DOANS PILLS

Today's specialists of Doan's Pills, after many years of study, have accepted as evidence that the only way to cure kidney trouble is by the use of Doan's Pills. And favorable reports of the able physicians who use the value of Doan's under exacting laboratory conditions.

These specialists, too, approve every word of advertising you see, the substance of which is only to recommend Doan's Pills as a good diuretic, to increase the secret of the kidney function and for relief of the pain and worry caused by kidney trouble.

If more people were aware of how the kidneys must constantly remove waste that cannot stay in the blood without injury to health, there would be better understanding of why the whole body suffers when kidneys are too long neglected. Doan's would be more often employed.

Starting, please, sometimes warn of disturbed kidney functions. Your sufferer, attacks of dizziness, getting up at night, swelling, pain under the eyes—feel weak, nervous, all these.

Use Doan's Pills. It is better to rely on a medicine that has been used for generations than on something less favorably known. Ask your neighbor.

ments and Emily Post's rules of etiquette for fifty-odd years, this was her first appearance in court.

She was clothed in a dirty, black Mother Hubbard, from the voluminous folds of which she had been known to produce a thousand dollars cash or a forty-five with equal facility. From beneath a shapely, fabled sun-bonnet straggled wisps of stringy grey hair, while the bonnet itself surmounted a face with which, by comparison, Walt Disney's favorite witch would have appeared as a vestal virgin.

Shootingly the prosecutor persisted, "Is it not true that you have been making and selling moonshine whiskey at your home for years?"

The defendant lifted a withered lip over yellowed fangs and snarled like a cornered wildcat. Her own court-appointed attorney started to speak, but she quieted him with a glare.

A titter ran around the crowded little courtroom and the judge rapped lightly for order. So far, during the proceedings the judge had managed to remain in the background.

A well-known Kentucky jurist, his circuit included this little county sought to know local conditions and he knew his people. Easy-going, affable, possessed of a keen sense of humor, he knew when to preserve his dignity by not sticking it out.

"He knew that Nancy Jane was guilty of the charge, and many others, but the prosecution had not proven it. Probably every man in the house expected the prosecutor and himself had bought her moonshine, but her customers were not going to kill the goose that laid the eggs."

The distressed attorney glanced at the judge appealingly, but his glance was ignored. Then, preoccupied by the case, he said, "I am in contempt. I hold that the witness is in contempt."

Leaning forward toward the old woman, the judge opened his bench slightly. "The witness is in contempt," he said. "Come, come, my lady. Tell the man what you know."

Let's get along with this. The defendant apparently saw the judge for the first time. A moment's pause, then, with a bold start she snapped, "I did ma' but'n hell you got to do half a two."

The corners of his honor's mouth slightly as he continued to tap the bench with his finger. The witness answered, deprecatingly, "Oh, nothing much, Aunt, nothing much."

"No-a-nothing," he added, "Get down, take the witness."

Amid the ensuing roars of laughter, in which he himself joined, the prosecutor moved that the case be dismissed for lack of evidence.

POLICY: Change Toward Paris Indicated by Bombing

Though the British had systematically bombed enemy installations in occupied Europe, particularly those nearest the channel coast...

However, with a sudden day and night attack against the huge auto factories on the outskirts of Paris, France apparently had told the world that her policy toward the queen city of France had been changed.

A large squadron of heavy bombers, meeting considerable anti-aircraft fire, had flown over the city and suburbs all day and far into the night, dropping deadly loads in the neighborhood of the Renault, Citroen, Hispano-Suiza, Poter and Regnier motor works.

Vichy did not reveal the amount of the damage, but said there were considerable losses.

ACE: Made in a Day

From the Pacific theater had come the story of a determined attempt by Japanese heavy bombers, evidently operating from an island base, to put one of our largest aircraft carriers out of action.

The vessel, thanks to the vigorous defense of the pursuit personnel, escaped "without a scratch" the navy had reported.

It emerged, Lt. Edward O'Hare of the pursuit group, as the war's first "ace in a day."

'Man of Peace Promotes Korean War Against Japs

Dr. Syngman Rhee, President of Exiled Government, Heads Conference in Washington To Plan 'Life and Death' Revolt.

By BAUKHAGE

News Analyst and Commentator.

WNT Service, 1343 H Street, N.W., Washington, D. C.

Washington has just witnessed a most remarkable ceremony. It was what might be called the laying of the cornerstone of a new revolution.

The Korean Liberty conference has just met in Washington to commemorate the March 1, 1919, revolution and make plans for a 1942 revolution.

The most remarkable thing about this first step toward the smashing of tyrant's power is that its moving spirit is a wistful little figure who describes himself as a man of peace.

With a group of Koreans from Hawaii and others living in the United States, and with the help of a group of American friends who make up the "Korean Committee" in Los Angeles and Honolulu and the Korean-American Council, Dr. Rhee met in Washington since 1935.

Dr. Rhee, the first victim of Japan's long-piercing and cruel policy of imperialism, is the present war between Japan and America and tried to warn this country.

