The 20 Bar herd was strung out over a half-mile of the flat. Behind the lead cattle the straggling column moved forward toward that distant plume of gray smoke that more led a train on the new railroad. Con Cameron was one of the eight swinging riders divided between the two ends of the herd. He was a muscular, quick-moving, with alert gray eyes in a smooth, square face. He looked younger than his twenty years, in spite of small, reddish mustache and shaggy hair and the

ing. Like the other riders, he was very shabby. His dusty old Stetson and too-big boots and patched flannel shirt and open-creased trousers were in spite of small, reddish mustache and shaggy hair and the got and politeness out of him while they're ripping the hide off him. You bring up a herd of longhorns and if you don't know the ropes, you'll get skinned when you sell to one of the buyers in the ring. If you don't like the price and decide you'll ship somehows else for a fair offer, something'll likely happen to you, and your longhorns they'll end up in that buyer's iron that you wouldn't deal with.

Asa. I could drive in or not drive in. And I'm well-known among cowmen. If something was to happen to me, there'd be trouble with some salty customers, plenty of 'em. Love is a stranger. Brock stands in with the crowd that runs Wild Horse. He'll try some shenanigan, keep Love from getting away."

"Well, it's Wild Horse tomorrow, son, he greeted Con. "See that smoke smoke? That's believe it or not, a fifteen mile off, huh?" "It was just watching it. And that's the end of the line," he said. "Well," Buzz Upperman drawled, reflectively, "I been trailing cattle one place and another, it's a good year; now, this this way has been crowded than any other of four drives I ever made, all put together. Well, you're some different from the rest of the boys in this camp that night with old Zeletus Imel's freight outfit. You filled out plenty on 20 Bar, beef and beans and a lot of hard work. And you made a hand, son. I'm free to tell you that. Nothing wrong with your way and roping and riding, and plenty that's all right with all of 'em. Funny . . . you picking up things like that, around Chicago steers."

Near the corral a fat, red-faced, and noisy man came to meet the 20 Bar. With him was a short, very wide man, who had huge hands and the bulging gray eyes of a short-tempered person. Con observed the expensive gray Stetson, the fine broadcloth suit, the gleaming kid boots, of this man and wondered if he were the buyer Buzz Upperman had dealt with. Then, as if settling some argument with the fat man, the dandy said snarlingly:

Lowe had freed himself of the persistent, looking all around the room with his faint, pleasant smile. Now he went out, and Brock, angry very plain in the set of his fat back, looked after him. Then he whirled and went waddling toward the gambling side of the Drovers', where men were crowding about the games. He disappeared but came quickly in sight beside Dynamite Downes. The stocky, dandified marshal of Wild Horse looked toward the dealer, blank-faced as the grizzled lookout above him, glanced at the layout, and dealt. When Baldy won, he threw up his head as a yell. Then, meeting the sour stare of the lookout, he swallowed and drew in his whinnies.

"Well, it's as I told you Uncle Hugh worked around the yards. He'd lived in Texas long time, but his wife, maybe until they made him come back to what she called civilization. I think I was in Texas, but they they didn't ally told me so, or told me much of anything. Neither was a talker. And they were both killed in an excursion train accident years ago. "When we hit Wild Horse, you'd be free to start out and whittle off your chunk of living. You keep that same and horse and all that rest of his stuff. Then, I'm going to buy you a new rigout from John B. to box-toss. You draw fifty dollars for your work—and you earned it!"

"Dynamite Downes," Caramba whispered to him. Buzz Upperman was promptly as good as his promise, when the herd had been turned over to his buyer. He took Con and Caramba in charge and discouraged the latter's movement toward the inviting doors of the Horse saloons. When a barber shop had done all possible for them in the way of haircuts and haircrems and shaves, he led the way to a general store.

"I'm Biggie of Wild Horse! They better not forget it!" "Dynamite Downes," Caramba whispered to him. Buzz Upperman was promptly as good as his promise, when the herd had been turned over to his buyer. He took Con and Caramba in charge and discouraged the latter's movement toward the inviting doors of the Horse saloons. When a barber shop had done all possible for them in the way of haircuts and haircrems and shaves, he led the way to a general store.

"Why—that's a lot more than I expected! To say nothing of the horse and saddle! I certainly do thank you, I—"

A black Stetson, blue flannel shirt, waist overalls, heavy woolen trousers, boots, a blanket coat, a new slicker, the old man chose for Con and paid for. Caramba out-cried himself at the same time and admired the figure he made.

