Withers, a railroad contractor.

Orlando and Wildie were named by D. N. Williams. Wildie is a combination of the names of Will and Dee Albright, witnesses of that locality at the coming of the railroad. Langford was named for Moses Langford.

The Convoy here owned large tracts of land in the locality which now bears their name, at the period when the railroad first came thru that section.

1666th takes its name from nearby Boone's Gap, well known in early Kentucky history.

Steigal's Station became Broadhead, after a contractor by that name built a railroad thru the town.

There does not seem to be even a legend to give a clue as to how McVernon received its name, but it is supposed to have followed the example of towns in many other states, and to have taken itself in honor of George Washington's Virginia home.

Wabst, four miles southeast of Mt. Vernon, took its name from the initials of W. A. B. Davis, well known county school superintendent of the earlier days.

Level Green was named by some citizen with a sense of humor.

Bromo, for want of a better bet, or from pure laziness, simply abbreviated the name taken from a patent medicine box by the first postmaster.

Many years ago Copley, just north of Sinks tunnel, was known as the Roundstone. Somehow Roundstone drifted up to one mile north of Wildie, taking the name with it.

Qual was given its name by W. A. B. Davis, who had a store at that place and sold large numbers of this prized game bird from the local hunters.

Handford came from Will Handford, an early postmaster.

Burr is named from that obnoxious weed which has always been a natural growth in that locality.

A large hill just south of the railway station, with a pine tree projecting from its summit, is responsible for Pinobill.

The McCracken family name was adopted by that postoffice in the western part of the county.

Hatt was named for A. C. Hiant, its first postmaster.

A well-known former resident of Rockcastle, D. N. Williams, was called upon to write a dispute over what name a certain postoffice should bear. After many days of controversy and what appeared to be a hopeless argument, Mr. Williams managed to compromise with Disputants.

Called a short time later to intercede in a similar dispute only a few miles distant, Mr. Williams exhausted his patience and ended by calling the postoffice Climax.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By HAROLD L. LUNDQUIST, D. D., of the Moody Bible Institute, Chicago (Released by Western Newspaper Union)

Lesson for April 12

Lesson subjects and Scripture texts are prepared by the International Council of Religious Education, Inc., by receiving upon the ones who can best

THE MISSION OF THE SEVENTY

LESSON TEXT—Luke 10:1-17, 11:21-24. GOLDEN TEXT—The harvest truly is plenteous, but the laborers are few.

Working with Christ for the salvation of men has been the privilege of believers since the time He chose the twelve. We learn today that there were at least seventy whom He considered dependable and worthy to be sent forth.

I. Sent to Serve Christ (vv. 1-3). Prayer is the backbone of the life of laborers for Christ. God waits for His people to lay before Him the need, and to enlist His grace in meeting upon the ones who can best serve Him.

Observe that the Lord sent His seventy "two by two." This is a sign of His power which has been given to the church with which to "move" the hand of God.

He sent them to go "before His name" what a glorious place to be! That means that He was watching over them, expecting them really to "abide" for Him.

It is well when workers go out that they have proper backing. We speak of the "board" which is behind our missionaries.

They were not to be concerned about money. Christ had already moved upon the hearts of His people that they should "hire" which was food and shelter (v. 7).

There is what life is made of, and the servants of Christ do not waste it in lengthy oriental salutations (v. 4), or going from house to house to be entering, thus losing much time and strength.

Nor was he to strive or become angry if some one did not receive and his greeting was not returned. In any case his word would return in blessing upon himself (v. 6), and he could go on to another house.

III. Successful Through Christ (vv. 11-34). The seventy returned rejoicing that even the demons were subject to them in Jesus' name.

While it is a great thing thus to be the power of God at work, Jesus told them in verse 20 that an even greater thing is to have one's name written in heaven.

The secret of the disciples' victory is found in the statements which Christ in all humility and honor made about Himself (vv. 22-24). He is the one to whom "all things are delivered"—unlimited in authority and power.

The mystery of His person and work is something man can think out or fully comprehend (how foolish have been the attempts to measure up to Him). He is God. The fact that the Father had revealed these things to the seventy humble, ordinary men caused Christ to testify His Father's name, to praise and prayer.

Need to Slow Up. The church needs to slow up for it is attempting too much in social programs and in its evangelistic work in many places.

Need to Sharpen Scissors. Put on the whole armor that we have put on, yet do not discharge to leave off any part of it.

What should I eat? by Lynn Chambers

Most vital question every homemaker is now facing is how to substitute certain available foods for shortages. Sugar shortages and reduced supplies of fats, oils and certain imports make it necessary for every one of you to revise your meals in some respects and use substitutes.

FIRST AID ERRORS

One of the jokes of 20 years ago was the expression "the patient has had all his teeth removed but he still has his rheumatism." This "joke" died a natural death because while the removal of infected teeth sometimes stirred up the poisons around the teeth and these poisons increased the rheumatic pain, nevertheless within six weeks to six months in the majority of cases, there was actually complete or partial relief from pain.

