MISS MAUD HANSEL THE VICTIM OF TYPHOID. Maud Hinsel is dead. That sounds very strange to our ears as we repeat it o'er and o'er, and think. A short time ago she was young, fresh, and full of life; but now she is dead. Is it true? Did we say that Maud was dead? Yes, that is the change that had, and that is the fact at rest. Yes Maud is at rest. Will miss her, did you ask? How can we forget—forget! Does the sun forget to keep its appointed time, or the stars to shine in the bright orb? Nay, verily! Neither does images, stamped upon our hearts by those we love perish so easily. No we shall not forget Maud. She was a noble, true girl, and we delight to pay tribute to her memory.

Several hundred landowners of Harland county have effected an organization to resist the claims of the Davis estate to 86,000 acres of the most valuable coal and timber lands in the county, and one of the greatest legal fights in the history of this region is promised. A meeting was held Saturday and plans were made to conduct a mutual fight against the Davis estate. The Davys people are claiming the land under old patents issued to Smith, Ledford and Eldimore in 1840. Suit for possession of the land have been pending for some time and have now been transferred to the United States District Court of Eastern Kentucky. Offices are maintained by the Davis estate at several points in South-eastern Kentucky, where agents have been endeavoring for some time past to reach amicable adjustments with the native defendants in the suit. A great many compromises have been effected. Until lately there has been no complaint against the methods employed by the outside claimants of the land, but now the natives have become incensed over treatment employed by the Davis estate, and this led to the organization of their forces.

The M. V. of A. will meet in their hall over Fish's store next Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock. A full attendance requested.

A special from Livingston dated the 31st inst.—Every train that passes through here is being stopped and searched and 150 men heavily armed are scouring the surrounding country for a negro who attempted to assault Ella Daugherty at tunnel No. 8 near Hazel Patch on L. & N. railroad yesterday. Miss Daugherty is the seventeen-year-old daughter of Joe Daugherty, a railroad contractor, who is doing work near the tunnel. She left the house to go to the spring, which is 150 yards away, and got some water. On the way and when she was near the mouth of the tunnel the negro attacked her and beat her almost into insensibility. Her screams attracted the attention of the men in the house, who ran to her rescue. The negro who is known to be employed in the tunnel, escaped.

"Delays Have Dangerous Ends"

We have all heard of times when a delayed train rushed out of a station where there was no telegraph office, with the engineer thinking he could reach the next station and get on a sidetrack to let the "Fast Mail" go by. Every thing moved along smoothly until they reached the fatal curve, here the engineer saw the headlight of the "Fast Mail" within a few feet of his own engine. It was too late then to reverse the throttle. Too late for every thing but the awful crash.

Compare the two trains to your feet. Maybe you have been wearing shoes that have been miring your feet and hesitate about buying another kind, saying, "I will try another pair of these shoes." And you go ahead and get the same kind; with the same hurt, wear them a few days, yet they hurt your feet all the time. Each day you think they are being broken in. It's your feet that are being broken in, not your shoes. You are nearing the the curve. You wear them awhile and they hurt you more and more. You start for a long walk and the "crash" comes, your feet have gone the limit. They have been wrecked.

Then you have tried the new kind. But why wait until your feet are ruined before you try the new kind? Don't you think it is worth your while to save your feet by wearing "Star Brand" shoes, the shoes that do not hurt? Come and see,

Anyone wanting Singer sewing machine needles and attachments will find same at J. Fish's store Mt. Vernon. Look at our sample machine on exhibition in his store. P. P. SINGLETON. Salesman and collector of Singer Machine Co.

It seems that it would be advisable for the board of town trustees to see that their ordinances are properly drawn and in shape before trying to enforce them. We stand for a corporation, always have and always will but we want to see it properly run. We stand for a stock law but we only stand for that kind of a stock law which deals with every citizen alike.

THE CHARMING WOMAN is not necessarily one of perfect form and features. Many a plain woman who could never serve as an artists' model, possesses those rare qualities that all the world admires—restless, clear eyes, smooth skin and that springiness of step and action that accompany good health.
