THE STORY SO FAR: After bumping his way from Chirico, Lee Cunningham joins the 20 Bar riders and goes with them to Wild Horse. There he and another 20 Bar rider, Armando, take a spotter Asa Brock, a cattle buyer and owner of the market, to the mountains, runs the town. Brock is trying to persuade Nevil Lowe, a cattle man new to the town, to sell to him. Nevil refuses, and a later night Con saves his life from a drunken marshal called Nevil. "After that, Wild Horse is no longer safe for him, so he hits the trail again. At Fronteras, a town notorious for its toughness, Con attracts the attention of a ranchman named Lee Welsh by getting the eyes of Felix Ellis, a Fronteras man. Welsh is an outsider. Con immediately notifies Con's cousin and his companions, the Rangers. But when Con learns they are "noisy," Welsh where Nevil Lowe's ranch is located, he decides to head for Tivan. Now he and Welsh and the Rangers are riding toward Tivan.

CHAPTER IV

The Rangers and Welsh kept together that morning. Con was content to let them argue. The discussion of his three companions became a downright quarrel. Con watched them curiously and decided that as soon as they reached Tivan, he would ride alone. At noon, in a little crossroads tienda kept by a crosst Mexican, they ate and drank the storekeeper's hot whisky. Neither of the Rangers was in for a second cup. Con stopped willing. He got up first. But Lee Welsh continued to drink while Con and a vaquero who spoke Spanish after a fashion explored the Spanish tongue.

"To among our people and forget your English for a month," Con complimented Con, "and you will have more of the Spanish than many of our boys." But your companions seem of two minds about that, as about other things.

All right, men! Lee Welsh said angrily. "Don't go. Me and the kid'll make a pair."

"What's a buscardero?" Con asked in a low voice.

The word is Spanish, after a fashion, but the thing—why that can be Spanish or Anglo. In the Territory and Mexico and some other places—it means one who is hunted. And one is not hunted except for reason.

"Now, I ride!" he whined and went out fast. No horse spoke for a while. Then Welsh turned to Con.

"Let's go!" he said. They went out to where the horses doped.

For a time, during the afternoon, Welsh amused himself by singing. But toward sundown his mood changed to grimaces, and when they sprang around their fire in the darkness he faced the cousins, but talked at Odd.

"We'll split in the morning," he said harshly. "You can head for hell, if you want to—that'll be the devil's hard luck. But me and Con can make a team."

"Count me out," Con stopped him. "If I had known that you-all are buscarderos, I wouldn't have sided you. No hard feelings! I'm just saying that it's not common sense for a plain cowboy to hang around long riders. So we will split tomorrow morning. I'll ride myself."

"No mind that, for right now," Lee Welsh thrust in. "What I want out of you two is enough to make up my even split—my third of Comanche's coin. Him leaving no heirs, like the lawyers say, I reckon me that put him on his horse after that posse shot him, and held him on it, too, till he cashed his chips. Maybe that makes me entitled to all his cut. But I ain't bogging. I'll take a third."

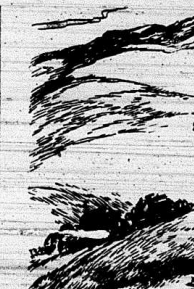

"You'll take just what you got," Chick Fenner snarled.

Con, a little to the side of them, had moved his hand with snail-slowness from his lap until it curled around the butt of his Colt. Chick and Odd were eyeing Welsh with hawklike steadiness.

When Odd's hand seemed to explode in flame—twice. With the heavy roar of the palmed derringer, Welsh sagged, rather than fell, forward and sideways.

As he jerked by a spring, automatically Con had snapped out his pistol and steadied it upon his knee, leveled toward the man. Chick was about to draw a Colt when Con's thin, harsh snarl checked him.

"Both of you! Reach up and take your hats. This is a little you found out about us." Chick snarled. Con came quickly, smoothly, to his feet. "Stand and keep that daisy on your ears."

Two days later he was on the down-slope of the Erizo valley. He found it worse of a good job in the country if he got barred into killing both of you! Better think of that!