"Now, we'll have a couple drinks," Upperman told them. "I got business in town and I'm riding the train tonight. I hope you boys get out of town with something in your pockets and nothing through your hides."

"Well, you bright young fellows watch out for Dynamite Downes," Buzz Upperman warned them grinning. "It's the best thing because . . . Miam Fant ain't marshaling now, that you can wait in and tear up Wild Horse by the roots, well, you got another thing coming."

"I'm going to hunt up that bronco," he told Baldy. "Caramba's got to go. Oh! Going to get on us, huh?" the lookout said unpleasantly. "Take some of our money and right away you want to put out winner?"

"Yes, I'm quitting," he told the lookout. "I'm quitting," he told the lookout. "I'm quitting," he told the lookout. "I'm quitting," he told the lookout.

"I suppose they just started with the corral," he said thoughtfully, "but I'll wait the town westward, using the railroad for Main Street."

"His first name here. Drove up a 'll herd of awful good steers. But, mostly, he has got horses, some of the finest, I believe, on his long, long time. Brock wants the whole layout, but this Lowe knows prices. He told Brock that he ain't driving the horses, but he's got a lot of buyers. He gets a decent price or he drives on."

"I'm going to hunt up that bronco," he told Baldy. "Caramba's got to go. Oh! Going to get on us, huh?" the lookout said unpleasantly. "Take some of our money and right away you want to put out winner?"

"She's long and skinny as a copperhead snake. Just about twice as deadly as a copperhead. All they ask from a pore cowboy is all he's

"Young fellow name Nevil Lowe," from the Drovers. "Upperman said."

"But when twenty minutes had gone without any sign of him, Con lost interest in the game. He was more than forty dollars ahead.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

THURSDAY—THE LAST DAY WITH THE DISCIPLES

LESSON TEXT—Luke 22:14-20. GOLDEN TEXT—This day in remembrance of me—Luke 22:19.

"The last day! How quickly it comes, and how fleeting yet meaningful its moments.

We do not know what our Lord did on Wednesday of Passion Week. It is all probable He remained in Bethany to rest in fellowship with His friends. Surely He needed that rest—after that which had gone before, difficult and strenuous. It has been—as withering to that which lay before Him.

Late on Thursday He and His disciples went to the upper room where Peter and John had already made preparation for the observance of the Passover (Luke 22:8). This feast had since that great and awful night of Israel's redemption out of Egypt's bondage pointed forward to the Christ and to His cross as the fulfillment of the type of redemption by the shedding of blood. But now the hour had come for Him to give Himself in that death, and He set aside the Passover (because it has been fulfilled) to establish the great Christian feast of remembrance—the Lord's Table, which now shows forth His death till He come.

I. The Final Passover.

Our Lord looked forward with intense desire to the Passover which He observed with His disciples, for it was the last celebration of it that recognized by God. All that he had freshaged of deliciousness and hope was fulfilled in Him who now sat at the table. He had moved forward with resolute purpose to this day when His mission on earth was to be accomplished and He was to become the Christian's Passover lamb (I Cor. 5:7).

The fact that He had looked forward to it with desire does not minimize the deep darkness of either Gethsemane or Calvary. Remember that, when in the garden He faced that hour and thought of the possibility of the cup being taken from Him, He said to the Father, "Not as I will, but as Thou wilt." Praying concerning the same matter (II John 12:27), he said, "Now is my soul troubled; and what shall I say? Father, if Thou wilt, take this hour; but for this cause came I unto this hour."

II. The First Communion (vs. 19, 20).

Taking the unleavened bread and the unfermented wine of the Passover, which had just been observed, Jesus established a new feast, the Christian feast of remembrance, which is called communion or the Lord's Table.

His words are significant. "For as often as ye eat this bread, and drink this cup, we do show the Lord's death till He come" (I Cor. 11:26). At the Lord's table His followers are united in strength, recalling His death for them, but that He is to come again. They thus testify to His death, as they believe and cherish these truths.

This feast is rightly called "communion," for down through the ages until He does come the saints of God have at His table sweet communion with Him and with another. Let us not neglect it!

But the Lord also spoke of the cup as "my blood of the new testament." The word "testament" means covenant. The Lord's table therefore speaks of our allegiance to Him, of our loyalty to our Lord, and our devotion to His service. That is why the Christian Church speaks of communion as a sacrament, a word from the Latin sacramentum, meaning oath, and essentially an oath of allegiance.

