. "You are the embodiment of what law enforcement does," Tillery also commented to the officers present. "Kentucky is blessed to have so many selfless, courageous professionals among the ranks of the KSP," he said. "These award recipients have shown incredible strength and commitment to the safety of others."

Pennington said the award really highlights the high level of training and supervision at KSP. but the mayor and the council are committed to fixing the problem," said

After meeting with experts in the field many times, and performing dozens of tests and trying several different approaches, officials determined the best way to correct the problem three months ago and they knew it was going to be expen-

Even though the water plant is aged, and in some areas outdated, Bryant said the city was determined to find a way to provide the best water possible. "All of our customers deserve good, clean water and we were going to find a way to do it. We've made certain our water has always been safe but we were determined to deal with the taste and odor problem."

So, after years of trial and error and expert advice, the solution was found earlier this year. That solution involves several new and improved filtration systems that deal with the particular algae that affected the local water supply. And part of that solution involves building a large basin at the lake that will cause the water to be in contact with carbon for 90 minutes rather then the 5 minutes it is cure a num, carbon fiber, erafted rently. O pout artist vost active to

This basin however, is going to cost between $800,000 and $1.2 million. A project that is not in the city budget. In fact, the entire water and sewer budget is only $2.26 million. That would mean nearly half of the entire budget used to build one basin.

Then, three weeks ago, Mayor Bryant heard of a possible federal grant called the PRIDE (COE) 531 Grant (Personal Responsibility in a Desirable Environment).

Bryant and Bray discussed the grant for the first time on June 28. They crafted the grant application, submitted it to authorities and in less than a month received notice that a $750,000 grant had been approved.

"What a relief this is to all of us," said Bray. "It's the fastest I have ever seen a grant approved and we are going to immediately go after grants to cover the remaining costs of the project. Our community is growing quickly and it is a big relief to have this water issue settled so we can focus more on other issues in our community."

The grant is a 75/25 matching grant and there is a $75,000 use fee so only $675,000 will actually be coming to Mount Vernon but the city council has plans to deal with the cost deficit.

They voted unanimously to give the mayor the authority to sign, submit and seek other grants to cover the costs.

"If the project cost is a million dollars, then we will have to come up with the remaining $325,000," said Bray.

City officials will research other grants available and believe they can obtain grants from state and federal to cover most, if not all, the cost of the project.

nitrate, a semi-toxic chemical to the touch, is also used in mixtures for explosives. In its raw form, the chemical is used to fertilize the ground.

The chemical is considered poisonous and the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife was called to the scene to investigate possible damage to the local wildlife. Officials also called in Ecotech USA due to the chemical spill, according to local Emergency Management Director David Colson.

Ecotech placed filter systems into the water to keep the chemical from spreading and state environmental response teams are investigating possible damage that may have occurred.

Kentucky State Police at the scene told reporters any damage that may have been caused by the chemical could last for months.

Colson said there is currently no evidence that the creek, or wildlife or ground around the area, has been damaged, but, as a precaution, officials will treat the area as contaminated until they know for certain.

The driver of the truck was not injured and no other vehicles were involved.

Crews are expected to begin repairs to the damaged road once the area is determined safe by environmentalists.

Stick it to dangerous currents with a wading staff

Those of us who wade rocky streams for smallmouth or tailwaters for trout sometimes bite off more than we can chew.

An eddy on the other side of the stream looks inviting and the more you stare at it, the more you want to cast there. The only problem is a waistdeep run with strong current lies between you and the enticing water.

You begin crossing the stream, but about half way, the current begins to push hard against your legs. You barely lift your foot and the current pushes it out from your body, nearly causing a fall. You look back and realize it will be just as hard to get back to where you started, as it will be to get to the other side of the stream.

You are stuck.

A wading staff will save your bacon in this situation. Made from alumiwood or a hickory stick, a wading staff gives anglers an extra balance point that can prevent a fall in sticky situations.