He said that he had seen Japan in 1894 as they saw her in 1892, the year of Hideyoshi's unsuccessful invasion of Korea.

The forest fire will not extinguish itself," he says. But it will be extinguished.

"At long last—perhaps sooner than we dare to hope—" he says, "the democratic forces of the world will thrust Japan back on her islands and peace will reign in the Pacific."

"The letters which I receive fairly bristle on that subject. Complacent? We aren't complacent, they say, it's the complacent Washington who are the complacent ones."

"Recently I was in a gathering where three speakers told in great detail the story of the movie industry as it is today."

Recently I sat at a gathering where there was a heated argument as to whether the government information given out about Pearl Harbor was the best of the best or worse than it really was.

As the leader of these gentle revolutionists, Dr. Rhee at 67 wishes the new-school thinkers are able to merely feel that the goal is nearer. With the philosophy of his great master—Rhee was educated in a school where he was looking on the world in flames with new courage.

MISS LILLIAN WALLIN, Editor

Brodhead Christian Church

Harold I. Newlin, minister.
Bible School, 10 a. m. Lester Cass, Supr.

We didn't see you last Sunday in Bible School. Were you sick or did you just neglect to come. We need you so plan to come this Sunday—Morning Worship, 11 a. m. subject, "Shall You Mock Him?" Evening Service, 7:30 p. m. subject "Never a Man Lived Like This Man."

Yes, we would like to have you come to our mid-week Prayer service—Wednesday, 7:30 p. m.

Why Go To Church?

Prosperity. You can't have these alone. You get them only as you help those around you. Jesus said, "Again I say unto you, that if two or you stand agree on earth as touching anything that they shall ask, it shall be done for them of my Father which is in Heaven." For when two or three are gathered together in my name, there am I in the midst of them." Matt. 18:19-20
Get the weight of a common aim, a common purpose, behind your prayers and your work and you will find that happiness. SO GO TO CHURCH!

Several people from Brodhead attended the basketball contest at Stewart last week. King's Mountain defeated Brodhead in the semifinals by the score of 32-20. Charlie Eddie Hunt was chosen as captain of the A-1 tournament team in spite of the fact that he was handicapped.

Prayer Service
A missionary in the war-torn country of China writes: "We were on our way to the place of prayer when the siren of the city sounded and the people began running out of the city trying to get out of the path of danger. They knew that the dread Japanese bombing planes were coming. However, our little group of Christians went right on to the place of prayer."

How we wish that our people would exercise such spirit of loyalty and devotion to our prayer services as the Chinese do to theirs!

The church as a divine institution has a mission which none other has and its members should realize afresh that they were put into the world not necessarily to be in the majority, but to become a saving majority. The church for the purpose of preserving society from decay by injecting into it the saving power of the Divine life.

We urge Christian people to attend the Wednesday night prayer meeting.

When he had completed the tour he told us that we were selling numbers of items at retail cheaper than he could wholesale them. He was right. Why? Because we are buying these items from the same people he buys from and eliminating his profit. That profit is passed on to our customers in the form of savings. BUT YOU WON'T GET YOUR SHARE UNLESS YOU TRADE WITH US.

This same salesman told us that we have the largest and most complete NEW AND USED FURNITURE AND HOME FURNISHINGS LINE to be found in any town of comparative size in his territory. Was he right? WE INVITE YOU TO COME IN AND SEE.

DEEP WATER ISLAND

by ALAN LEMAY

W-W-U-RELEASE

INSTALLMENT TEN

THE STORY SO FAR: Karen Watson, convinced by her lawyer, John Colt, that she has a claim to the island estate of her grandfather, the late Watson, has come to Honolulu to attempt quieting the property. In an effort to find out something about the Watson family, she took control of Aloaka, the island, she accepted a date to go sailing with a friend, Tommie Dick, Wayne Adams, her niece, who takes her to Aloaka. While there, Karen Watson, the granddaughter-in-law of the property, is found dead from an overdose. While taking Karen back to Honolulu, next day, Dick tells her he loves her but they later quarrel. Dick then sees John Colt and when a compromise offer to return the island to her that their Pacific venture will fail. He goes back to Aloaka and tells his half-brother, that he knows Karen's husband to be alive. This question his half-brother, now continues with the story.

"Now, Karen, this ordinary man might drop out of sight that way," Willard said, "it still would have been impossible for Garrett Water-ton to know too big, too important." Dick was getting disgusted again. "No, he wasn't, he only imagined he was. Once he was broken, he wasn't of any importance or interest to anybody—except to you and to you only because you thought he was a stake in the game. Doubtless this will surprise you, but the fact is that Aloaka is a small, obscure, and unimportant speck on the map, suitable for supporting a few hundred people, and of no other significance whatever. The fact that Garrett Watson once had hold of it, while would not distinguish him in the eyes of anybody, except yourself."

Both brothers looked scandalized. "If all this can be proved," Ernest began, "I mean, if his actual identity can be proved—"

"Of course it can be proved. It's a plain, demonstrable fact—can't you understand that?"

