bad men still shot in the town and swung in their cups and out to buy the new marshal among the daisies, but one after another, Dan moved them down.

Awkward, ungainly, taciturn, and slovenly, he was always on hand when trouble brewed. Unarmed half the time, slow on the draw and very antithesis of blitzkrieg. Dan was a slow-motion caricature of a police officer; but he was an irresistible force—which—calmly and thoughtfully waded into bluster, brickbats, bowie knives and gunfire, to emerge unscathed, victorious and utterly bored.

Coalton has quieted down now. The bad actors all either died, got killed, moved away or reformed. Marshal Dan still wanders about the streets, collecting taxes, repairing some kid's kite or taking an occasional hog or cow to the stry-pen. His ever modest salary has been further reduced so that he still wears the same overalls and shirt, patched now with so many colors that he resembles nothing

Always the Serpent

Uncle Hafe is an old-time dyed-in-the-wool circuit-rider. Preaching among the Cumberland Mountain back-sections, Uncle David makes up for his lack of education by the ferocity of his attacks upon the devil and all his works.

Unhindered by any real knowledge of the Bible, his discourse freely upon any and every conceivable subject, filling in the voids with the high-sounding figures of speech so dear to the hearts of his congregation, and interpreting the Scriptures with great liberality.

At the close of a recent revival service Uncle David was up to his armpits in a little mountain stream, baptizing those who had seen the error of their ways. He had just secured a firm grip upon the collar of Big Joe Jenkins and was raising his hand for the invocation, when Joe spied a huge water-moccasin swimming upon a nearby log.

"Well, I swan," cried Uncle Hafe, releasing his hold on Joe. Together they slipped and fell into the stream, and the congregation, amazed to find no one apparently disturbed by the interruption.

The obnoxious intruder being here to combat the two principals of the little drama took up where they had left off, and Joe's sins, including his late-sworn oath, floated down the creek with the carcass of the snake; to the tune of Happy Day.

INDIGESTION DISTRESS

RELIEVED, GAINS 16 LBS.

Husband Also Benefited by Retonga, Declares Mrs. Roberts. Tells Of Her Trouble.

Happy and grateful over years of distress promptly relieved, and a gain in appetite, steady nerves and strength, Mr. and Mrs. John Roberts, well known residents of 1208 Morgan Ave., Camp Taylor, Ky., are both strongly praising Retonga.

"I took Retonga first and it did me so much good that Mr. Roberts then tried it," states Mrs. Roberts. "It was feeling terribly worn out, I was badly troubled with constipation, and I felt full of acids and poisons. My appetite had dwindled away to nothing, and it seemed to me that I could get no relief at all from the gas on my stomach. I had a dull, wearing headache practically every day, and I was so nervous I could hardly get to sleep.

"The relief Retonga brought me is little short of marvelous. My appetite is fine, all that distress I suffered from headaches, constipation, and nervousness is relieved, and I have gained back sixteen pounds of my lost weight. I feel simply splendid. Mr. Roberts was suffering distress all the time from indigestion, loss of appetite, and sleeplessness, and Retonga relieved him just like it did me. We think it the greatest medicine ever put in a bottle."

Retonga is a natural herbal gastric tonic combined with Vitamin B-1. Accept no substitute. Retonga may be obtained from Maggard Drug Store, Mt. Vernon, Ky. Adv.

Rockcastle Facts and Stories

By Ralph Griffin

Both of the following stories are submitted just as I wrote them for publication outside the county. This accounts for shift in local and of course the names are fictitious. In spite of these facts it is probable that old-timers will recognize the characters and possibly recall the incidents, with allowance for stretch-gauge. Your pardon is begged for occasional bits of profanity which may intrude themselves into these stories. I pass them on to you as they were told to me.

Dan Marshall

When Dan Brockwell was elected town marshal of Coalton the marriage certificate, being a shrewdly wired order for one seven-foot casket, slim model. He figured that with a little discreet bending at the knees, this size would accommodate the casket. The casket was ready to arrive in time for Dan's predecessors had never been used for their longevity.

When Dan came down to the courthouse to be sworn in he wore his usual overalls, still unwashed. The uniform worn by the late marshal, Heaven rest him, would have been too short by yards and too wide by fathoms. Anyway, Dan would rather wear his overalls, he allowed, which was the longest stretch he was known to make. While the justice of the peace administered the oath, Dan's admiring official masticated his cud restively.

Bud Deever, postmaster rushed in. "Red Carter on another whiz!" he shouted. "Run his wife off. He's home now—shootin' up the place—shootin' his wife off."

