'Biggest Budget in World's History' For Expanding of U. S. War Program Will Cost Nation 56 Billion Dollars; Russians Continue to Push Back Nazis

(EDITOR'S NOTE—These opinions are expressed in these columns. They are those of the news analyst and not necessarily those of the newspaper.)

Developed by Western News-Photo Union.

SOMEWHERE IN CHINA—Veteran Chinese soldiers of this type, pictured at a railway station "Somewhere in China," are advancing toward Malaya to aid the hard-pressed forces of the British against the Japs. It was reported that veterans of this type took part in the slaughter of Jap troops in the Changsha, China, sector.

TAXES:

Billions on Billions

Americans who had been given grim satisfaction by the President's stirring message to congress faced with what, though they could muster the huge bill that will have to be paid, 56 billions of dollars.

Congress, to a man, had told the President "we will give you the money." QPM had said, "We can and will do it," and labor said, "we will not stop working."

Twenty-seven billions of dollars, taxes of nine billions on top of 18 billions were to be levied to meet as much as possible of the bill as it is spent.

On the basis of 130,000,000 people, the expenditure in taxes for the federal war program, added to what local and state taxes might be levied, would be $204 for each person, man, woman or child; $813 for a family of four.

The "overall" war expenditure estimate was $121 billions, or three times the total cost to this country of World War No. 1.

Mr. Roosevelt, frankly had told news men it was the biggest budget in the history of the world. Government authorities said it was twice the estimated annual war expenditure of Germany.

On top of the taxes, it would be necessary to borrow 32 billions. The national debt, therefore, would skyrocket to $110,000,000, or about three times the huge figure of June, 1940.

The nine extra billions, the President said, would be divided into seven billions in direct taxes of various types, though he said he opposed a general sales tax.

Existing taxes of all descriptions would be continued, and they have been estimated as due to produce 18 billions.

The war allocations had been split as follows: 18 billions for the army; 17 billions for the navy; 7 billions for the navy; 7 1/2 billions for the lend-lease program; the rest for miscellaneous purposes.

Perhaps a billion can be topped off of non-defense government activities, the President said—that is all.

REACTION: Local and World

JAPAN:

Still Pressing

Reports from the Far Eastern fronts, with the exception of China, were uniformly continuing stories of increased Japanese pressure in occupied zones, and uniform efforts to extend Japanese operations.

The British had doggedly been holding on in Malaya, but steadily and slowly falling back toward Singapore.

The Japs apparently had complete mastery of the air in Luzon, and it was deemed only a question of time how long General MacArthur's army could hold out.

Where the main defense was coming was obscure and remained a military secret, but there were certain indications which were said to be giving Tokyo plenty to worry about.

For instance, the naming of Wafu as supreme commander, and the placing of a well-trained Chinese army in Burma, together with other Allied forces, readying themselves for an onslaught on the Japanese rear at Malaya was one of them.

Another was the American and Australian insistence that strongest possible aid be given to the Dutch. On top of this came the word that Java was to be chosen as general headquarters of the Allied operations.

In glance at the Southwest Pacific maps showed the position of Java and Sumatra and their relation to the Malacca straits and the open ocean route to the south to Darwin, Australia, and plainly indicated the general tactic that was most likely to be pursued.

Japan, to break supply lines along this route, would have to move a considerable naval force out of the China sea and into the open South Pacific, and that could only be done with grievous results to the Jap campaign.

REDS: Increasing Pace

News from Russia had been uniformly good, with 572 towns reported captured in one week, 40,000 enemy troops slain, and huge quantities of booty taken.

Hiller, who had taken the front, made his headquarters at Smolensk, and suddenly found he was only 45 miles from where the chief fighting was. He was expected to have made his headquarters hurriedly farther to the rear.

The Crimean debacle was equaling the disaster befalling the German arms in the north around Leningrad; Turkey had temperatures below zero, colds in Turkish history, and that was an indication of what the ill-prepared Germans and their Italian and Rumanian allies had to stand in the Crimea, or, indeed, the warmest part of Russia.

Cause for Study:

Senator Walter F. George of Georgia, chairman of the Senate Finance committee, is pictured looking over the 1172 pages of the 1943 fiscal year budget. His chief interest in the budget would be a study of it with a view of planning new tax measures. The year budget calls for $56,000,000,000.

