INSTALLMENT SIXTEEN

THE STORY SO FAR: Karen Waterson, believing herself to be the heir to Alaska, the island estate of her grandfather, finds herself no heiress at all, when the old gentleman, Captain Ramey, turns up after a long disappearance. Meantime she and her lawyer have been held in a dispute over the rights to the property with the Wayne family who have been in possession since the old man left many years before. Richard (Tonga Dick) Wayne has fallen to love with Karen, and has quarreled with Dick, Karen decides to leave Alaska, John Colt, who has been with her since she arrived at Alaska and is very ill with fever but expresses a wish to see Karen. As Tonga Dick goes to find her he sees that she and Colt have put out to sea. He is determined to bring Karen back to see her grandfather.

New continues with the story.

CHAPTER XIV

Even yet, behind the back of Alaska, continued the music and dancing which was an extension of the wake for the death of James Waterson; relaxing now into an emotional debauch which had forgotten the reason that it began. Consequently the crew of the Holokai held on the vessel when they had expected to go ashore, was as resentful and surly mood. From that frustrated and darkened crew any skipper could expect a sulky handling of lines and gear, and the crew, heavy-weighted by the knowledge of the things about their work. But this time as Dick Wayne swung aboard the Holokai something different happened.

Tonga Dick came aboard relaxed and smiling, and every move that he made was lazy. The easy droop of his whole figure, would, as it seemed, at first glance, be that of a man upon whom anybody could impose. And yet, as soon as he stepped aboard, a peculiar and unexplainable discipline came over the whole length of the Holokai. The crew forgot the doings behind the beach, and the drinking they had missed, and the girls they had missed; suddenly they wanted nothing except to be out of range of the inevitable explosion.

Tonga Dick didn't see any of that. He didn't notice the unaccustomed smartness with which Dick Kanakas got out of his way, nor the naval precision with which Inyashi attended him—not too close. The rail felt unnatural as he swung over the side, because his hands were cold and trembling, and he was seeing nothing except the waving lights of the Seal, probing out through a channel which no one aboard her knew.

The rail rollers that came across two thousand miles of Pacific were bringing low upon the coral reef. No one could make his way through there who had not been born among those reefs—not as a child, but now. Certainly Captain Ramey, bad navigator and weak pilot, could not find his way through. Dick watched the Seal swing steadily in the rap of the tide; he waited confidently, even hopefully, knowing what kind of rock was reaching for the Seal's plates. Presently, he believed he would take the people off the foundering Seal, and put them back where they belonged, and the same time told them to stay. He waited for the reel of the Seal's lights, the sick check of her motion which would mark the physical junction between John Colt's will and the actualities of land and water.

There was a moment, suspended in half-breath, in which he knew the Seal could not live—that the one-eyed Ramey had made one mistake too many. Then, unaccountably, by a whim of the sea, the Seal shook off the reef through a course in which no vessel had ever succeeded yet, and was free in open water. Even the broken-toothed coral seemed to have failed Dick Wayne.

"Take your anchor up," Dick said. His voice was so low that Inyashi, waiting near as he was, had to ask him to repeat.

"Weigh your anchor, and give me the Diesel. What is this? Doesn't anything I say ever stick any more?"

"The Seal was in the open sea; but now the Holokai was coming out, brought by a shorter and easier way. When Dick Wayne had brought her through the treacherous and angling channel he set his hip against the wheel, letting the Holokai back brokenly against the cross chop.

"Inyashi," Dick said, "that is our boat."

"Our boat, Captain?"

"I'm going aboard that boat and bring her back," Dick said.

Something special showed in Inyashi then. Sometimes people wondered why a squat little yellow man, who looked like a clerk in a Japanese dry goods store, should be right-hand man to Dick Wayne. It was that he had been watching, they might have found out something about that now. Inyashi's eyes were written in a peculiar grin, it was deferential still, but a peculiar drawing of the lips made the eye teeth show, so that all at once, without ever being ping out of his place, Inyashi was something else than he had been before.