Stiffly, Odd unbuckled his belt with one hand. It thudded with his pistol into the dirt. Then Chick was disarmed. Con went over them both carefully, took a second derringer from Odd and stood back.

"Now," he said drawingly, "we can get along without having to kill you. Chick bring forward in a horse closer and saddle him for me like a nice fellow."

Con, with the heap of weapons at his feet, watched both Chick and his cousin.

"Not so tight with that back cinch!" Con ordered Chick. "He won't buck, but he's not fond of it. Now!"

He got into the saddle without losing the drop and set for an instant looking at the pair.

He touched Pancho with the rowel and rocketed into the darkness, out of sight, knelt the rowel to the side and kept at the pounding gallop for a quarter-mile. Then he slowed to a trot and went on for what he guessed to be three miles or more across arroyo-gashed country, before camping.

He slept lightly, nervously, that night. He was out of his blanket before daylight, stiff and uncomfortable of mind. But after the sun rose he felt better. Two days later he was on the down-slope of the Bravo Valley.

At midday Con ate at a faro, eating his Spanish upon an ancient woman and a girl of fifteen or so, learning more words, gathering news.

The girl managed with her small stock of English and Con's increasing Spanish to tell him the surprising news of Miriam Fant's arrest by vigilantes, for murder and cattle thefts. He asked who had been appointed sheriff to succeed Miriam Fant.

"A very good man!" the girl told him. "Nevil Lowe, of the NL, a ranchero who raises horses north of Tivan."

When he left the pretty and friendly Mexican girl a dollar richer for his meal, he looked for a good pool in the arroyo creek that flowed Tivan ward. When he found the place to suit him, he splashed clean, shaved, changed into the "town clothes" he had worn so briefly in Wild Horse and beat the dust of miles from his black hat. Pistol and belt went into an alforja—a saddle pocket. Then he rode on.

He swung off Pancho before a saloon in midstreet. He went into a crowded room and to the bar. Most of the drinkers stared calculatingly at him, but the bartender served him without saying anything.

While he fingered his glass, a pale, slender young man with nervous hands and restless dark eyes stood talking in a hurried undertone to a grizzled, cowboystuff figure. They stood two yards down the bar from Con, with a vacant space between.

"Like I been telling you, Hearn, it's nothing to me; no affair of mine. Matter of actual fact, it's no business of Nevil's, neither. I don't see why you're talking to me. Why'n't you save that wind for Robards? It's his grief."

"Because I want the whole bunch of you to agree—not run to Robards making him go counter to his own opinion! You and Lowe and Smith can persuade him."

The other shrugged heavy shoulders and straightened. He turned and Con saw the badge on his buttoned vest. He was a deputy sheriff, his badge showed, and he came toward Con without taking his eyes from him, while Con swallowed his drink and put the glass back upon the bar. Then someone at the door called "Bain!" and the deputy looked that way, frowned slightly, and went past. Con trailed him out. So did the pale man.

A few steps from the door Bain stood with a small, slender man in a dark citizen's suit and derby hat. Ahead of Con, the pale young man went to join the pair. They faced him.

"Hearn," the derbied man said slowly, "I don't want to accuse you of anything, without being certain, but the way you're going about this business of Fant's leaves you open. You ought to see that it can be taken as an attempt at bribery."

"Nothing of the sort!" the pale

"Of course not, Bain!" Hearn cried instantly. "I mean this so-called Vigilance Committee, not one of them like the nerveless me-Fant face-to-face. But under cover of darkness, enough of them might get together."

There was more argument before the three went upstairs together.

Down the line of Yarn's buildings, presently Con met a florid, fat-sharp young man in all the clothes of derby hat, pomaded hair, cheap perfume, a reddish-brown suit with wide yellow stripes. The young man came to like the attention Con gave him. He paused, straightened a lapel, took the cigar from his mouth and nodded.

"Stranger in town?" he inquired. "I can usually spot a new comer. Know everybody around. Never forget a face. My business makes it important to remember faces—at a judge 'em. I'm cashier of the bank."