FARMER:

Has Prospects

President Roosevelt was seen by senate leaders as opposed to the proposal of the farm bloc to have secretary of agriculture give the authority to exercise veto power on wartime controls of farm prices.

Senator Brown of Michigan said that the President approves having a single price administrator handle all price questions, including those of farm products.

Brown, however, contended that the farm bloc had powerful support and that the vote on such a measure, if it came to that, would be close indeed.

Secretary Wickard is getting support for the post of farm price czar from both parties. The dispute, of course, is between him and Leon Henderson, the price administrator.

Under the present bill, Brown pointed out, $1.90 wheat would be a possibility. The average market price on December 15 was $1.82.

Cotton similarly could be purchased for 16.2 cents a pound, and could go to 18.5 cents before the law would take over control.

Beef, however, had currently been selling higher than it would under the bill, he added.

Also getting considerable support was a Senator Taft proposal that neither Wickard nor Henderson be given the price control, but that it be vested in a board of five members. This Taft proposal might form the test of sentiment on the other two proposals.

CHINA:

Changsha Victory

The Chinese victory over the Japs at Changsha was deemed by Chiang Kai-shek as a possible turning point of the war. It was the third successive setback for the Japanese at this city, and the most disastrous.

Some Chinese newspapers were urging that the Chinese armies now strike into Thailand and Indo-China direct to menace the Jap rear and relieve the pressure on Malaya.

The Chinese said that in addition to the 30,000 Japs killed in the battle, they got 7,000 more as the fleeing Japanese abandoned their arms, a nearby river, with Chinese lying ambushed on the far bank.

A Jap force of 40,000 was said to be trapped in one locality. The total estimated Japanese strength of the drive on Changsha was 100,000 men. Few of them, according to Chungking, were able to get away to the north.

ZEPPELINS:

Raid the East?

Army authorities in Washington said it definitely "was in the cards" that Germany might try to get their two huge dirigibles into the air for token raids on the east coast of the United States.

It was revealed after the last war that the big transatlantic Zeppelin of those days was being groomed for just such a trip, but which never came off.

TO OUR Good Health

By DR. NATHAN S. DAVIS, III

'HEALTH AUDIT WEEK' IN YOUR COMMUNITY

As the old year goes out and the new comes in, large and small businesses and industries, and the farmers must all take stock. The certified public accountants do a land office business. This year because so many more will have to pay income taxes, there will be even more stock taking and auditing than usual. The farmers are taking stock not only that they may correctly determine their taxable income but also to determine the condition and quantity of their stock and farm equipment.

Much attention is given to the stock of goods on hand, to physical equipment, to mechanical needs, to earnings and losses, but few even consider inventories of the health of the men, women and children who will be needed to carry on next year.

Average Height and Weight of Men and Women and thereafter. Many large industries require the physical examination of all new employees. The pre-employment examination is to eliminate the unfit and so lessen accidents that might injure many. The examinations that are made annually are for the purpose of finding defects early that they may be remedied before they are disabling.

Annual Health Audit.

The small business man and farmer whose future depends so much on their fitness to continue to work have sadly neglected the audit of this most valuable asset, health.

The inventory of the health of all who work in a store or small factory, from the owner down to the office boy, and of all who work on the farm, is the purpose of the annual audit. It would be a great improvement if the printed forms often used in the taking of stock, provided first for a notation that all owners, officers and employees had been examined and found fit to carry on at their usual jobs.

Here's an idea. Why not make the last week in the year HEALTH AUDIT WEEK? The members of your County Medical society would co-operate and might even make special rates for health examinations made at that time, especially if the whole family were included and if the examinations were paid for when made. Your health is your most important asset; it is much more valuable than great riches and should be guarded even more carefully. Remember that many diseases can be cured only when discovered early, even before you become conscious of them. When discovered later they are incurable or disabling for a much longer period. Why not start the ball rolling by organizing a HEALTH AUDIT WEEK in your county?

Send questions to Dr. Nathan S. Davis III, Winoona, Ill. (Enclose a self-addressed, stamped envelope.) Q—Upon awakening in the morning, I have aching legs. What causes this? R. E. A—If you had stated your age, the answer would be more accurate. It is probably due either to foot strain or rheumatism. Q—Is it necessary to wear bandages after an attack of pleurisy? Q. A—Only if they make you more comfortable.