"Are all the Kanakas aboard?" Dick asked.

"All've em, Captain Dick."

"Bring 'em aboard."

The crew of the Holokai didn't look like much as Inyashi bro-

The one-eyed Captain Ramey was waiting at so nearly the exact spot where Dick took the deck that them up to the wheel which Dick still held. These were slovenly-looking men, not very well washed. Their faces were dark; the hair of some of them had a crinkly bun; the noses of some were swiveling close and flat, and the lips noticeably thick. A Polynesian who, on a surfboard, seems the image of a god, can look like a scum in a gutter.

"You see that boat up there?" Dick said.

None of them said anything, and their faces were inexpressive. The question was rhetorical. Whatever these brown-skinned men might know in this world or the next, they never missed anything on the face of the sea.

"We're going to come up close on that boat in a minute," Dick said. "We're going to swing so close to her that maybe we'll smash her rudder off. I'm going aboard, and I'm going to take her back to Alaska. After I've gone aboard, the Holokai is going to stand by for maybe ten minutes. Within ten minutes the mauling boat will turn and go back. If it doesn't turn—"

Dick Wayne stopped a moment, while he turned the Holokai more sharply into the wake of the Seal's lights.

"Then, Captain?" Inyashi prompted. In the undistinguished yellow face the coming teeth were showing in Inyashi's peculiar new smile.

"It," Dick said, "the Seal does not turn in ten minutes after I have boarded her, the Holokai will come alongside the Seal and lash fast."

"And then—?" Inyashi said again.

"One way or another," Dick said, "I'm going to take the Seal back to Alaska."

Dick Wayne didn't even look at the faces of the Kanakas; he knew what was there. They were looking at each other then, but not in sulky or rebellious. The faces of these men were thick-skinned as that of a gull, and at the same time nothing else—as if the deep-skinned leather had been drawn up by inner cords.

If any hole had anything these men could understand, Dick Wayne had it; and they understood him now. Without looking at them at all, he knew that they would take the Seal, if he named the Seal, no matter what else happened after that. Dick said a little, but not without affection, as he recognized that he was perfectly certain of what these men could be counted on to do.

"Get your buffers out to starboard."

The Seal was all out, and, as Dick already knew, Ramey's boat had a surprising turn of speed; but there was nothing she could do to get away from the Holokai, in the open sea. The Holokai had been built for sail, but she had taken to her power with a surprising surety, so that under her Diesel she went over the water like a Brown shell. Definitely and steadily, with an arithmetic accuracy, the Holokai came up on the Seal; and nothing that she could do or present anything might do could effect that steady overtaking. She could overhaul the unhappy Seal tonight simply by the mathematics of it and in spite of being forgotten designers, some of whom were dead.

"I have to go now," Dick said to Inyashi.

"You mean you mean—"

"Take the wheel and throw her so close that you pick her wheeled with a teeth with the buckle of your belt."

"What are you going to do?" Inyashi demanded.

"I'm going to leave this rail, and go aboard this other boat," Dick said.

"Tonga," Inyashi said, lapsing into the name under which he had first known Dick; "if I miss the swing, even by inches—it just can't be done."

"You go ahead and do it. Take the wheel."

The Holokai's deck crew were lunging against the weather rail as the left-hand wheel. They appeared to be resting; but Dick caught the Twenty citizens of different nationalities and the trip home. Rents were and are outstandingly high. Five months ago Dean paid a real estate agent $30, just to tell him of a house which might be rented. Then he got the house, at a price. A Japanese family lived on one side and a Korean family on the other. The children of the three families received no racial barriers and became pals. Although living on different social planes, the Cartledge family accepted a dinner invitation to the Japanese home (before Pearl Harbor) and the Japanese food. Mrs. Cartledge had her picture taken in Japanese costume.

and most becoming it was. Eggs were normally seventy-five to ninety cents per dozen, milk eighteen cents a quart, oranges sixty cents a dozen and butter fifty cents a pound. Life is again normal on the island except for complete night-blackouts. The boys are praying that the Japs come again for a return engagement just now! But they are hardly expecting it. In fact, they expect to become the visiting team and play the next game in Tokio. The voyage home? Mostly women and children. All were evacuated by military order. It was set out in regulation for the duration. Mrs. Cartledge was packed for three months, before she received her sailing date notice.