Out of a store behind the cashier two girls came bearing packages. One was yellow-haired, pretty. The other was Janet Lowe.

The cashier turned with sound of their voices. He called both by name. The yellow-haired girl, it seemed, was "Marion." They called him Cicero by their curiosity. At Con, then returned to their talking.

Con turned his head slightly, to look past the girls at the red-faced Bain, who was coming toward them. Bain passed Janet and Marion with vague gust and came on to stop before Con. Cicero began to talk, but the deputy stopped him with impatient jerk of the chin, without looking at him. Con grinned faintly.

"So you're packing a hideout in town, huh?" Bain grunted.

"Hideout!" Con returned, shaking his head. "Uh-uh! Not even a water pistol. Mr. Bain—My hardware's on my horse's stirrup."

"Yeh, I know about that one in the alforja," Bain said calmly. Come along Salado wants the bunch of you for that slinking bunch of killings there and the robbery."

"Listen!" Con began anxiously. "I want to talk to Sheriff Lowe. I've been looking for him. I met the bunch at Fronteras. They were strangers to me."

"Left-handed, for his right hand was hooked in the belt conveniently near his Colt. Bain caught Con's right arm and jerked. Con twisted free and stepped backward.

"Keep your hands off! You don't have to drag me anywhere. I told you, I want to see Lowe. I can tell him some interesting things. And when I finish talking, I think he'll tell you that I'm no buscardero."

Bain shot out his big left hand again and clamped it upon Con's arm. When Con jerked angrily, the deputy ignored the pistol at his side and wiped up his gunhand to slap Con savagely across the face.

"Shut up!" he snarled. "I hate a mouthy kid—and one that hangs out with a bunch of lawless rascals!"

Con forgot his good intentions, under that smashing open-hand blow; even forgot the pistol that Bain wore. He started backward so fast that Bain could not guard against the blows—with the edge of hard arms, then with smashing fist to the deputy's belly. The slow, unskilled deputy, for all his forty-odd pounds and his heavy weight, had no chance against the big, low-dropped, ill-gnaced brawler. He crashed forward under alternating blows that thudded against his big chin, lay still.

Something was like a shadow above Con's head. He slid sideways and felt the muzzle of Nevil Lowe's low blow pistol barrel. Without thought, he pivoted back and smashed his arm, swinging into the unannounced man's face. Lowe dropped as if poll-axed. Con stared almost dazedly, then before he could straighten, something seemed to explode in his skill. He heard a loud roar, saw streaks of flame, then blackness took him.

American naval vessels have their own bank accounts in which are deposited profits made from the canteen store, soda fountain, laundry, barber shop and tailoring service, and from which are withdrawn money for welfare and recreational purposes, says Collier's. Recently the U.S.S. Augusta made a will directing that in case she becomes a total loss her bank balances is to go to the Navy Relief society.

Casualty—1,000 miles from the enemy

ALMOST as fatal as a bullet or a shell is the breakdown in the spirit of a sailor or a soldier.

Our men have the finest spirit in the world. But it must be maintained in the American way.

They must not be made to feel that they are mere automata, fighting machines, as the armed forces of the dictators have been made to feel.

Life in our navy and army is hard. Discipline is tough. It must be. But there also must be moments when the sailor or soldier is treated as Mr. Somebody or other.

That's where the USO comes in. For the USO is the hand-picking together of six great agencies to serve one great purpose—to see that our boys in the camps and naval stations have a place to go, to turn to, a "home away from home."

The duties of the USO have more than doubled during the year. Its field of operations has enlarged to include almost the entire face of the globe.

To carry on its all-important work, it needs funds. It needs your contribution. No matter how small your make that contribution, it needs it. Now.

You are best by requests for help on all sides. By all means, try to meet those requests. But among them, don't neglect the USO.

Send your contribution to your local USO committee, or to USO, National Headquarters, Empire State Building, New York.