III. The Folly of the Disciples (vs. 21-23).

Someone may say, "This point does not belong with the other two. Both the Passover and the Lord's Supper, for the joyful remembrance of deliverance and redemption." The objection is well taken except for one thing—we are dealing here not with the past but with the future as they should be as they should be as they should be by the grace of God.

Here in the inner circle of the disciples was one traitor. It seems impossible, but apparently Judas had maintained such outward conduct as to turn no suspicion in that direction even though all along he had in his heart the blackest of treachery against his Lord. A sad and self-searching fact is here revealed, that it is possible for one to make a high profession of faith in Christ and even so to live as to give no cause for criticism, and yet to be untrue to Him and in fact the enemy of Christ.

What about the strife regarding position? Shameful as we agree that it was, it still goes on in the church. Not even the remembrance of our Lord's death and the reminder that He is coming again is enough to keep men from wanting to be great.

In the fall of 1907 John Hardy had been living in Rockcastle County...

The Hardy's had just retired one Saturday night when they found footprints on the road...

"Felly" being shot and killed. We're taking to town, I want to know...

Shuffedick, John Hardy groped his way to the matches and lit his lamp...

After a while John Hardy decided that he'd better make the best of the job...

Remorsefully Hardy tossed upon a prison cot for the remainder of the night...

Hardy gripped the Judge's hand tight as he stammered, "You mean that I—"

"Oh, yes! It was a dead man you saw those fellows carrying all right,"

"Then the Judge told how the drunken man had evidently staggered on to the Hardy house...

The woman, having witnesses, was cleared at her examining trial...

War Effort Strengthened By High School Graduates

Armed Services, Industry and Farms Lure 1942 Students; Vocational Training Now Becoming Increasingly Important.

By WILLARD E. GIVENS

Executive Secretary, National Education Association.

IT HAS been estimated that over one million boys and girls will leave high school this spring with their diplomas.

It is this same group of boys and girls, the youth of the nation, who were figuratively being spoken to when a commencement speaker said to a group of graduates before him:

"You have seen more history than you have read. During the first half of 1942, the pages of history have been turning fast, recording the names of men and their deeds in the greatest of all ages."

And now today, not only the high school graduate, but all those who have read the story of man's upward struggle from the dim days of history to the present time, recognize the climax of history in which they are now living. Each and every one of these high school graduates is seeking to find the proper place, the suitable niche to which he will fit.

The significance of today. Only to the man who is in some measure educated is it granted to know what is going on about him and to estimate its significance.

There is an old story of two peasants of Brabant who were weeding their crops on a sultry June day in 1318 when the guns of the Iron Duke greeted those of Bonaparte in Waterloo. One of the peasants lifted his eyes from his hoe and scanned the horizon. "Soldier," he said, "if I haders, it will rain today!" As the guns of destiny broke the silence of their fields, these two peasants went on hoeing their vegetables, almost as ignorant as their beets and cabbages of what went on anywhere else in the world, in the limited sphere in which they moved.

The mental isolation of mankind in the not-so-long-ago unhappy days of the human race when one class of men preyed upon another to enjoy the culture and refinement of wide knowledge, and another class was doomed to live and die in poverty and misery, is banished. Universal education has banished it. The high school, especially, is responsible for making this vast, different world from the one which existed a century and a quarter ago when Europe was shaken as it is today by the clash of arms and ideals, and only a few knew the issues and issues still had a part in reality, live men.

Today, high school students see themselves in the setting of time and events. Their hearts are stirred that finds its expression in a common question, "What is my place in all this?"

Some of the boys may volunteer at once for service in one of the armed forces. The army has just announced that volunteers 18 and 19 years old may select training in the combat branch of their own preference—infantry, cavalry, artillery, tank corps, air corps, signal corps, or corps of engineers. Others will wait the decision of the Selective Service system as to where and when they may serve best.

Many graduates will continue their education under the direction of the navy, which has in operation plans by which graduates may go on to college and pursue studies in which they may earn college credits and at the same time prepare for more effective service in the navy. From this number, the huge two-ocean battle fleet now building in our shipyards will receive many of its commissioned officers.

War industries to hire many. Some thousands of these high school graduates will be needed by the War Production board, over ten million additional war industry workers will be needed within the year ahead to staff plants now being built or expanded.