It would appear that some of our jokers of these are now making fun of those who are taking courses in first aid and the injured. Thus a recent newspaper item quoted the experience of a group of first aid students who set a supposed fractured leg. After the leg was splinted, in attempting to place the victim in an ambulance, he fell off the stretcher and did break his leg.

What Should Be Done. We must of us know how to splint a broken bone, stop bleeding, and treat shock, there is sometimes a shortage of knowledge shown in handling head injuries.

Dr. C. J. Potthoff, Minneapolis, in the Journal of the American Medical Association states that whether there is concussion or a stroke of a serious nature should be 1. Keep the victim quiet.

tonsillitis while she was here. But was recovering rapidly at the time of her departure for home. Elizabeth Chandler, D. B. Chandler, Elizabeth Chandler and wife and Mary Elizabeth Chandler attended the funeral of Mr. Oscar Hamm on Friday at the Savoyers burying ground. We were very sorry to learn of her dear deepest sympathy.

Mrs. Bettye Farley and granddaughter, Audrey Sue Chandler, visited relatives last week at Pennington Gap, Va.

Four correspondence has been ill for a week with influenza. Am glad to say I am recovering the slowly. It's certainly a mean old disease.

Mr. H. Atkinson is having Bill Carson paint his house at this place and the Davis boys from Brodhead are papering the house. He will move his family here from Louisville for the summer.

D. B. and Leon Chandler, Mr. Frank Painter and R. H. Atkinson were at Guinsins Island Wednesday fishing. They had fishermen's luck. A revival meeting is being conducted at the Holiness church at this place by the pastor, Rev. Bloomfield, and Rev. Thomas the visiting minister. I did not learn where he was from.

A baby boy called "Rudelle" arrived March 24th to make it's home with Rev. and Mrs. Bloomfield, Ky. Mrs. Hilda Layne, of Kosmosdale, Ky., was here for a few days visiting her father, S. E. Chandler also the Rev. and Mrs. H. Atkinson and daughters, Nina and Madge

INSTALLMENT FOURTEEN

THE STORY SO FAR: Ken Watson, who has come to Honolulu to press her claim to the island estate of Alaska, learns that she is not an heiress as she is her grandfather, Garrett Watson, is still alive and on his way to the island. She and Tonga Dick or Richard Wayne, a member of the Wayne family which has been in control of the property since her grandfather's disappearance, find they are in love and decide to leave the island of Alaska together. But when they quarrel and angered, Dick orders a return to Alaska. Meantime a native house-girl who has stowed away aboard ship is stricken wounded by her native lover, who suspects her of being unfaithful. Karen accuses Dick of having made love to this girl, Liliu. Dick and Karen continue their quarrel and Dick tells her he has protected her in a serious situation.

Now continue with the story.

"Protected? What situations?"

"What would have happened to your claim on Alaska if you had been held on suspicion of murder?"

"Karen's astonished eyes looked to his face. "Murder?" she gasped. "What on earth are you talking about?"

"What do you think my brother would have done if they had found out that you were with James Wayne when he died?"

"But—how?"

"Oh, I know you didn't mean to harm him. Even without the call excitement of seeing you, I dare say he wouldn't have lasted another twenty-four hours. But you know how Willard and Ernest would have seized upon the fact that you were with him—and then he would have been investigated—would have been an ugly and uncomfortable thing."

"I wish him!" Karen repeated indignantly.

"You see," Dick said, "you're not honest with me even yet. Who did you think picked up the broken teacup?"

"Dear God, I'll never smell ginger flowers again without remembering—"

"What is it?"

"The lei I gave you, that I brought to your room, the night my uncle died. The lei that you wore when you went to see him. The lei that broke, and still lay scattered all over the floor when I found him sitting there, dead."

"What do you mean—you've thought all this time—"

"I opened the windows, and let the wind sweep away the smelt of the perfume," she said nothing. I even respected your own silence, and said nothing to you."

"I think," Karen said, "I could have forgiven anything in the world but that. This is too much, Dick. You see?"

"I believe," Dick said, "I believed in you—I believed in you as you haven't believed in anything since I can remember. God help me, I believe in you yet, but I can't any longer believe that you are for me."

"No," Karen said, her voice strange and shaky, "not for you. Never for you again."

"Again? You never were!"

"When you came, for me, and I ran away with you from the Seal, I belonged to you as much as I'll ever belong to anybody. More, perhaps. Even when you—when Liliu turned up in your cabin, in that savage, half-naked rig, I was disgusted and hurt, but I would have got over it, I think. Only—I didn't know you then."

"You think you know me now?"

"As well as I ever care to, Dick."

When the Holokai was anchored again in Alakoa's little bay, Dick and Karen roved back to the Seal, from which he had taken her a little while back. They had been gone less than two hours yet the circumstances under which he had brought her to the Holokai from the Seal had changed so far away that they might have existed in another world.

As she left the Holokai he offered her a steady hand, to help her into the small boat, but she stepped down lightly without his help, hardly glancing at him. They had nothing to say to each other as she left.