She luckily got three days. Folks of ten get two hours. The ship did some zigzagging and detouring around mined waters, but the trip was pleasant and uneventful. There were drills and the passengers wore lifebelts continuously. Food and service was good, but there was no entertainment. The bar sold soft drinks only. The passenger list included one Japanese woman. She was the wife of an American sailor and was on her way, with their child, to stay with his folks in Oklahoma. Her presence excited no comment or demonstration and she was treated kindly. Damage done at Pearl Harbor? Just as President Roosevelt told it. Present state of the island's defenses? Let the Japs come and find out. Morale of the defenders? Excellent, but the boys fighting mad and certain that it's only a matter of time. How did our boys fight? It was wonderful.

Navy Forced to Reveal Enemy Subs Destroyed ... Buck Being Passed On U. S. Synthetic Rubber Program ...

(By Syndicate-WTU Service.)

WASHINGTON.—Public opinion forced the radical revision of the navy's policy of not announcing sinking or capture of submarines.

The other day the sender of the "Sighted sub; sank same" message got his second U-boat (and was promised to enjoin) the navy department announced that at least 20 subs had been put out of action.

This was still far from what the people wanted to know. For instance, the navy still insists that these 20 had been eliminated "in the Atlantic and Pacific"; 20 obviously includes some U-boats sunk in the Southwest Pacific. What the people were worked up about was the sinkings by subs in the Atlantic which had become a menace as to worry the British government.

If we had been told more often just how many subs were being sunk in the Atlantic and particularly in waters close to our own shores there may have been a greater feeling of relief like that which has been known, which originated with the British navy in the last war, that it is much better tactics not to let the public know when one of our subs has been destroyed, captured, or damaged.

Silence on Subs Sunk

The policy of the British, which we have adopted, is that the German admiralty has a pattern in its placing of submarines for operations against supply lines. The thought is that when a couple of holes have been smashed in this pattern, and the enemy does not know it, we can take advantage for a short period, perhaps reaching into weeks, of that superior knowledge—our ships through the hole in the line to attack.

This theory is supported by a wealth of experience, the British admiralty believes, so it is difficult to argue against it.

It is supported also by the fact that while submarines can surface at night and listen for radio orders they do not dare do so at the enemy camp for fear of being detected. So the navy now is doing the best it can in that direction without actually flying in the face of the major strategy in submarine warfare. Hence the announcement that 20 submarines have been put out of action "in the Atlantic and Pacific."

It is not always easy to be SURE that a submarine is demolished. But in most of the attacks on the Atlantic coast the locating of a sub and the dropping of the depth charges have been done by airplane, and a message in a plane, circling over the spot where the quarry was last seen, has a better chance of telling us whether the attack was effective than would the men on a destroyer, due to the fact that one can see things under the surface of the water from a plane than from a destroyer's bridge.

Background on Present Rubber Situation

There is much talk passing on this synthetic rubber situation. The assistant Attorney General Thurman Arnold is trying to hang all the blame on the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey.

Actually the company seems to have done a pretty fair job in trying to interest the government in time before the present shortage of tires and other necessary war material.

The Jones' enemies have tried to pin the nickname "Bottle Neck" on him. Actually it has been shown pretty conclusively that it was President Roosevelt himself who blocked the synthetic rubber program.

So what? It is rather difficult to survey all the facts that could have been before the President at the time and then charge that he showed bad judgment. On the facts in hand, it should be admitted that, the President's judgment was not only good internally, but—much more notably—sound economically!

