Gov. Wilson, in advising the people to study politics, does not mean politics in its popular sense...

There was never a proposition put forth that was worthy of support but there were found some who opposed it. In this turnpike movement, which is the greatest undertaking for the benefit of Rockcastle that has ever been put forward...

J. F. PINNYACKER, executive secretary of the American Road Congress, estimates that if 20 per cent of the public highways of the country were improved not less than $200,000,000 would be saved in the cost of hauling the crops of 1912.

The Courier Journal says possibly the equator has melted its rivets and slid northward as far as Kentucky?

Where is Armageddon located? Behind the Jordan or at the head of Salt river navigation?

CZAR OF THE CUMBERLANDS

From People's Home Journal. A story founded first in Mt. Vernon and will be interesting reading to those who remember well the school days of Mt. Vernon at the time Miss Sisson was a teacher in our schools.

No doubt at first Miss Hardin found it necessary to rule with a rod of iron. While she had the look charge of the school in the Cumberland it had fallen into chaos or rather pandemonium. It took sudden heroic measures to bring these untamed mountain youths into a state of discipline.

Miss Hardin brought the charge wrought it by pure force of will. In less than a week every pupil walked lightly on tiptoes, trembled at a piercing look from her eyes, and jumped at her word of command.

But even then there must have been some attractive points in Miss Hardin, some force besides discipline and fear; for the school increased steadily from twenty pupils to two hundred.

But power, like ambition, feeds upon itself and is likely to come to grief. Miss Hardin had grown so rigidly tyrannical long after each rule was necessary, that both in the school and the nearby town she was called the Czar of the Cumberland.

A tireless worker herself, she drove her pupils and teachers mercilessly. She was so strict in the denunciation of failure, and seldom praised. She allowed no excuse, and tolerated no whining. A soldier woman of Napoleon woman of wonderful ability.

But her love of power carried her too far. A sense of being began to rankle in her pupils and teachers. Her reign for failure often burned the very students who had done the best work. The pupils tiptoed into the chapel every morning and slipped into their seats while she stood rigidly on the platform with the book of Proverbs before her. See always read from the Proverbs the passages that praised wisdom, extolled diligence and denounced fools. The bravest boy or girl in school trembled when she pointed to the craven submission smoldered indignation at her injustice, threatening an upheaval that might wreck the really marvelous results she had accomplished.

One morning she closed the book of Proverbs and turned to the school to impress the lesson by some personal example of failure.

This time she chose little Ivan Hitchcock, whose duty it was to sweep the chapel. Ivan had not put in appearance that morning. "He may be sick," Miss Hardin repeated, in her smooth, sarcastic tones. "Does that excuse him? If you have a duty to perform, it is your business to perform it, whether you are sick or well. If you can't you should certainly send some one to explain your absence."

"Carry this into your business life. Suppose some man, the station agent for a railroad, were to shut up the telegraph office and not go back nor send any word the next morning. Would the company get on in their employ? Of course not."

"Water!" Miss Hardin pointed to a boy who rose, frightened and embarrassed—did you ever hear of a railroad taking such a man back?"

"Yes, Miss Hardin." "Miss Hardin."

"Leta May, did you?" "Leta May, who had only seen one telegraph operator in her life, assured her that she never had."

"No, Miss Hardin." "Mille George Graham, the greatest clerk in Chester Landou; a straight, clear-faced, dark-eyed boy, the brightest gentiest, most chivalrous boy in school."

"Chester Landou, did such a thing ever come under your observation?"

"Chester sound, as pale as death, his lips working."

GOOD ROADS REPORTS.

Well we continue to get words of encouragement from all parts of the county in relation to the Good Roads move and men from all over the county who claim dear old Rockcastle as their home. Judge R. G. Williams, of Covington, Ky., Judge Burgess Bethram, of Somerset, Ky., both send their best wishes for the great move that is being made by the progressive people of Rockcastle and say they are for it both soul and body. The telephone line running into head quarters are kept busy wanting to get information on the great question of working the roads by taxation. Every body seems to want to know whether if the resolution passes they will have to continue working the roads by the militia. We say NO most emphatically. The resolution denotes the idea of making the roads by the militia.

THE PURPOSE OF THE KINDERGARTEN.

In speaking of Kindergarten we often think of it only as a place where the little child spends a few hours playing and has sight of the real value and purpose. The early years of childhood ought to be so spent that they will prove of value to him as he grows older and this the kindergarten endeavors to help him do. In the child he all the elements which we interpret and feed properly will some day be developed and will be of service to him. The love of play is the predominant interest of the child his play is his work, just as a man's business is his work, so it is in this that the kindergarten builds.

Because of his love to play no coercion is needed to bring the child to kindergarten. He is fascinated by the games, books, the sand table, and is charmed by the skill he acquires in the use of the scissors and paper. All of these things are not given merely for entertainment but with a purpose that at times, one can scarcely discern any at all. It is all for the development of the child. To make him useful and helpful to the group, to teach him to think truly so that he will speak truthfully, to make him sympathetic, self-foremost and always self-reliant. He is taught absolute obedience in order that he may grow up to be a law-abiding citizen.