Without a flicker of expression on his gawky countenance Dan slowly pinned a metal badge on his faded denim shirt. Experimentally he slapped his pistol holster which resounded emptily. Musingly he stepped over to the wood box and picked out a rounded billet, which he hefted as he ambled out of the courtroom.

"Migod!" breathed Deever. "Goin' after Red Carter with a hair-trigger. Ten minutes later a disarmed and much subdued Red was humblingly march down Main street and the postmaster, who grasping his collar and occasionally kicking him in abstracted fashion. Things were never the same in Coalton after the hair-triggering." (Continued on Page 8)

Mothers Should Know Symptoms of Measles

Mothers should know the characteristic symptoms of measles, thus states Dr. Nathan Davis in a column in our Health column today. He gives the symptoms of the disease along with the proper care of children. The disease spreads rapidly in a community once it starts. Dr. Davis points out.

Are You Helping Your Community As You Should?

We've always had reason to believe that one should help the community so your community can help you. That goes for spending your money in the home town. The biggest bargain you can ever find is helping the home town merchant who is in business for you. The Signal gives you all the local news, plus the best features, which is proof that we're doing our best to help the community.

Light Company Warns Boys About Kite Flying Rules

With the coming of spring and the kite flying season, Community Service Company issues its annual appeal to children not to fly their kites in the vicinity of electric power lines. "Kite flying is great sport and lots of fun," says Roy O. Owens, power company manager, "but it can turn into tragedy if the kite gets caught in contact with power lines. Every year scores of lives are needlessly lost in the United States, because children use wire for kite strings or come in contact with power lines while trying to recover kites tangled in the wires. So collect the help of parents and school teachers in seeing that children of this community are warned of the danger in order that similar accidents can be prevented here."

To be on the safe side, Mr. Owens recommends that the following precautions be observed by kite-flyers:

- 1. Fly kites in open fields as far away as possible from power lines and traffic.
- 2. Don't use wire or metallic string. This is extremely dangerous as wire in contact with power lines can cause a fatal electric shock.
- 3. Don't use metal kite sticks and wooden kite frames braced with wire.
- 4. Don't fly kites with wet string or in wet weather. Water is a conductor of electricity.
- 5. Don't try to retrieve a kite caught in the wires by climbing poles, poking sticks or pulling on the tail. You may come in contact with a live wire.

If you see a kite caught in an electric power line, call the office of Community Public Service Company. The company will remove the kite as soon as it is possible.

DR. GRIFFITH STATES FACTS ABOUT RED CROSS AID COURSE

In regards to American Red Cross First Aid Course for Civilian Defense, which I shall conduct as instructor beginning soon from 7-9 on Tuesday nights, only those who have completed two years high school are eligible. (This is according to instructions from Red Cross officials). At the end of the course an examination is required to be passed (75 per cent) and the First Aid certificate must be 17 years of age or over. The course is not easy and I am willing to study and teach it. Of course there is a personal sacrifice but what personal sacrifice I have given plenty of money to Red Cross in the past and will continue to subscribe in the future.

About the $1.00 charge. This will be spent on bandages, splints and gauze. The price for the text book is 60c. There will be 10 lessons of two hours each. (No smoking).

Perhaps this course will seem obsolete but for me I have been unable to find a news commentator yet who could tell me that we were out of danger of invasion. It might be a good idea to be ready for anything. Sometime soon I want to publish an article on "War News" in this community.

Jap Invasion Bases in New Guinea Strengthen Drive Against Australia; Promised Dominion Status for India Fails to Result in Expected Harmony

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of the news analyst and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Reports from Australia emphasize the importance of Allied attacks on the Japanese invasion bases of Salamaua and Lae in northeast New Guinea. From Salamaua to Thursday Island, on the northern tip of Australia, the distance is 4,000 miles. From Thursday Island to Port Moresby, the distance is 1,000 miles. From Port Moresby to the coast, the distance is 100 miles.

AUSSIES:

On the Spot

Hardly had the battle of Java reached the mopping up stages than the battle for the approaches of Australia had started with rumblings from within the continent, that the Aussies were far from pleased with the amount of preparedness they had.

The signal for the beginning of the "curtain-raiser" for the attempted invasion of Australia had closely followed the shut-down of communications with Java, and came about the same time news was received that some 3,000 Australian troops, badly needed at home, were still fighting in a hopeless way on the island of Java.

The spread of the projected invasion was supposed to be based on the island of New Guinea, just to the north of the continent and immediately threatening it as the shortest airline flight from the East Indies.

The Japs had landed large forces at Salamaua, Lae and at Finschaven, and had been busily engaged in consolidating these positions as bases of supplies.

