DIABETES

By Dr. R. G. Webb

Many of you read recently in the papers about the tragic aeroplane accident in Newfoundland in which Sir Frederick Banting was killed...

Insulin is the substance which has saved the lives of thousands of diabetics. Dr. Banting's discovery ranks among the great achievements of medical science.

Health conditions in this country have been steadily improving. Every one now has a better chance of living the biblical three score and ten years than in our fathers' day.

The stamping out of diphtheria and antitoxin are two well known examples.

Now with the lengthening of lifespan more of our people should know what to do about the diseases of middle and later life.

Diabetes is one of these diseases and that is the reason that I have chosen it as my subject for this week in the hopes that I may be able to help some one who has the disease, or help you to guard against it.

What is Diabetes? In your body directly behind your stomach is a large gland called the pancreas, which secretes a substance known as insulin.

The usual symptoms of diabetes are excessive thirst, frequent urination, hunger, especially for sweets, weakness and loss of weight.

How can you find whether or not you have diabetes? The chances are that your wife hasn't it, and that no one in your family has it, but it is a sufficiently important matter that each person, especially those from 35 years of age on, should find out for certain.

Just a word about insulin—Insulin is not a cure for diabetes, it is a treatment, a specific and effective treatment. If the pancreas does not make an adequate amount of insulin for you, you must buy it.

If the doctor finds that you are free from diabetes this will be a matter of great satisfaction both to you and to him. In addition, his advice and counsel during the examination will have been well worth the effort you have made.

Diabetes is most commonly found in persons from 40 years of age and over, though occasionally children also are stricken.

diabetes in the family. Wise persons and particularly relatives of diabetics keep weight under control.

(c) Since diabetics run in families the question is naturally asked: Should a diabetic marry? The answer is: "Yes, but he should marry into a non-diabetic family."

(4) Do diabetics live as long as other people? If diabetes is discovered in the early stages and the patient puts himself and stays under his physician's guidance, learns how to master the details of the treatment.

(5) What is the treatment for diabetes? The physician carries on his treatment along three fronts—diet, exercise, and insulin.

Our House of Worship The Church and the Church would get along lots better if every Christian would attend church regularly.

We need a word—a starting word. To call our members forth to go to God with hearts aflame.

To visit in the Masters name. To go and seek and find and claim the souls of men for God.

We need a word—a friendly word. To cause us up to know and flatter. To feel the scripture weight of care.

To make our conscience to flare. To know "his" turns to do and dare. We need a word.

We need a word—a word of strength and charm and might. A word for everyday and night.

We have a word—"tis Jesus, own." He calls in accents clear and true. "Lift up your eyes, white fields to see."

Again The Cry That Food Means Victory

As surely as during 1914-18, "food will win the war," according to nutrition workers cooperating with the Kentucky Nutrition Council for a national defense, headed by Dr. Statie Frickson of the University of Kentucky, home-economics department. This means that the diets of all Americans must be improved, food supplies established, food prices kept within reasonable bounds during the emergency, and food provided for Britain in the fight for democracy. During a national "diet clinic" at Washington, "experts in medicine, public health, social work, nutrition, agriculture, industry and government made plans for a wide-spread food for defense program. This will be extended to the states through the state committees, and through county committees soon to be appointed. The health, the morale and nerve-fiber of the people must be kept at high level, especially in times of unusual stress and demanding work. Rational nutrition findings, especially in the vitamin field, had shown the extent to which "people are what they eat."

Further specific suggestions soon will be issued by the Kentucky group.