Greatest Sabotage

The most gigantic sacrificial sabotage in world history was the destruction of Russia's Dnieper river dam by the Red army last August, says Collier's. This great hydroelectric project, which was completed in 1932, required five years to build and cost $500,000,000.

To the New Editor, and family Welcome to our County. We hope you the best success, "for the improvement of our good Old Signal" and County.

Probably some of the correspondents, were as I, who did not mean to let the New Editor down so hard, of his first issue, of the Signal, out, as our late Editor had run, the delayed letters, in the next edition out. I took for granted he had arranged to have the new Editor, run my correspondence, and a card thanks, of which I left in the office and 25c enclosed with card or thanks for Mrs. Dora Burton and others for their kindness during the illness and death of my Aunt Rebecca E. Pitman DeBord who made her home with my parents Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Cromer. Those friends did so much though I can not express, our thanks, I was disappointed when my card of thanks was not run in his last issue, and mentioned before, I did not know what he had made arrangements with the New Editor to have the same in his first edition. So therefore I failed to send in Luner News, as I had sent the most important news the previous week.
I wish to complement our Editor being a stronger, for a time to work with us cor. failing him, for his success, in the paper.

Out of every dollar you pay for a Southeastern Greyhound ticket, 23 1/3¢ goes just for taxes. For the 12-months ending August 31, 1941, the tax bill PER BUS amounted to $6.58 1/4.
Yes, every Southeastern Greyhound bus PAYS ITS WAY... and more! Buses perform a service that has become a vital necessity to every community and to the entire nation. Directly or indirectly they are important to YOU. They serve the armed forces with schedules to more ports and camps than any other means of transportation. They serve Defense Centers with frequent service for defense workers between factories and homes. They serve both rural communities and cities by providing convenient, economical transportation that links community interests. To business men, to housewives, to school children, to vacationers—buses play a prominent part daily in the American Way of life.

--in the service of defense

In the present grave national emergency, we all want to serve our country as best we are able.

Your electric company employees, like other citizens, are ready and eager to do their part in carrying our war effort to a victorious conclusion. Right now, their foremost task is to keep an ample supply of electricity flowing to turn the wheels of industry and to release the time and energy of individuals for defense activities of various kinds. Power is essential to production and to public health and comfort. Its delivery must be assured.

Trained to a tradition of service, your electric company employees are keenly alive to the added responsibilities of the present. As soldiers of industry, they may be depended upon to carry out their duties energetically and conscientiously as long as they can best serve their country in their present capacities.

DEEP WATER ISLAND

by ALAN LEMAY

W-N-U-RELEASE

INSTALLMENT TWO

THE STRANGE PART: Karen Waters, San Francisco girl, convinced by her lawyer, John Coll, that she has a claim to the island estate of her grandfather, Garrett Waters, arrives in Honolulu to attempt to gain control of the property. One evening while she and Coll are dining and discussing plans for pursuing her claim, Richard Wayne, of Tonga Dick, as he is known, enters their dining place. He is a member of the Wayne family that lives in control of her grandfather's island, Alaska, since the late man's death. As Karen believes that Tonga Dick does not know her identity she suggests to Coll that she talk to him and learn what she can. Coll at first opposes the idea but begins to change his mind.

Now continue with the story.

He laid a hand on the back of the chair where John Coll had sat. "May I?" "Perhaps, if you wish."

"I suppose there isn't any really practical objection," he said; "but isn't this notion just slightly on the silly side? You can hardly expect..."

He started to say something more, but let it pass; then bowed with exasperating courtesy, and walked away.

When he was gone she sat quietly a little while, trying to relax. Presently she turned her head and saw that she could look into the shadows where Tonga Dick sat, three tables away, alone in the absence of his shadows. She still could not clearly see his face, but she focused upon the coal of his cigarette, and waited. She let her eyes rest there until she reached the limit of endurance; then smiled faintly, and returned her attention to the absence of him.

Tonga Dick stood up, wound his way to her table. He laid a hand on the back of the chair where John Coll had sat.