This was enough to set at rest any doubts Australians might have had that India and not they were going to be next on the Jap time-table. Not only that, but the Japanese, with their frankness, had broadcast that Australia was going to suffer the same fate as had the Dutch East Indies.

How much American aid and reinforcement already was in Australia was dubious, and a closely guarded military secret. It was weak the military leaders naturally didn't want the Japs to know how weak, and if they were strong enough to defeat them, when they did show up, these same leaders didn't want to warn them off.

The only stories concerning the amount of aid had come from Mr. Daniel, who had written that the town of Perth was so full of American troops that it looked like an American city, and from British Correspondent Harr, whose dispatch had caused an immediate tempest which hadn't gone anywhere at all.

Harr it was who, apparently writing from the midst of an American convoy bound to Australia had said that the "sea was covered with ships" and that "hundreds of America's best fighting pilots" were aboard.

America also was sending men "from the plains states" he added, but gave no hint of their status.

It was from Australian leaders themselves that the hint came that the continent was ill-prepared. One said:

"It is the plan of the Japanese to attack before we can get prepared, and before we can receive reinforcements."

Secrecy had muddled the picture for Americans, but certain it was that in going after Australia the Japs were really biting off a chunk which would take a bit of chewing, for they'd had no fifth-column there waiting to be taken over.

INDIA:

Britain's Problem

Churchill had informed Congress which had been demanding some forthright action on the problem of Hindustan, that nothing could be done now, but repeating his promise of dominion status for India "after the war."

So far this problem was the most trying one facing the British. In Burma they had found what they were up against, with the Burmese revolutionaries joining the Japs, and many of the others turning frankly against all white men.

The British defenders of Burma, cut off by these tactics, had been forced to retreat more and more, and finally, in a daring maneuver, had struck northward, and had already won very close to their Chinese allies.

What Britain feared more than anything was a frank and open upsurge of all the 300 million people, and to this the best Churchill could do had been to re-offer what had been offered back in August, 1940, and which, apparently, had accomplished nothing.

But this time he went a little further. He told the Indians that he was sending his own right-hand man, Sir Stafford Cripp, personally to India to explain it all to them.

India's religious and caste problems were, admittedly, severe, and the Government had adopted a definite plan as to how the dominion status would be carried out, and that he was sending his own right-hand man, Sir Stafford Cripp, personally to India to explain it all to them.

NAZIS:

Need Man Power For Spring Drive

Whether Germany was planning peace or not, London had been hearing reports that the Nazis were seriously short of manpower which was needed for the spring offensive against Russia.

The first indication of this was when the Nazis issued an estimate of losses thus far in the war which was by far the largest figure they had ever admitted, though still far short of the Red's claims.

The Germans admitted loss of 1,500,000 men since the start of the war, and said that half of these had been lost in the winter on the Russian front.

The report had come out of London that the Nazis now were asking for 3,000,000 fresh troops from Italy, Hungary and Slovakia for the spring offensive.

The Soviet authorities claimed that the Germans had lost 6,000,000 men on the Russian winter front alone, of these 1,700,000 killed, 2,000,000 seriously wounded, and the rest missing or prisoner.

Of the new troops Germany was said to be asking for 1,500,000 from Hungary, 1,000,000 from Italy and 1,000,000 from Slovakia. Rumania was said to have given 500,000 of 1,000,000 last fall, but the Reds asserted that practically all of these had been wiped out.

HARA-KIRI:

On Bataan

Though there had been little action on Bataan peninsula, there had been a change in Japanese commanders with stoutish General Homma removed to have plunged a ceremonial knife into his own retund vital, and General Yamashita, the conqueror of Malaya, reportedly taking over in his place.

In the meantime the Samarai, to be replaced by another general as having failed calls for a swift turn to the end of the road. There to take a swift trip to visit one's ancestors.

No one was at a guess as to the successful commander of the field. For him comes swift dishonor, and death just as swift, in his own hand. Such is the code of the Samurai.

When General Homma met General MacArthur he met more than a superior general. After eight fighting months he met the end of the road. At the time Yamashita was organizing his forces for the purpose of wiping out MacArthur and thus wiping away his dishonor.

At the time Yamashita was organizing his forces for the purpose of wiping out MacArthur and thus wiping away his dishonor. (Of encountering some of his own) there was a huge demand sweeping the country for some definite answer as to why substantial aid could not be sent to the Philippines.

Accompanying this was some fairly sharp criticism of the administration and its conduct of the war. But in the main the response of the public to the "Send Aid to MacArthur" campaign was rather a tribute rather than any suggestion as to how the job might possibly be done.