Rockcastle
Facts and Stories
By Ralph Griffin

To distressed fathers and mothers with sons in the service we like to have something to read. Rockcastle sent more than five hundred boys to World War I and all but fifteen returned. Which rate of mortality is not high but higher than that among civilians who remained at home.

It's hard to see so many of them marching today, but most of them will be back, stronger, huskier, wiser and better men for the experience. Many of them will have stories to tell, but we feel that few, if any, will have to endure what Arthur Franklin experienced in War I, and Arthur can be seen upon Mt. Vernon streets any day, joking, cracking wise and predicting who will win the World Series in 1919.

Arthur was inducted into service Sept. 20th, 1916, following which it took nine months of hard training in Hattiesburg, Miss., to transform him from a farm lad into a soldier.

On June 3rd, 1917, the powers that be decided that he was tough enough to be sent with the Hun to Europe in a trainload of his buddies entrained for N. Y.

From there they embarked for England, troops being ferried out to the rail and escorted by one battleship. Upon an uneventful voyage of 14 days, during which many a sub was sighted, the boys disembarked at the route was a vast quantity of perfectly routed and packed supplies, including heavy rubber boots, tin cans, and the fish.

Arthur says that most of the troops in the convoy were from Kentucky and that, with the exception of a down the gangplank there were two brass bands to welcome them with "My Old Kentucky Home." Even the "Oldies" could not get a peep beyond recognition and a hearty cheer swelled up from thousands of husky troops.

Arthur made a trip to London, a few days in rest camp, and then France. Arthur swears they crossed the English Channel by rail and caught the boat. Although he couldn't figure it out on the map, we didn't argue with him. They say that English sea life is pretty stout.

There was a little training under French officers and then off for the front, packed in "40 & 8s" and trying to feel happy in "the line." They were in the line, under sixty-pound packs and a rifle, while cannon-bomed uncomfortably close and the "oldies" were being shot at. A dog fight started almost directly above and moments later a German plane fell in flames only a short distance from the trench. Some of the boys felt better.

July 18th found Company K, 28th Infantry, First Division, in action in the Salmons' sector, with the big push ahead and zero hour set for sometime after midnight. The entire company were repulsed by the actual combat service. There were valiant attempts to appear light-hearted and gay, but most of them were becoming resentful and fully and away. A rifle cracked and a boy was rolling on the ground screaming "They thru the foot with it."

Arthur, Alvin Carpenter and two boys from Corbin huddled behind a haystack and shell, waiting for the next little book, along with those of their best girls back home; then they shook and they expressed their feelings. They would ever see each other again. Twelve years later Arthur met Alvin Carpenter upon Mt. Vernon streets, never saw either of the other boys again.

3:30 A. M. July 17th. Zero hour! Over the top, pushing and crawling in the dark, a little ahead, doing the job about. Then his buddy on the left fell, calling his name. Then Arthur was fighting, killing and cleaning thru. Then he knew that he was in Europe to kill Germans!

Eighteen kilometers our boys advanced that day, killing and capturing Germans as they went. Three thousand Huns went back to the rear under guard. Just before dark dark clouds were coming over the mountains, and they managed to turn them around, found some shells buried and began to haze away. "In the name of God," said Alvin. "We didn't know what we were hitting and didn't care just how!"

A night in the trenches while an inferno raged overhead. July 18th, 3:15 a. m. Zero hour again. The German Huns were just over a little hill at Camp Blending, Fla. The gas and Machine guns chattered and shells exploded continuously. Off to the right a French tank suffered a direct hit. One French officer leaped out and started to run. As Arthur called directly at him a small caliber shell struck the man in the back and exploded, his results better imagined than described.

Over the hill came the line of gray. The two lines met in tangled, bloody, massed. Then Arthur was lying in the edge of a wheat field, surrounded by wounded and dead. They were everywhere, some crawling over him. Still advancing. His nose was shot away; there was a machine-gun wound in an arm, another in a leg and his head was cracked open. Shells were bursting on every hand. Then, for the first time in his life (Continued on Page 8)

The Signal from this week on, will be in the hands of a new editor and publisher, Mr. A. F. Hoffman, formerly of Ewing, Ky., and formerly of the paper from Mark Meadows, and will move his family here, and assume the privilege of editing the Signal.