Kentucky Responds To Call For More Foods For Defense

From the State College of Agriculture at Lexington comes a report that farmers throughout Kentucky are responding to the call for increased food production, issued by Charles B. Wickard, secretary of agriculture. The college's extension service sponsored food-for-defense meetings over the state, in order that farm men and women might know what their government is asking in the matter of more food. Representatives of the Farm Bureau, the Farm Security Administration, Vocational Agriculture, the public schools, churches, luncheon clubs, chambers of commerce and other agencies cooperated and pledged support in their program to insure an adequate food supply. In many instances farmers are exceeding the increase asked. Demand for "chicks indicates that poultry raising has leaped up 30 per cent. The milk supply will be increased by better feeding. Hogs will be fed to heavier weights, in order to have more meat and lard. Farm families generally have bigger gardens and will grow and preserve more food. This means that much of the commercially canned vegetables and fruits will be left for shipment aboard. The acreage of tomatoes for canneries will be doubled in Kentucky this season, and more beans will be grown for drying. As far as county agents and home demonstration agents can check, the farm people of Kentucky will meet every demand for more food, says the college's statement.

Earnings of railroad employees in 1941 averaged $1,900 or nearly double the amount received in 1914.

"Heaven," is an entirely different type from either "Silky" or "Danny." Monrell has the same complex personality which he finds so captivating. Curiously enough, in real life the actor is the very antithesis of his characters. He is a quiet, well-balanced young man, who enjoys farming, polo, and is popular with his large circle of friends. Every summer, when he can get away, he takes his wife, son and daughter to his old home near Beacon, New York, where he lives the life of a gentleman farmer. During the winter they make their home in Hollywood. In "Rage in Heaven" he is appearing for the first time with Ingrid Bergman, the young discoverer from Scandinavia, who arrived here recently.

The Garden

By John S. Gardner, Kentucky College of Agriculture

A GOOD GARDEN IS GOOD SENSE. As one of its commitments to extending help to the Britons, the United States Government has promised food. Now, the Nation is abundantly able to produce food for peacetime and in wartime, too, when only the support of our army in the making is involved, but with this extra need, some reorganization of the food producing facilities of the Nation is needed. It is here that individual home gardeners will help.

By their nature, can't and preserved foods lend themselves nicely to transshipment and to storing. For this reason, the great bulk of food for Britain will be canned; the canning industry is already meeting the call for greater production, and there is no question that Britain's needs are in no regard to our own munition makers and our city folk who can have no gardens.

But, a great many farmers and suburbanites who could have adequate gardens depend on commercial cially canned vegetables for their winter diet. Even normally, this should not be, for home canned vegetables are cheaper, than those purchased, even supposing that there is an emergency income enough to buy them, but even then "store vegetables" are sometimes bought at the expense of other winter needs, which of course is foolish.

Returning now to our theme of producing more food; it is apparent that every quart of home canned vegetables will contribute each its own part. Taken in the aggregate, that contribution becomes enormous, to make our army of home gardeners as formidable as the regular armed forces.

So, no matter how insignificant and humble the garden plot may appear to be, it develops on every gardener to get the utmost out of it. No row should be idle; immediately a crop has matured another should be started. Particularly is this true of the vegetables that may be canned or stored. Carrots may still be started, although full stands may be difficult to have; so may beets. Turnips need 70 to 80 days to mature; the last planting date may safely be August 1, and that is the day to begin sowing greens, delightful winter food, fresh or canned, to say nothing of fall and winter turnips, also started then. Because it has good sense always, and now becomes patriotic as well, will not every Kentuckian who can, have the best and most complete garden he ever had? The satisfaction of good winter diet is pay enough, but to have done one's part in the Nation's Defense Program makes the recompense transcending.

SLANTS

By W. L. S.

We were very favorably impressed with the fine spirit of co-operation existing in the Willaha community. These people know the value of working together.

Monday evening a co-operative meeting was held at the Poplar Grove schoolhouse and over sixty people attended. Good music and fine talks made an enjoyable evening.

Most of our farmers are realizing that their only salvation is co-operation. Labor is organized almost one hundred percent. Capital has long been united. Only the farmer remains as the one laborer without any form of unification, except in some sections.

The Sorghum Co-op has been the first step in this county toward co-operation and will probably be the most successful of all other forms of co-operative selling.

Last year Laurel County, which has a Potato Co-op, had 70 acres in spuds. This year 200 acres have been planted.

Only a few farmers in this county have the resources and the acreage to raise best cattle or to plant enough corn and wheat to pay. The county is ideally located to raise sheep, dairy cattle, and small truck, such as potatoes, strawberries, and tomatoes and other vegetables.