Let's look at the picture as it was before the time he made the decision. Here was a proposal to make rubber out of oil. There were two kinds—two processes. Both of them were more expensive than production of rubber from the sap of rubber trees. One of them was definitely admitted not to be as good as natural rubber.

Either would cost more than we were paying the British and Dutch for rubber, which was 22 cents a pound. But—yes, that the British and Dutch could produce rubber and sell it to us at a profit at 10 cents a pound!

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Lesson for April 26

WAYSIDE CONVERSATIONS

LESSON TEXT—Luke 13:28-35. GOLDEN TEXT—And whosoever doth not bear his cross, cannot follow me, cannot be my disciple.—Luke 14:27.

Learning by talking with Christ as they walked from place to place—such was the training for service which the disciples received. That was the great school which has ever known, for while it had no great buildings, no beautiful campus, no learned faculty, it had the Son of God Himself as preceptor and teacher. With all due regard for our fine colleges and seminaries, we need a different following of the great Christian workers—to walk and talk with Christ.

On the day of which our lesson speaks the subject considered was how to be saved, and who should be saved. Several trends of thought emerged, but all pointed in the one direction of a diligent following of God's plan. In order to be saved, we learn, a man must:

I. Make an Earnest Effort (vv. 22-24)

The question regarding how many were saved received no direct answer for the Lord wished to direct attention to the more important question—Are you saved? Get that settled and the other matter will care for itself.

Here some assume that it is an easy thing to be saved will receive a surprise, for our Lord (v. 24) that it is something one must agonize to enter by the narrow "strive" to be translated. The door into eternal life is so narrow that no man can pass through it with only a good intention. Seeking is not enough (v. 24), one must "strive" to enter in.

II. Enter While the Door is Open (vv. 25-27)

The door stands open for all who will, to come in. (What a friendly thing is an open door!) But men are slow to enter by the light of opportunity. Or they seek it, but do not strive to enter in, and all at once it is closed. Then in a frenzy they enter by the light of opportunity. What an appalling thing—to be eternally lost!

Note the claims of acquaintance with the Lord (v. 28). One is reminded of those who think they are Christians because father or mother belonged to the church, or because they attend an occasional church supper or listen to a sermon by radio. Unless we know Him personally, as our Saviour, we will have to appeal to us, Depart from me, ye workers of iniquity" (v. 27). Let us then not matter very clear to those to whom we minister, lest they be eternally lost.

III. Follow the Fearless Christ (vv. 31-33)

To know the high and unwavering character of one's leader is to go forward with real confidence. What might the Captain of our salvation? Here we find the fearless, bold, and threat of a powerful and wicked earthly ruler, in perfect calmness, the very voice of eternity upon Him.

Christ, conscious of His divine mission and with determination to do His Father's will (John 10:7). He knew no fear of man. As we are in His holy will as Christian men and women, we too may boldly stand under the surface of the world, not fear what man shall do unto me" (Heb. 13:6).

Consider the rebuke to Herod (v. 32) who was probably the ruler of the province where our Lord spoke with such stinging contempt of any man. It is almost as though the black cloud of eternal judgment already had settled around the head of this man who was so sly and crafty that the tenderhearted Jesus called him a "fox." One wonders of how many He would have to say the same in this our day of supreme and malicious wickedness.

We find one more vitally important thought here. Our Lord offers Himself. He calls sinners to repentance, but they must be brought to Him as Saviour (either by neglect or by definite act) is inevitably to bring judgment. To the Jews this meant the loss of their nation—home—their leading city, but to us it means the loss of our eternal souls.

There is terrible suggestiveness in the two statements in verse 34, "I would," "Ye would not." The whole secret of Jerusalem's desolation and destruction is found in the words, "Ye would not." The whole secret of the loss of the individual soul is found in the words, "Ye will not" (John 5:40) (John W. Barton).