Mr. Hoffman qualified to this community well known for his work, he has had about twenty-five years experience in the daily and weekly field. He was born in Ewing, Ky., graduated from Ewing High School, then attended the University of Kentucky and one year at the University of Louisville. His printing experience has been varied, including work on the Louisville Courier-Journal, editor and publisher of Ewing, Ky., and publisher of the Signal. He is also an instructor of printing at the Masonic Home printing office at Louisville.

Mr. Hoffman has an active interest in the various towns to which he has been a member of Christian churches and Sunday School classes.

"He comes to us with the highest commendation from the people of Ewing county where he has been for the last ten years.

I (Mark Meadows, your former editor) wish to thank you for the splendid cooperation which I have received while among you. The best I can wish for Mr. Hoffman, is that you will continue to do as well, and give every one the best of everything.

Mark Meadows.

Farmers Told They Can Go Ahead with Building

The ban on building does not apply to necessary farm construction, the Kentucky College of Agriculture and Home Economics has been notified from Washington. Lumber and other materials may be had within certain limits for building granaries and other necessary farm structures. Where costs exceed $5,000, over any continuous 12 months period, authorization must be obtained from the War Production Board, County U. S. D. A. War Office, and the War Relocation Authority to build this season.

The statement to the College says in part:

"Farmers should be encouraged to continue plans for farm construction, such as for grain storage where needed in order that agriculture's contribution to the war effort may not be impaired. It is hoped that really essential construction will be made possible through eliminating competition from materials and labor from nonessential construction projects."

Lumber, nails and other materials may be had now, it is pointed out, and farmers are urged not to delay buying, where they need buildings. The grain storage program is considered serious to many farmers who are unable to store for grain are available, except on farms and farmers are urged to make plans for further delay.

STATE HIGHWAY PATROL

The citizens of Broadhead, Livingston and Mt. Vernon have made an application to the State Highway Department for at least two Highway Patrolmen and a car, being located in this section. It has been reported that traffic accidents in this County, The Fiscal Court, the citizens of Broadhead, Lions Club of Livingston, the citizens of Livingston and Commercial Club of Mt. Vernon, are active in this application. They say U. S. Highway 25 and all its tributary roads have very little traffic. They want an available State Highway Patrolman. We think that every community in the State should be headed by a Highway Patrolman. These men are making regular headquarters at Mt. Vernon.

RECEIVES DEGREE

County Agent To Hold Community Meeting Over County On War Problems

Last week Robert F. Spence, our county agent, was appointed to head a campaign to inform the people of the county of the dangers ahead due to war. We must control high prices, foolish spending and live more economically. We expect to get around inflation.

The civilian population both of towns and country must know how, when and where to strike to keep the price of rubber, shoes, gasoline and other things that are scarce and in short supply. Inflation, high prices, labor sugar for the home, and other things will be explained at community meetings scheduled below. At each meeting four Victory leaders will be selected from the county. These men and two women, to serve with county agents throughout the duration of the war. Everyone interested should attend the next meeting to be held at home. All leaders who received letters from the county agent should attend one of these meetings. This will be a permanent set-up to keep people properly informed as to war problems affecting the civilian population.

BRODHEAD CHRISTIAN CHURCH

Harold L. Newlan, Minister.
Bible School, 10 A. M., Lester R. Cass.

We were happy to have you in Sunday School with us last Sunday. Won't you come again this Sunday? Arriving Worship—11 o'clock. Evening Worship—8 o'clock.

Remember this Sunday is Father's Day. We are expecting you to bring your Father in to be blessed and come to Church. If he has passed away come and honor him by being in Sunday School and Church.

Also this Sunday is Flag Day. Keep that "Old Glory" flying high but also keep that flag of Christianity flying high in your church.

Our Daily Canning Bible School is coming along nicely. We want you to send your children if they haven't been. The home and church training of the Bible and of Christian ideas.