"Perhaps, if you wish," Richard Wayne sat down, crossed his knees comfortably and took his time about lighting a cigarette. Karen waited, determined to make him feel the way; but she watched him curiously, with a sharp interest that was partly caused by his name alone. In the world she knew, you could no more be called Tonga Dick, in seriousness, than you could be called Red-Handed Harry, or Terrible Pete. Had he broken the relationship to this man than that of a casual tourist, she still would have stared, just because of the name he was called.

Tonga Dick surveyed her slowly, with grave eyes. "You wanted to see me?"

"Yes," Karen watched with admiration the perfect serenity of Karen's poise as she turned a little, and coolly met his eyes.

She was much more interesting to look at from across a table, he decided, than from across a number of them. Yet he had reached her the first moment in which he had stepped upon the lanai. That, of course, was the reason he knew who she was. He had landed but a few hours before, and had no more than shaken hands with his brothers; there were no ones by which he could have identified Karen Waters, if he had not noticed her and been interested in his own accord.

From the shadows of his obscure table at the edge of the lanai he had watched her for some time for no other reason than that it gave him pleasure to look at her.

After a little while he had signaled a table captain and asked who the girl was—and had obtained a correct answer.

Knowing who she was, it was odd to be sitting at the same table with her now. This was the first time she had come here from the mainland to lay claim to the island of Alaska, the little stronghold in the north which one but a Wayne had held for more than two decades.

It seemed to him that Karen Waters did not know the part. He couldn't understand how anyone with a face like that, and eyes like that, could get herself hooked up with a shenanigan that started from a common swindle only in the boldness of its scope.

"If I hadn't wanted you here," she said, "you'd hardly be here, would you?"

"And so?"

"Nothing. I wanted you to come and sit here because I think you look romantic. And I think you might produce a good deal, now."

"My name is Richard Wayne," he said. "I belong here in the Islands. More specifically, I am connected with the small privately owned island called Alaska."

"He watched for her reaction, and was fooled again; for no reaction came."

"That certainly is very interesting," Karen Waters said. "I wish I were an island."

"Perhaps," he suggested, "you would like to tell me who you are."

"My name," Karen improvised, "is 'Katie Higgins'—the name of the white girl from about four miles south of Dubuque. I teach school some places, and I think I would like to get in the movies."

"I should have said," Dick commented, "that you were from San Francisco." She glanced at him sharply, but he added, "Hawaii is a kind of a crossroads; people from every part of the world come through here, sooner or later, and that if you live in the Islands you ought to recognize infections of speech."

"Oh."

"They raise very good looking girls in San Francisco," Dick said. "It must be a wonderful thing to own your own island," Karen said.

"Are many islands privately owned?"

"Only a few, in this part of the Pacific. Nihaui is privately owned, and so is Lanai, which is the sixth largest in the group; and the Waynes have had Alaska for about twenty years."

"How many Waynes are there?"

"Your-know cockeyed well, young lady, how many Waynes there are." But aloud he said, "Four. My uncle, who is really the owner, my two brothers, and myself."

"It's like owning a little empire of your own, isn't it? I can't think of anything nicer than that."

"A good many people seem to feel that way," Dick said. "That's what makes an island so hard to hold on to."

"You have trouble holding onto it?"

"Yes, indeed. Just now, for example, there is an insufferable little snip of a girl trying to get her claws into Alaska by due legal process."

"Interesting," Karen encouraged him. "And just how does she expect to do it?"

"The Waynes bought Alaska from her grandfather. Now the girl wishes to prove that the sale was illegal, because, she says, her grandfather was a congenital idiot. She says it runs in the family, and she is right."

"Karen studied him for a moment with a suspicion, but Tonga Dick's face was placid. "What a remarkable person," Karen said. "What's she like?"

"Well—as I told you, I have had no chance to get acquainted with her."

"Maybe you'll have a chance later."

"I'd rather like to, you know," Dick admitted. "I'd like to find out what makes her tick. But I would hardly know how to go about it."

"Just a simple island boy," Karen smiled.

"Well, the circumstances are a little awkward—let's just go up together and say, 'I understand you are the little twerp who is trying to get my island away from me, and what are you doing this evening after the store closes?' or can I?"

"Well, invite her for a sail on your boat. Show her selected views of the coast line. Show her this island she's after—what did you say the name of it was? Alaska? Probably she has even seen it. I'll bet she's interested."