The President had told his press conference: "You tell me how to get the help there, and I'll send it." To this poser the answer had not yet come.

MOVING DAY:

For Aliens

Pacific coast residents were told that the huge machinery necessary for moving about 100,000 enemy aliens and American citizens of Japanese extraction out of the coastal area were finally under way.

The work of moving them, the government had said, might start any day. Where they would be sent, there had been little hint, but two sections had been mentioned, one of them in Idaho and another in Colorado.

It was to be a huge task, but with the war going as it had been in the Pacific, it was felt that the Pacific coast would breathe more easily when they had gone.

Farm Bloc in Congress Threatens Wickard's Policy

'Highly Insistent' Group Fights to Prevent Surplus Commodities Corporation From Selling Farm Products Below Parity.

By BAUKHAKE News Analyst and Commentator

WNU Service, 1243 H Street, N.W., Washington, D. C.

It is the equal of five long blocks from where Secretary Wickard's windows look out on the wide sweep of lawn in front of the Department of Agriculture building, along the winding roads to the White House.

But Mr. Wickard, except for cabinet meetings, doesn't take that trip very frequently. It is not because he isn't welcome on any day, but because the President's official family. It is because he feels pretty sure if he tends to his agricultural knitting he won't be fired.

That was at a White House press conference when the President was being questioned concerning what seemed to be a conflict between the secretary of agriculture and Price Control Administrator Henderson as to who was going to regulate farm prices. He said if they didn't agree he could fire them both.

The controversy had been forgotten and Secretary Wickard, who can talk only naïve talk, isn't our grain to lose anything. If we sell our grain at 15 per cent below parity he knows that he can get that 15 per cent back, through benefits payments for soil conservation.

That is the explanation of the case which sounds simple even to the layman. But that isn't the way the President explained it. He said that if the department of agriculture did not have its way the cost of eating would be raised a billion dollars a year.

But the fact remains that the President is satisfied that Mr. Wickard knows never he is doing what he is doing what the President thinks is right.

Of course this doesn't make it any easier to do, it wouldn't make it necessary that the people accept it, if they prefer some other program. It is following among the veterans it can write its own ticket. We are still a democracy. It is a lot shorter from direct contact with either the so-called propaganda bureaus or the censorship. A man whom I know in the Office of Facts and Figures once called me up and said that he would be able to give me some interesting information from time to time.

As to the censorship, the radio chains drew up their own code before the censorship organization was founded. It is based largely on common sense and except for certain specific details this code differs very little from the rules which the censor expects us to follow. Before I go on the air a member of the news staff of the Blue network reads over my script. So far nothing has been changed so far as I can recall.

Until we have official confirmation from the army or navy we are not allowed to reveal any troop movements, or any ship movements. Ship movements include vertical movements downwards (thinkings). When we repeat information contained in enemy statements we have to say they are enemy statements and if possible we balance them with some statement from a friendly source.

Behind all censorship, behind all regulation of the press and action in wartime is one rule: do not give aid and comfort to the enemy. Specific information of a nature that gives aid and comfort to the enemy. We may feel positive that the enemy can get or has already obtained that information, but we are not to repeat it publicly. Certain things are printed in the newspapers which the radio cannot broadcast because radio waves travel everywhere and the reception is instantaneous.

A weather report can be picked up by the radio in a few minutes of the coast. That submarine could not get a copy of a newspaper until it made physical contact with the shore of the continent who was there.

Beyond the field of factual information which might give aid and comfort to the enemy lies another field: the field of surplus food. No comment of a nature which might be interpreted as giving aid and comfort to the enemy. Here we simply have to use our own judgment. Criticism of our government or of the government of one of the belligerent nations gives comfort if not aid, to the enemy. But I have never been called on the carpet for reporting such criticism when it occurs.

Boys and Girls - Play Safe

Follow These Safety Suggestions

Kite flying is a healthful sport and lots of fun, but danger lurks when kites are flown near electric lines. Don't run the risk of death or serious injury. Follow these precautions and be safe:

- 1 Fly your kites in open fields as far away as possible from electric power lines.
- 2 Do not use wire or metallic kite strings.
- 3 Do not climb poles to retrieve tangled kites.
- 4 Do not use metal kite sticks or wooden sticks bound with wire.
- 5 Do not fly kites with wet string or in wet weather.
- 6 Do not poke sticks at kites caught in wires or try to pull them down by their tails.

If you see a kite caught in an electric line, call our office at once. Our employees know how to remove kites without endangering anyone or causing an interruption to electric service.