Cl. T. Sigmon, Mt. Vernon Police Chief for several years, died at Berea Hospital Wednesday morning from a gunshot wound suffered last Sunday.

Mr. Sigmon was wounded in a fracas at Berea. He was supposed to have all his bones shattered and in which at least two others are said to have been injured.

Mr. Parsons, a farmer of Green Hill, reported a skull fracture and was taken to Berea. It is said that the cause of the wound was a fight over a piece of land. Mr. Sigmon was also a uncle of St. Paul and Parsons was also a uncle of St. Paul. According to the State Parolman, Ben Bray, who was the first officer to reach the scene of the fray, Sigmon stated that he had been attacked by Parsons. Bray said that he shot Sigmon under arrest for the shooting.

The shooting occurred at about 10 o'clock on Sunday. Sigmon was locked in Mt. Vernon jail but was released next morning and did not write a confession.

As yet no press here has been no formal hearing of the affair, owing to the condition of the parties and no formal charges have been made.

Funeral services will be conducted Thursday, June 18, at 2:30 p. m. from the Mt. Vernon Christian Church by the Rev. Aubrey Russell, pastor of the church. Interment to be made at the family burial ground.

SCRAP RUBBER

Rockcastle County has not been as active as we should have been in saving scrap rubber. They are old worn out tires and rubbers scattered all over the county. There are many people who are throwing away their old tires and rubbers and over shoes that are thrown back as no value. These are quite a few of the things that are being thrown away and are being discarded. All of these things need to be put together and turned over to the junk dealer at once. This is appeal from the Government to help with the War. Every little will help and make the ones that accumulate "this rubber" a party to help win the War as soon as possible.

MEN WANTED

The attention of all men who are qualified is directed to the following special assignments which are open to all who are citizens of the United States.

Easy To Find The Answers?
Why does the new Christian inducted soldier think of army life? Why is my morale much higher than citizen morale? Don't ponder any more on the questions. Just read our Washington Digest column for the answers, told by Baukhuis in his understandable style of writing.

This Is On The House
We once heard of a man who, confounding a physician on the street, extended his hand and said: "Thanks, doc, for saving my life last night." The doctor, somewhat puzzled replied: "Why do you call me your house?" To which came the remark, "That's just it - I was terribly sick and didn't call you." The Good Health column in this issue reminded us of the old joke.

WHEAT STORAGE: Wickard Gets Bins

The answer to a question that has troubled Secretary of Agriculture Claude R. Wickard for weeks past came from the War Production board in the form of a "Yes." The "Yes" was that he can have a large supply of lumber and wood nails to build bins in thousands of farms for storage of 200 million bushels of excess wheat. With grain elevators already pressed for storage space and transportation facilities straining under a war-time peak, the problem of what to do with surplus wheat was becoming serious. With an estimated new crop of 811 million bushels added to a 630 million-bushel carryover, the total wheat supply would total 1,441,000,000 bushels this summer. Domestic consumption and immediate shipments abroad would take 721 million bushels. Of the 718 million bushels remaining, storage space would be available for 500 million bushels. The remaining 218 million bushels would have to be stored in farm bins built with lumber and nails.

GASOLINE: Permanent Rations

From Washington came the announcement that a permanent gasoline rationing program has been devised by the Office of Price Administration for the East coast that would entitle motorists to an average of 2,380 miles of travel annually, or about 55 miles weekly. It was indicated that the system would become effective on July 15. Observers were of the opinion that the new plan might serve as a model for nationwide gasoline rationing when that measure is deemed essential to conserve rubber tires.

The new plan would eliminate the controversial "200" quota entitling their holders to unlimited quantities of gasoline. The plan would be expected to conserve rubber tires. The new plan would eliminate the controversial "200" quota entitling their holders to unlimited quantities of gasoline.

LABOR FRONT: Lewis Denounced

Abusing his former close friend and associate John L. Lewis, head of the mine workers of being "Hell bent on creating national confusion and national disunity." Philip Murray, CIO president, sponsored a resolution declaring that Lewis is attempting to sabotage the defense program and spread the spirit of defeatism. Murray charged that Lewis proposed to him that he go before the CIO convention in Detroit last fall and fight President Roosevelt's foreign policies. He said he refused the proposal as "treasonable."

