American Roses for England.

Rosegrower L. M. Moe, of Madison, N.

J., has solved the problem of packing American beauties. Some time ago he had an order for a huge bunch of this variety from a lady who wished to take them to Davope with her. In packing stems into a potato, and on their agviral after the voyage they were found to be an fresh an ids-they were just taken from, the greenhouse. In a letter the lady said the flowers kept well for a number of days after her arrival, and their beauty was greatly admired by her English friends.