In the kindergarten a love for good music is fostered, he learns to appreciate the value of the beautiful and what is of great importance wishes to do things in a thorough workmanship manner. With these influences during the tender years of childhood we can readily see that life is necessarily broadened and enriched at the start.

AN APPEAL TO THE LABORING MAN.

There comes a cry for better roads from every school district in the county, so what shall we do is the great question. Shall we continue to leave our work and ace upon our already tired shoulders the burden of the pick and shovel and so forth for what often times we need our daily earnings to stop the cry of hunger from a sick child lay behind such a patient mother? Is it just and right for such a man when he absolutely owns not a hoof of stock, nor a shelter for himself and little family to have to perform such tasks, when on the other hand it often times happens the man of wealth is sitting on his lounge of ease watching your poor labors as we go by to serve our time as it is often called by the men on the roads, and says to himself poor fellow he has a hard road to go. I am sometimes glad I am too old to work and just listen you never get too old nor too wealthy to pay your tax so why, oh why, my fellow laborers don't you see this like I do and we'll put the burden on the other hand to the men that are often both financially and physically to bear it. In short make the man pay for the roads who has the money, another thing did you ever stop and consider how much it costs us to put in our times in the road? If I did not work it myself it will cost me $1.50 per day or $3.00 six days work which would be enough to pay my tax for several years. Now fellow laborers look into the matter and see if I am not right, suppose our schools of today were kept up by the men of wealth it wouldn't be in a pretty fix if it worked at that like some do on the roads. The man that has the wealth is the man that pays the tax which keeps up the schools and why don't the same rule apply to our roads as school and roads go hand in hand and again I have been told by the sheriff that the Rail Road Company and the farm-hold to will pay something like half of all the taxes of the county. Now lets be smart enough to vote Oct. 26 1912 to sock our letters and put the burden on the shoulders that are able to bear it without a groan.

Yours for pikes, W. F. CRESS, Hansford, Ky.

Altho it is a foregone conclusion that Wilson will be elected we believe that Teddy and Teddy (the republican's Moses) both see defeat staring them in the face. But what is worrying us democrats is dividing up the spoils after Nov. 5th, as to the victor helping the spoils. So my dear friends the enemy that mean the republicans, dont worry you will have nothing to do but step down and out. We democrats are good hearted folks and our sympathy will go out to you all.—The last thing on program is a stock law which is being put on a great deal in the neck of the woods. Well, they put us in the eleventh district against our will and now they want to shoulder off a stock law on us. We guess the seven-year loan will be all right. Talk about a stock law in our country where the hills are steep that you have to plant your crop by shooting it into the ground with a double-barrel shot gun. We will tell you the kind of a stock law we want and one that will meet with the approval like this: that you can turn Pike and Lillout and they can bruise over the hills and out peaving on the mountain side and come home when they get ready. PIKE ROCKCASTLE.

A meeting unprecedented in warmth and enthusiasm was held Monday afternoon by advocates of the bond issue for turnpike building. On the call of chairman C. C. Davis for expression on the subject the responses were many, warm and to the point. One big hit was made when one of the speakers said "This is one great enterprise and undertaking in which, thank goodness, politics cuts no figure. Our county has dropped politics until the bond issue is put over on Saturday, Oct. 20th. In the meantime, Feddy, Woodrow and Bill will have to paddle their own canoes while our people are putting in motion and carrying thru the greatest undertaking and more interest and greater value to Rockcastle than any proposition ever launched within her borders during our history. Not even excepting the railroad." Everyone at the meeting were enthused and a good number made speeches of short talks encouraging the proposition. Among them were William Adams, Squire Armstrong, John J. Martin, Wm. H. Linville, G. S. Griffin, W. A. McKinney, H. C. Gentry, Dr. A. G. Lovell, E. L. Gentry, Col. Al Bently, C. L. Davis, A. B. Farnish, Hugh Miller, C. C. Williams and many others whose names we failed to get. Miss Rose McCord spoke from an educational standpoint showing an intimate connection between good roads and good schools. It was brought out that some of our finest highways are not in as good condition today as they were 25 years ago worked by militia and from $12000 to $15000 per year in addition to the labor is applied to road purposes yet many of the main thoroughfares are at times, during the winter months almost impassable. It is to overcome such conditions that this pie or bond issue is being now agitated. It was also shown that no poll tax will be added and the only taxation that can be legally levied on the $200 valuation of taxable property. The man owning no property pays none of the tax besides the militia duty of 8 days out of the year which now worries him, will be done away with after the pikes are built. The biggest portion, or nearly all the money for which these bonds are sold will be spent for labor and material along the proposed pikes.

Additional chairmen were appointed to assist in some of the precincts.

An organization of precinct chairmen was effected. All precincts have their chairman who will organize and hold meetings in every school house in the county at various times. These precinct chairmen will meet at court house Mt. Vernon, Saturday, 1st and 3rd Monday at 1 p.m. until the election is over on Saturday October, 30th to compare notes and devise means for successfully prosecuting the good work.

NOTICE:—There will be a Good Roads speaking in connection with the teachers meeting at Boling Spring school house on clear creek next Saturday Sept. 14, 11 o'clock. Atty. C. C. Williams and Judge Bethurum will endeavor to explain the Road Issue that is before us today let every body go and give these men a good hearing on this great cause.