"I use my wading staff for balance whenever I wade," said Dr. Larry Kelley of Richmond, retired assistant chair of nursing at Eastern Kentucky University. "It's kept me from falling many times."

Kelley also uses his wading staff, made from a cedar branch, to probe the water in front of him for depth. Clear water often looks shallower than it actually is and misjudgment can lead to a hat-floating, wader-filling mishap.

"This is another area where my wading staff is invaluable," Kelley said. "It keeps me from making mistakes concerning the depth of a hole."

This safety feature proves handy when wading cold tailwaters, like the Cumberland River below Wolf Creek Dam. The water temperatures in the Lake Cumberland tailwater run cold enough to induce hypothermia. Stepping off a shelf into water over your head quickly fills a set of waders. Waders filled with water become a dangerous weight in moving, cold water.

This is the reason wading anglers must always use a snug wading belt when wearing waders. The belt prevents the legs of the waders from quickly filling with water in the event of a fall.

You can use a wading staff to test the bottom composition before venturing into a hole. Muddy areas of the stream bottom often look like hardpacked sand, but are actually a gooey muck that can pull off your wading boots. Wading staffs are also invaluable in negotiating steep stream banks.

Some debate exists on whether wood, carbon fiber or aluminum make the best wading staff.

"I prefer a wooden staff because it floats behind me and out of the way when fishing," Kelley said. "I can also quickly get the staff in my hand when I need it."

You can make a wooden wading staff cheaply by finding a dense hickory or cedar branch stick about shoulder height. Rub in several coats of tung oil and let it

Slide a piece of hypalon foam replacement handle for walking canes over the thickest end of the stick and glue if necessary. Drill a hole through the stick just above the handle. Work a large key ring though the hole to attach a lanyard system. Kelley uses a magnetic net release used by fly anglers to attach his wading staff to his vest via a carabiner.

Epoxy a rubber cane tip on the other end and you are in business. Some anglers epoxy a wrap of lead tape used on golf clubs just above the rubber protector to help weigh down the wooden staff in current.

Wood does not make fish spooking noises when contacting the stream bottom and possesses character that manufactured wading staffs lack.

However, a wooden staff does not collapse. Some anglers use collapsible ski poles or hiking staffs for wading staffs, but their thin bottom ends vibrate wildly in current.

The collapsible hiking staffs that use a twisting lock mechanism often freeze up after getting wet several times. The parts inside these staffs oxidize and all the king's money and all the king's men can't get it separated again. This is incredibly frustrating if they lock up during a wading trip.

If you decide to use one of these for a wading staff, find one with a lever to lock and unlock the collapsible parts.

Some wading staffs use a piece of elastic cord in the middle to hold the pieces together, similar to a collapsible tent pole. These staffs fold up into a sheath for convenience. If these staffs get stuck in rocks on the bottom, they separate when pulled on, rendering them useless.

Higher-end trekking poles used for hiking have the elastic cord, but also a locking mechanism to keep them together during use. These make good wading staffs, but start at about $100.

Predictable water levels and hungry fish make late summer through late fall the best time to wade stream. A wading staff makes wade fishing safer and more efficient.

Photographer Willie Hiatt returns home for two events

Join the Rockcastle Arts Association in welcoming Willie Hiatt for a photography workshop as well as a talk about photography in New York City, Peru, and Kentucky, on Saturday, August 4th.

Mr. Hiatt is a Rockcastle native, street photographer and Associate Professor of Latin American History at Long Island University, CW Post Campus. Mr. Hiatt is also the author of the books In Search of an Inca: Identity and Utopia in the Andes (New Approaches to the Americas), and The Rarified Air of the Modern: Airplanes and Technological Modernity in the Andes.

Both the talk and the workshop will be held in the former Hiatt's 5&10 space on Main Street in Mount Vernon, a business Mr. Hiatt's family owned and operated for decades, and which now houses the Rockcastle Arts Association Arts Space.