This lesson presses home to the individual reader the question, Are you saved? We are you saved? It also affords the Sunday school teacher an excellent opportunity to lead to the members of the class to a definite decision for Christ. The Sunday school is a good place to give an invitation.

TO YOUR GOOD HEALTH

By Dr. Jas. W. Barton

(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

SNORING

The unfair part about snoring is that the individual doing the snoring enjoys sleep while he annoys others by preventing sleep.

Snoring is caused by some air entering with the passage of air to and from the lungs; the obstruction can be at various points between the lungs and outside of mouth and nose. To come greatly relaxed so that just part of nose, throat or bronchial tubes is being partly open.

Dr. Barton stressed requires careful observation by physician, nurse, or some member of the household.

The commonest causes of obstruction are:

- (1) Falling backward of the tongue when the individual is lying on his back.
- (2) An accumulation of mucus, large or small, in the nose or throat.
- (3) The muscles of the soft palate become so relaxed in sleep that soft palate falls against the roof of the hard palate. This interferes with the passage of air through the nose when the individual is lying on his back.
- (4) The muscles controlling the vocal cords during deep sleep become greatly relaxed so that the throat becomes partially closed and air has less space to pass through this part of the throat going in and coming out of the lungs. As when one is awake and lets his throat hang "loose," as it were, shut closing of the throat may be resulting in and out causes snoring.

Preventive Methods.

Now that some of the causes of snoring are known, what can be done about it?

There are cases where the obstruction is on one side of the nose. By lying on that side, the outer side or wing of the nose is kept open by the division membrane (septum) thus giving a wide opening or passage for air.

When the cause of snoring is in the throat, vigorous blowing of the nose first through one nostril and then the other before going to sleep may prevent snoring.

Tying a handkerchief or band around top of head and under chin keeps mouth from opening freely. Experience shows that if snoring is individual lying on his back is disturbed and turns and lies on either side or on his abdomen, he stops snoring. If this can be prevented from lying on his back by mechanical means, snoring may be prevented.

Prevention of Mental Disorders

Just a few years ago tuberculosis—consuming of the body—was considered a fatal disease; the patient might last for months or even a year or two, but the disease would surely carry him off. Similarly with diabetes and pernicious anemia. Today, tuberculosis stands well down the list of the causes of death and to have tuberculosis is no longer a death warrant.

Similarly with diabetes and pernicious anemia. As long as diabetes takes their insulin regularly they are safe, and patients with pernicious anemia have but to use liver or liver extract to overcome the disease.

What appears to be an even harder problem is the prevention and cure of mental ailments, yet Dr. Frederic H. Leavitt, Philadelphia, as guest editor of the Medical World, states this should be tackled just as tuberculosis was tackled and overcome. Tuberculosis, the great white plague, was captain of the legions of death. Through a campaign of education in acquainting the general public with knowledge of the cause, prevention and treatment, tuberculosis, in many places, has dropped from first to fifth place as cause of death.

The same results may be obtained in the prevention of mental ailments. The best of the medical profession. It can be accomplished by a campaign of educating the general public as to the cause, prevention and treatment.

Dr. Leavitt points out the excellent results by educating the public about mental ailments obtained in the treatment of the "destroyer" of the minds of young men and women—dementia praecox or persistent dream state—particularly by the treatment with insulin and metrazol shock.

THE SIGN OF DEPENDABLE SERVICE FOR ANY CAR OR TRUCK

SEE YOUR LOCAL CHEVROLET DEALER

Today, more than ever before, this sign beckons all car and truck owners who want the skilled, reliable service that comes with: (1) trained mechanics, (2) quality materials, and (3) reasonable service rates... You can expect this kind of service from your Chevrolet dealer because, for years, Chevrolet dealers have had the largest number of "trade-ins" and therefore the widest experience in servicing and conditioning all makes of cars and trucks.