"And just what," said Dick, "would be my idea?"

"Get to know her. You said you wanted to find out what the little frigate was like. Maybe you'd like her."

"And then what?"

"And then what?" Karen repeated. "Say, wait a minute. Do I have to map out your entire life?" They grimed at each other; and either one of them would have given a good deal to know what the other was thinking then.

"It's a rotten plan," Dick criticized. "Now you've hurt my feelings," Karen said. "Here I practically work up a headache planning a beautiful day for you, and what you credit do all that effort? You tell me it's rotten. All that effort wasted!"

Richard Wayne appeared to blither. "No, I don't. It gives me a much better idea. What's the use of wasting the whole program on a shishy little frump? Not I'll take you sailing, instead."

"Me? Oh, I'm afraid I couldn't."

"Tomorrow morning," Richard Wayne prompted her, "at something like nine."

"Something more like ten," she answered.

look; obviously nothing had been changed here for a long time.

The two brothers who here awaited Richard Wayne seemed to have been born and raised by the New England furniture. Both were older than Richard, and when he looked at them he was sometimes happy to remember that they were only his half-brothers, after all.

"It does seem to me, Dick," Ernest Wayne said fretfully, "that you would show a little interest in what is happening here." Ernest tall and thin, did not look entirely well; he wore gold-rimmed glasses, which did not seem to be strong enough for his purpose, and when he set up late he developed a peaked look.

Dick sighed and sat down. "If I weren't interested I wouldn't be in Honolulu at all," he said. "Now, please try not to get all excited, will you?"

"Oh, you don't realize the seriousness of the situation, Dick," Willard said heavily, without heat. "This thing is critical in the extreme—perhaps even desperate. Uncle Jim can't seem to understand that he is not invulnerable. He has delayed, and delayed."

"As I understand it from your letters," he said now, "the complaint is that when our mutual father bought the island of Alaska from Garrett Waters he practically cheated the old boy out of his eye teeth—that is, that's the story?"

"Father was an industrious and intelligent man," Ernest Wayne said with annoyance.

"Do you know anything much about the original swindle?"

"I object to your tone," Willard Wayne said; and Dick was astonished by the vigor of his brother's resentment. "Garrett Waters was a disreputable old pirate. He was a waster and a speculator in the worst sort—absolutely typical of a certain kind of riffraff which troubled the islands in the early days. If father saw valgas in Alaska, that Waters did not, that certainly was Waters's look-out. But now comes this girl, this grasping, practical little adventuress, intent on seizing not only the whole of Alaska, but all the development which has cost Uncle Jim the best years of his life, and—"

"Have you checked the identity of this girl?" Dick interrupted.

"She's Garrett Waters's granddaughter," Willard said.

"Well brought up."

"The family has no distinction whatever, and what has been working as a stenographer. Her relationship to the island of Alaska probably would never have occurred to the advice agent, and John Coll, it had not been for this John Coll."

"And who is this John Coll?"

"John Coll is thirty-six years old and was born in New York. He is one of the predatory speculators who came to light in the boom days of the late twenties. He acquired a considerable fortune through water developments in California. In 1932 his stock-juggling activities were investigated, but without success."

"You seem to have snooted around to very good effect," Tonga Dick complimented them.

"And now," Willard concluded, "Karen Waters, through her attorneys, and undoubtedly acting on the advice of this John Coll, is bringing suit, on the complaint that her grandfather's sale of Alaska was illegal—that Garrett Waters, son of the time of the sale, was mentally incompetent. That shows you the girl's unscrupulous type—she is willing to discredit her own grandfather, even that we've had hundreds of cases in the islands—madly successful!"

"But not so easy in the case of Garrett Waters, I should think."

Willard Wayne exploded. "I tell you it is easy! Unless we find a way out, it is most certainly going to be done! This is what comes of dealing with irresponsible or idiot Waters's type. Evidence can be brought in to show that Garrett Waters was not only totally irresponsible, but eccentric in the extreme. I myself am convinced he was more or less deranged. Let me tell you that we've had hundreds of such cases in the islands—most successful!"

"Same old story," Tonga Dick murmured. "But not so easy in the case of Garrett Waters, I should think."