"If Dick is to be believed," Willard said, "our worries are over. Ernest. They can go ahead and investigate their heads off and it won't get 'em a thing. And Karen Watson's case against us falls that fast."

"As a bird in the hand," Dick suggested. Suddenly a new angle occurred to Willard Wayne. "I suppose," he said, "since you are working for Watson, as you are for the boat, you're not 'yours at all, but his—that's right?"

"Certainly."

"Then," said Willard, "whatever business he's in now, he must be enjoying a considerable success. That alone ought to furnish proof that you're completely 'yours'."

"Unfortunately, there's a catch in that, too," said Dick, "and it's a big one."

"Just what business is it?" Ernest demanded. "Where does his money come from? Or is that something—else—that isn't supposed to concern us?"

"It concerns you very much," Dick said. "Well!"

Dick Wayne grinned sardonically, even maliciously, and stood up, preparatory to walking out. "Ask Garrett Watson, he'll suggest to you. If he doesn't feel like telling you, it won't do you any good to know."

John Colt, aboard a Diesel boat hardly better than the sampans the Japanese fishermen used, arrived at Aloaka at sunset.

Dick Wayne, catching the little vessel blunder and grope its way through the reefs—she was sounding suspiciously like a leak, had three lead lines—knew that the one-eyed Captain Ramey had managed to sell John Colt a charter at least, if only for that afternoon.

Ramey's boat dropped anchor five hundred yards from the Holokai. Evidently Dick's brothers had sent worders to the house. John Colt should be brought to the house immediately upon arrival for Aloaka's shores launch put out immediately, Kokiano steering, and took John Colt. Tonga Dick watched this maneuver impassively. There was no longer any danger that his brothers would be bluffed into coming by Colt. The decision would rest with Watson himself, and no one else.

He got his binoculars now and focused them on the Diesel boat. The swift twilight of the latitude was closing sharply, but the glasses were still able to bring out every detail aboard the Diesel boat. The little tramp vessel sat awkwardly on the water, her snub nose tilted upward, and she looked miserably, derisively, lightly disreputable look, but Dick knew she concealed a surprising turn of speed.

The swift twilight of the latitude was closing sharply, but the glasses were still able to bring out every detail aboard the Diesel boat. The swift twilight of the latitude was closing sharply, but the glasses were still able to bring out every detail aboard the Diesel boat.

coming in across the still water from a day's fishing by the reefs. Dick sent a low whistle across the water, and the outrigger sheered in close to the side of the Holokai. "Take me over to that stranger boat!" Tonga-Dick swung over the rail and dropped into the moving canoe.

"Okay, Captain Dick." Karen Watson was still standing by the rail, quiet and alone, as the silent outrigger slipped close. Tonga-Dick stood up, reached the boat's low rail, and swung aboard.

"Stand on and off," Dick told the Kanaka fisherman, "and wait for me."

CHAPTER X
The outrigger moved off a little drifting idly. It was the girl who spoke first, her voice husky in the quiet.

"I thought you might come over here." Dick Wayne leaned close to her so that their shoulders touched, and held his voice low, hoping that Captain Ramey would not be brought out of his galley.

"I have something to tell you," he said. "Something's happened—the whole situation is changed. John Colt can't accomplish anything here. The right is off, and if it starts again it will be on an entirely new basis."

She waited, and in the rapidly thickening dark he could not see what was in her eyes. "Karen," Dick said, "you are not an heiress; and you have no claim upon Aloaka. You see, Karen—your grandfather is alive."

There was a long minute of uneasy silence. He didn't expect her to believe him, at least not at first. Sheek, incredulously, refused to accept the truth—he supposed he would have to contend against all of these before he could go on.

Karen's answer astonished him when it came. She spoke in a low drawl.

"You know, I rather thought so, Dick." "Having braced himself for an uphill attempt to convince her, Dick was taken aback. "Why—how on earth did you know?"

"John Colt admitted that one thing might destroy our case—and wouldn't tell me what it was. Then yesterday, when you told him that you could bring our claims to nothing it seemed to me that he believed you, though he wouldn't admit it. He hardly ever says 'yes' to me, but he hadn't feared a new development, would he? So—the only thing I could really think of was that your grandfather might still be alive, and that you had dug him up."

He'd be here soon, Karen—very soon. She considered that, her eyes on the disappearing horizon. "It will be strange to see him. I suppose I will see him, won't I? It's going to be like—meeting a ghost. He's been such a vague, misty sort of gigantic figure, overshadowing everything for so many months—over me. John Colt first convinced me that I might have a right to Aloaka. A great, legendary figure, lost in the past. And now to actually see him, face to face—it's very surprising."

"Who knows what standpoint he will take? Garrett Watson has always been a man given to extreme views. For all I know he may jump to the conclusion that he would like to recover the island, and hand it over to you."

"To me? After I've tried to prove—"

"You mean my grandfather could recover Aloaka?" "He's in a perfectly sound mind. But he can't help himself shown incompetent" if he wants to—God knows he's eccentric enough."

"But Dick—that's true," Karen said. "It's just what you and John Colt started to do in the first place." (TO BE CONTINUED)