The photography workshop will be held from 2-4 p.m. on August 4th. This workshop is open to anyone interested in learning more about photography, and is appropriate for both camera and iPhone users. This workshop will focus on composition. The cost for the workshop is $10, payable at the door.

The second separate event, the talk by Mr. Hiatt, will be held from 7-8 p.m. that evening. Mr. Hiatt will discuss travels and photography at this event, which is free, open to the public, and will be followed by a recep-

For the second year in a row, Shakespeare will be in the Valley. Last summer, after unfore-

mance space, Avery Bradshaw and the Kentucky Music Hall of Fame opened their doors and stage to this wayward troupe of actors. This summer, they are grateful to be back at the Kentucky Music Hall of Fame Amphitheatre, and have brought with them a military-themed, contemporary retelling of Shakespeare's "Othello." Local ROTC cadets from RCHS have volunteered their time, talents, and will be featured in this production. The doors will open at 7:30 p.m., and the show will begin around 8 p.m. Tickets are FREE. But donations are welcome. Tell your friends. Tell your family. Load up the old station wagon and come on a blueberry workshop Saturday, July 21. Jeff and Kim Essig, instructors, came from Oakland, KY to share their expertise on raising a blueberry crop. Among one of the facts is the peak harvest time for picking is 5 a.m. In the early morning the natural sugars are the most available. Any fruit picked at this time is going to have a better flavor, as long as it is well ripened. In this case the early riser gets the sweetest fruits. The workshop was a collaborative project of Kentucky State University, UK, and Rockcastle County. In between sessions the participants enjoyed local pork and wild blackberry cobbler. Getting together is enhanced with a brilliant platter. Let's plan on making community matter. If you would like to have a group learn how to raise blueberries or buy the things you need to be successful contact: bluegrassblueberries.com or 1-270-432-5836. Pictured at Healing Ground Farm are Eric Hackworth, Tony Silvernail, Linda Bokros, Mike Lewis, Ryan Creech, Jeff Essig, Caleb Thompkins, and Larry Thompkins.

Longest Day of Play set for July 31st

The annual Longest Day of Play has been re-scheduled for Tuesday, July 31st from 5:30 to 8 p.m. The event will once again be hosted by the Rockcastle Healthy Community Coa-

Activities will be held at RCMS and will include educational booths, inflatables, demonstrations and many other activities for children and adults of all ages.

The Fit Family Run is also planned. This provides an opportunity for parents and children to participate in events together while helping raise money for several causes in the area. Those present may also register to win a free bicycle.

During the charity race, participants will walk or run around the track as many times as possible in 30 minutes and the Rockcastle Regional Hospital will donate for every lap completed to a charity chosen at registration. As in years past, the registration fee will be a canned goods product that will be donated to the Grateful Bread Food Pantry.

The Longest Day of Play is an opportunity for the community to come together for an afternoon of health awareness and physical activity. The Kentucky Blood Center Bloodmobile will be holding a blood drive during the event.

For more information about the event, contact Taylor Readnower at treadnower@soahec.org or call (606) 256-0950 or Melinda Osborne at (606) 256-2242 ext, 118 melindaj.osborne@ky.gov.

Do You Want To Have A Good Life?

1 Peter 3:10-11—He who would love life and see good days, let him refrain, his tongue from evil, and his lips from speaking guile, let him turn away from evil and do good, let him seek peace and pursue it. If we do these things in life, our life will be full of good days and we will love our life so much more. Because life is more about what we do than what we posses or what happens to Sound simple? It is but we have to have our priorities in line with the almighty creator. Eph. 5:29—Let no corrupt communication proceed out of your mouth. Dirty jokes, bad language, speaking without thinking because we can, this is not a man who really loves life. Neither does he love his fellow man. James 4:11—Do not speak evil of one another, brethren. Brothers and sisters in Christ should be the most moral, loving, kind people on planet earth. We should do our very best not to engage or accuse anyone of anything unless we have the whole truth, because lies, deceit and broken promises have destroyed so many churches, families and homes.