The vocational training activities in California are typical of those in many cities near great shipyards or other centers producing the machinery of war. On April 1, 1942, there were 110 classes of "defense training" in the Oakland schools, enrolling 3,901 students. This number is increasing. The number of students the Oakland schools were prepared to accommodate in this kind of work.

During the month of February and March an average of 800 trained workers a month were placed in war manufacturing from the school system. There have never been sufficient trainees enrolled to meet the demand for riveters, chippers, caulkers, ship fitters, sheet metal

Victory vs. Luxury

"My older brother who finished high school in 1941 harnessed up the tires of his old jalopy on the highways at sixty miles an hour, either pleasure or business trip. He said that, 'Youth, like the rest of us, must sacrifice some of the refinements of existence, and colors, the struggle is over, may I forego some of the necessities.'" workers, electricians, ship carpenters, joiners and other skilled trades.

There is opportunity of some kind today for youth everywhere. All can join in the "great adventure" in some capacity. This is true for girls as well as for boys. Many girls are taking their places in the war industries. The great expansion of offices in Washington and other centers of administration, the need of stenographers, typists, stenographers, clerks and secretaries. Many girls are enrolling in nursing courses which lead to a career in the service, for some of which officer's commissions are available. In the armed forces.

The kinds of military work for girls to choose from are numerous, and announcements of further opportunities are expected from time to time.

Oftentimes the impulse to seek service far afield is ill advised. There is also the home front. While stateside it is prepared to resist invasion from land, sea or air, civilian defense is vital. First aid, air raid drills, auxiliary fire and police service must be trained and advised.

In hundreds of agricultural communities high school graduates will be needed for cultivator handles and hoes. There is much truth in the slogan that "Food will win the war." The

TO YOUR Good Health

By DR. JAMES W. BARTON
(Quoted by Western Newspaper Union)

FOLLOWING A DIET

A man of 62 in good health had a hemorrhage from the stomach, was rushed to the hospital, and given two blood transfusions. The blood transfusions increased the richness of his blood and he left the hospital in very fine feeling and strong.

As he was leaving, he asked the surgeon about his diet. The surgeon had the nurse give him the diet list to be followed by ulcer patients but said that he expected to operate on him in a month's time.

"Why do I need an operation, now that my ulcer is healed?" I no longer have any pain, and my performance is I follow the diet!"

The surgeon told him in a matter of fact tone that he always operated on patients past 60 years of age who had ulcers. "If you were younger I might take a chance but I became convinced that practically all these cases past 60 have further perforations, and the transfusions become less successful each time and these patients die."

He removed the affected tissue is removed and at this age... "I do not think to grow a new ulcer."

"If I follow the diet will I be safe from perforation?" "You would be safe if you followed the diet but nobody follows it completely, even if they try, because they find themselves at times where they cannot obtain the proper diet, and they eat improper food which brings on the hemorrhage."

The patient was so anxious to avoid the operation that he followed the diet immediately, and increased his weight to normal, and the surgeon has told him he can take a few chances with diet which is said to be now three years since he had the hemorrhage.

Why am I recording this case? I think it is important because it shows that even after the age of 60 when an individual has not the resistance or rallying powers of former days, one may avoid perforation of the ulcer with the necessity of operation by faithfully following what is called the ulcer diet anywhere, everywhere and always.

The important point to be avoided and greasy foods, spices, mustard and other condiments, and cut down on coffee, tea, alcohol and tobacco.

Calmness and Its Bodily Relations

When as a youngster I heard about someone dying of a broken heart, I had in mind an actual break in the heart. When I became older I thought of a broken heart as just a figure of speech, that the heart could not be broken by grief.

How wrong I was has been shown by the work of Prof. W. P. Cannon, who has shown that an individual who worries about his heart not only causes a functional disturbance of the heart, but can cause true or organic disease of the heart.

There is no doubt that infection can upset the mind—teeth, tonsils, gall bladder, or chronically shown in the reports of a large mental hospital. Diseases of the heart, liver and kidneys can cause mental symptoms. The emotional disturbances can upset the mind and upset other organs and processes of the body is not so well known.

The Institute for Psychoanalysis, Chicago, has issued a booklet, "Psychoanalysis in Medicine," by Dr. Alfred E. Cohn, member of the Rockefeller Institute of Medical Research.

Dr. Cohn states that while physicians recognize the effects of infection and disease on the mind and body, they do not so readily recognize that emotional disturbance, of long standing or short, is a real cause or real cause of the symptoms present in many cases.