The Holokai's boat had hardly left her side when Alakoa's shore launch pulled up to the dock, bringing the doctor for whom Dick had received. The same Japanese physician who had attended James Wayne came aboard the Holokai briskly, looking as gravely worried as his round moon of a face would permit. Dick took him below deck and went back.

Liliu was resting more quietly, now, under the detachedly watchful eyes of the Chinese mess boy and the Filipino cook.

"This girl has been stabbed," Dick told Dr. Shimazu shortly. "A little blood has oozed down, but leave her until she can properly be moved."

The Japanese, evidently interested in the notting hand, had already stabbed the girl himself, and might have been a shrewd and cautious look, but without learning anything; and Dick went back.

Garrett Watson's vessel was standing in by now. Already the mournful blast of her whistle were calling for the pilot of the boat, who had dropped overside into the launch, drove it out of the bay in a short-circuit through the bill of the breakers, and went aboard the Seal. A stocky Norwegian with a curly brown beard—his name was Stahl-

"You see," Inyashi said, uneasy under Dick's stare, "if we send no pilot, Mr. Colt and Miss Waters will have to stay here."

"I don't mind him as the raft, and paced beside Dick as he went to the beach."

"Might as well kick her on the Old Man's in another fever. She wouldn't know you probably, even if you could get him awake."

"How long will he be himself for a while, and raising hell. I don't know what he's coming to."

"Dick took the wheel, signaled his engine, and snaked the Seal in through the coral. He anchored her between the Holokai and the Seal."

"You're in for it," Stahlquist encouraged him. "All the way up, the Old Man's been raving and cussing at you for putting out with the Holokai without no orders."

"When he wakes up," Dick said, "I'll tell him to keep his shirt on. There isn't anything here to get in a hurry about; not now."

Dick Wayne went back to the Holokai. On her deck he stood for a few moments, looking across at the Seal, and fumbling in his pockets for his pipe, which had become misplaced. He was still standing there when Inyashi came trotting to him.

"What's the matter, who was hurt?" Dick asked at once.

"I think she is still—all right."

"Most of the time. When she is not quiet, she is calling for this Holokai. The doctor gave her a shot of something."

"Have somebody cut Hokani's wrists and ankles loose and bring him to me."

"Captain, that is dangerous. That would be to kill you, I think."

"Do as I say, anyway."

Hokani flung Dick Wayne one dead, uninterpretable glance, moving unsteadily; he walked back to Dick's stateroom and disappeared.

Dick drank his whiskey and went on deck. What he wanted was to be quiet, and alone in the dark, like any animal which has been hurt and yet doesn't dare let its wounds be seen. But it seemed that in this night there was no quiet to be had. Dick Wayne had no more than walked to the rail of the Holokai when the Seal's boat was alongside, and there was a great clamoring for Captain Wayne—this time from Ranney himself.

"Well—what the hell is it now?"

"Look, Tonga! This was—Raymeyer whimpers, "how about giving a guy a lift here, in a bad fix? How am I supposed to get out of this hole? How am I supposed to know where the channel is, in a black night like this? What's the matter with giving a guy a hand?"

"Just what is it you want, Raymeyer?" Dick asked, knowing well enough.

"Half the boys you've got aboard your tub are Alakoa Kanakas. What's the matter with lending me one to steer me out of here, before these people practically scalp me, by God? These people want to get going. I tell you, these people are raising hell because I don't jerk my anchor up and get away from you expect me to do, if you haven't the common decency to lend a man a—"

"Colt burning you up?"

"Well, what if he is? Can you blame him if he wants to get his ass out of this lousy sink? All I'm asking is—"

"Tell you what you do," Dick said. "You tell Colt to take a flying jump into the bay. After he's jumped in the bay, tell him to dry himself thoroughly with a rough towel, and put on dry clothes. Explain to him that it's very foolish to stand around all wet."

"Damn it, can't you even lend a man a—"

"I'm not lending you anything. You're going to keep the Seal exactly where she is until it's light enough for you to sound your way out. Even then you may pile her up—and you know it! It suits me to have you and your customers stay where you are."

"I tell you, Tonga, these people—"

"Steal a bottle of whiskey and go hide on shore. I'll give you no pilot tonight."

PATTERNS SEWING CIRCLE

body and in addition gives that originality which younger girls seek in their fashions. Pattern No. 1520-B is bound to be regarded highly by the younger set anyway, because it also presents that very popular feature—the dirndl skirt—in this case a dirndl skirt with a snug fitting belt which ties in back with Bash ends.

Barbara Bell Pattern No. 1520-B is designed for sizes 6, 8, 10, 12 and 14 years. Size 6 requires 2 1/2 yards 20-inch material. A separate collar. Send your order by:

The True Role

The true role, in determining to embrace or reject anything, is not whether it have any evil in it, but whether it have more of evil than of good.

There are few things wholly evil or wholly good. Almost everything, especially of government policy, is an inseparable compound of the two, so that our best judgment of the preponderance between them is continually demanded.—A. Lincoln.

Real Happiness

You will not rightly call him a happy man who possesses much; he more rightly earns the name of happy who is skilled in wisely using the gifts of the gods, and who suffers hard poverty, and who fears disgrace as worse than death.—Horace.