Proverbs 4: 14&15—Do not enter the path of the wicked do not walk in the path of evil, avoid it, turn away from it and pass on. Do you know how much better your life will be, filled with more peaceful days and more good times, if we are not drawn into situations like this.

Evil, no matter how little takes away something from your life every day, it destroys you as long as you remain connected to it. Psalms 37:3—trust in the Lord and do good. By trusting in God and allowing God to guide your life, you will see a change in your life for the better.

James 1:19—Let every man be swift to hear and slow to speak. If we would all learn to listen as good as we speak, just think how much better the conversation would be, we just might hear what each other are saying, wouldn't that be great?

Proverbs 26:20—Where there is no wood the fire goes out, and where there is no talebearer, strife ceases. Let us be sure we are not the one who is packing rumors, spreading things we should not, tales that are not true, because these tales cause strife in the church. They cause folks not to trust one another, many folks have even stopped coming to church over things that were said about them that was false, let us make sure the fire goes out with us.

Farm Reconstitutions

When changes in farm ownership or operation take place, a farm reconstitution is necessary. The reconstitution—or recon—is the process of combining or dividing farms or tracts of land based on the farming operation.

To be effective for the current Fiscal Year (FY), farm combinations and farm divisions must be requested by August 1 for farms subject to the Agriculture Risk Coverage (ARC) and Price Loss Coverage (PLC) program. A reconstitution is considered to be requested when all: of the required signatures are on FSA-155; other applicable documentation, such as proof of ownership, is submitted.

Total Conservation Reserve Program (CRP) and non-ARC/PLC farms may be reconstituted at any time.

The following are the different methods used when doing a farm recon:

Estate Method — the division of bases, allotments and quotas for a parent farm among heirs in settling an estate:

Designation of Landowner Method - may be used when (1) part of a farm is sold or ownership is transferred; (2) an entire farm is sold to two or more persons; (3) farm ownership is transferred to two or more persons; (4) part of a tract is sold or ownership is transferred; (5) a tract is sold to two or more persons; or (6) tract ownership is transferred to two or more persons. In order to use this method the land sold must have been owned for at least three years, or a waiver granted, and the buyer and seller must sign a Memorandum of Understanding; DCP Cropland Method - the division of bases in the same proportion that the DCP cropland for each resulting tract relates to the DCP cropland on the parent tract; Default Method the division of bases for a parent farm with each tract maintaining the bases attributed to the tract level when the reconstitution is initiated in the system.

Eligibility for Nominations for the 2018 County
Committee Elections

The U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) Farm Service Agency (FSA) county committees are a critical component of the day-to-day operations of FSA and allow grassroots input and local administration of federal farm programs.

Committees are comprised of locally elected agricultural producers responsible for the fair and equitable administration of FSA farm programs in their counties. Committee members are accountable to the Secretary of Agriculture. If elected, members become part of a local decision making and farm program delivery process.

A county committee is composed of three to 11 elected members from local administrative areas (LAA). Each member serves a threeyear term. To be eligible for nomination and hold office as a committee member or alternate, a person must fulfill each of the following requirements: (1) be a producer with an interest in farming or ranching operations, (2) participate or cooperate in any FSA program provided for by law, (3) be a U.S. citizen, (4) be of legal voting age, (5) meet the basic eligibility requirements, and (6) reside in the county or multi-county jurisdiction in which they will be serving.

All nomination forms for the 2018 election must be postmarked or received in the local USDA service center by Aug. 1, 2018. For more information on FSA county committee elections and appointments, refer to the FSA fact sheet: Eligibility to Vote and Hold Office as a COC Member available online at: who require accommodations to attend or participate in the COC meeting should contact Warden Alexander at (606) 256-2525 or Federal Relay Service at 1-800-877-8339 three days prior to the meeting date.