The emotional disturbances or conditions strain develop sugar in the urine, perhaps diabetes, paroxysmal tachycardia, sudden rapid beating of the heart or irregular beating of the heart. "Cases of asthma in which attacks are clearly brought on by profound emotional disturbances seem to belong to this group."

What you and I must do is to try to acquire calmness of mind—satisfaction with life—through religion or philosophy so that emotional disturbances will not so greatly upset our mind and body processes.

QUESTION BOX

Q.—What causes a constant ringing in the ears?
A.—Ringing in the ears may be due to an ear condition, to cerumen (ear wax) in the ear, or to a change just the position of lying down, as it affects the blood pressure.

Q.—What would cause my little finger to pain whenever I try to use it?
A.—The nerve has likely been damaged by infection—teeth, tonsils, etc.—or by some pressure.

Problems of Education Aired at Conference

At an annual meeting of the American Council of Education, Chicago, Ill., the following statements were made by educators:

Roscoe L. West, president, State Teachers college, Trenton, N. J., said: "People know intuitively that education must focus on getting folks ready to live better in their community than they would have lived otherwise. And by community I mean the nation and the world."

William J. Hamilton, superintendent of schools, Oak Park, Ill., spoke on the problem of race education:

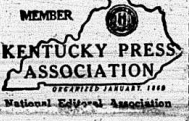

"There is evidence that during the post-war period, conditions pertaining to the support of the public schools are being improved. The demand for social security is already being given much consideration as the principal factor in the social education of our people. The demand for social security is already being given much consideration as the principal factor in the social education of our people. The demand for social security is already being given much consideration as the principal factor in the social education of our people."

Lowe Brothers HIGH STANDARD HOUSE PAINT
Lots of people make a big mistake in figuring the cost of house paint. They look at its price per gallon. But that's all wrong. What they really pay for is coverage per gallon. That's why I figure it's just common sense to use Lowe Brothers High Standard House Paint. It's definitely a quality paint and it covers solidly more square feet of surface, so it spreads evenly and easily, cuts down the labor and cost, lengthens the time between repainting. It just naturally goes farther and lasts longer to save money all the way.

Timely Tips on the Use and Care of Your Electric Refrigerator

- Uncle Sam wants you to take good care of your electric equipment—so make it last. Here are some suggestions that will help you get longer life and better service from your always economical electric refrigerator:
- Defrost whenever frost is about 1/4 inch thick. Frost acts as an insulator—retards cold making.
- Be sure door gasket seals tightly. Wipe off any grease that falls on gasket as grease destroys rubber.
- Wash inside of refrigerator, including freezer, with weak baking soda solution each time you defrost.
- Wash exterior with cloth dampened in lukewarm water and mild soap. If non-porcelain, wax occasionally to preserve finish.
- If an open unit model, keep oiled per manufacturer's instructions. Closed unit models need no oiling.
- Remove dust from fins of condenser coils occasionally. Keep unit compartment clean.
- Don't overcrowd shelves. Air circulation is needed for efficient cooling.
- Don't set cold control for lower temperature than necessary. Forty-five degrees is safe.
- Cover all liquids. Moisture down to freezer speeds formation of frost.
- Don't put hot foods in refrigerator. Wait until they cool.
- Don't clutter refrigerator with ketchup, canned goods and other items that do not need refrigeration.
- Avoid quick freezing as much as possible. It increases running time of motor.

The rationing of rubber is limiting the supply of truck tires, and there will probably be a rationing on gasoline by July 1st. This will cause a shortage of coal for domestic use. We have a supply of GOOD COAL, doubled torked, at LOW GAP MINES.

Our storerooms are crowded to the roof with Furniture and Home Furnishings of all kinds, both new and used. Much of this merchandise cannot possibly be replaced for the duration of the war.

Weeks ago we received large stocks of BLANKETS and HEATING STOVES. We are not permitted to sell the Heating Stoves now, but have hopes that this restriction will be removed later. We could not buy these items on the market today.

We advise you to take care of your FURNITURE NEEDS NOW, while we can still take care of you.

This week we have had three customers from nearby counties. They came in to buy merchandise which they were unable to get at home. Each of them took a truck load from our stock.

We have just been able to buy a full carload of BEDROOM FURNITURE and much of it is already on our floors.

Remember, our Prices are reasonable and cannot advance past March levels.