Any farmer who could plant an acre of tobacco, an acre of sorghum or raise enough vegetables to keep his family during the winter could make a fair living.

If this same farmer had three or four dairy cows and thirty or forty sheep he would soon be classed as prosperous.

The dairy farmers of Missouri all make good money, and as a rule work less than the grain farmer. In fact many make enough cash to pay for a farm hand.

Many farms in this county could be cleared of undergrowth and in a few years would make fine grazing land for sheep. Wool is a cash item and one that usually pays a good return on the investment.

Like any other enterprise, farming is a business. The farmer who keeps account of his profits and losses is a good farmer.

Agriculture is on the upgrade in Rockcastle, and the more money that our friend, the farmer makes, the more he will have to spend with his friend, the merchant.

Baptist Church

By Rev. W. C. Younce

Concerning Vacation Bible School work in our association, I will say that the Ottawa Baptist Church closed their two weeks school last Thursday night with a fine commencement service. Their enrollment was 50 with an average attendance of 43. We think this is an unusually good report considering the busy season. Rev. Cecil Lea was assisted by Mrs. Mary Singleton, Mrs. Mollie Brown and Miss Ethel Jones, members of the Ottawa church.

The Freedom Baptist church is in their second week of Vacation School. Miss Mary Booker in charge. We presume that they will close Friday night with commencement service. We will make a full report next week, the Lord willing.

Our church will begin its Vacation Bible School Monday of next week 9:00 to 11:00 o'clock each day except Saturday. Adults desiring to attend the studies in Paul's Missionary Journeys will come at 9:30 a.m. to 10:15 a.m. The pastor will teach the class. Please bring your Bible. Our parade will be Saturday afternoon of this week. We will meet at the

LIVESTOCK BREEDING SCHOOL

On June 3 and 4 there will be a Livestock Breeding School held in the Livestock Pavilion at the College of Agriculture, Lexington, Kentucky for all farmers in the state of Kentucky who want to know more about livestock breeding.

The objectives of this Breeding are as follows:
To bring to the attention of breeders recent results of research in animal breeding.

To present in practical language, informal lecture on the places of genetics in Livestock Breeding.
To illustrate how characters associated with production are inherited.
To aid in the development of definite breeding program embracing both type and production.

In addition to the members of the University staff several guest speakers will appear on the program. Dr. Jay Lush, Professor of Animal Husbandry of Iowa State College, Ames Iowa, Professor F. W. Atkinson, formerly classing officer of the Hants-Friesian Association of America; Honorable William H. May, Kentucky Commissioner of Agriculture; Dr. L. Breece, Acting State Veterinarian.

All-terrainmen, poultrymen, breeders of sheep, beef cattle, swine and horses who are striving to improve the breeds of domestic animals to which they are devoted should find much value in this two-day Breeding School at the University. It is all free and deals with the vital problems of farmers who are trying to improve their livestock.

If electricity were sold "Cash and Carry"

... it would cost you considerably less than it does today. But electricity is not a commodity that you can carry home like sugar or potatoes. It is useful only when it is delivered into your home, ready to serve you at the flick of a switch.

To handle this delivery job—to be prepared to serve thousands of customers simultaneously and without delay at any hour of the day or night—is not a simple matter like delivering groceries or meat. It requires a huge outlay for transmission and distribution lines... carloads of poles... miles of wire... costly substations... large numbers of transformers, meters and other delicate and expensive items of equipment. It takes a trained personnel and the expenditure of thousands of dollars annually for maintenance.

All this makes the delivery of electricity one of the most expensive distribution jobs in the world, but it is only one item in the cost of rendering electric service. To it must be added the cost of generating the electricity and the cost of meter reading, billing, collecting, servicing, accounting and management, to say nothing of taxes, depreciation and interest on invested capital. Yet despite the complex and highly technical nature of the business and all the items of expense that enter into it, electric service rendered by this company costs the average family only 11 cents per day.