The CIO blast followed by only a few hours a pledge from Mr. Lewis of his firm support of the war effort and his rejection of criticism that his policies are inimical to victory.

'HANGMAN'S' END: Czechs Pay Price

Reprisal measures which followed the wounding of Reinhard ("The Hangman") Heydrich in Prague, by a Czech patriot, increased in swift and severe fashion when the news of the death of this sadistic executioner became public. The shooting of hundreds of Czechs suspected by the Nazis of complicity in the plot to rid the world of Heydrich was reported. Ironically enough, the "butcher of Moravia" died in much the same manner as hundreds of unfortunate hostages he had ordered shot in France, Holland, Belgium, Norway, Poland and other countries during his hated career.

Hard-bitten Heydrich earned the sobriquet of "Der Henker" or "the hangman of the Reich" by reason of his ruthless application of repressive measures—usually the firing squad or the gallows—against those who dared challenge Hitler's rule. The successful attack on this Nazi leader emphasized again the small but indomitable spirit of unresisting German-occupied countries. Spirit ready to flame high when Reich reverses make possible organized uprisings.

Newly Inducted Soldiers Find Army's Efficient

Businesslike Military Routine Gives Boost to Morale; Recruits Are Anxious to Serve Where Best Fitted.

By BAUKHAGE News Analyst and Commentator

WWD Service, 1242 H Street, N.W., Washington, D. C. I sat the other day in the office of General Hershey, Selective Service administrator, as he leaned back, one ankle drawn up on his khaki knee and listened to him as he talked about the army—its efficiency, its lack of scarcities. Not the kind of scarcities we hear about when the old argument of scarcity-versus-abundance of men in the army comes up, although it might have been such a talk for General Hershey is very much of a general. He is a man about the scarcity of the men of the ideal age for the army—ideal from the standpoint of adaptability to military physical training, lack of dependents and other responsibility, lack of training that is needed for agriculture or industry.

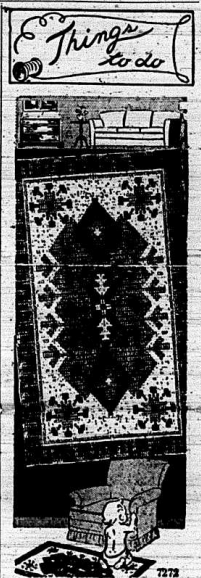

The general did some lightning calculations that I couldn't follow but it started with the total number of men of ideal fighting age. Then came subtraction for the ones with dependents, the ones needed on the farm and in the factory and the 25 per cent more which it might be expected would have physical disabilities. "According to plans announced earlier this year," he said, "the army, navy and marine corps including two million for the air force" nine million men. About three million are left for the service.

When General Hershey finished with "—ing I found that there are about 18 million men available for military service from which 10 million are recruited if the army plans are carried out. And out of that 18 million there has to be subtracted for the ones who can't get elsewhere for agriculture and industry and no one is sure how many that will be.

In any case it means that about one out of every three men of military age will eventually be called. Grave Responsibilities That is why such a heavy responsibility rests on the shoulders of the men of the army. They are the draft boards on all employers of labor. That is also why congress has made the effort to get a sharp picture of the real military age because of dependents or because of employment needs. Meanwhile every man from 18 to 44 is left in a sea of uncertainty for most of all these men cannot be called at the same time. A lot of them would be glad to hear the call and get it over.

Last Sunday I had lunch with a young man who had been moving out of the army for a month; it was impossible for him or his wife to make the necessary plans to arrange their existence in case they were called. Then out came a clear sky he was called. He had been in the army for one week when he saw him and I never saw such a change. It was largely due to relief. He had come home on a furlough granted him to take care of business matters. He was full of praise for army efficiency and high hopes that he would be able to do just what he had found it impossible to do in the army. Then out the niche into which he would fit, where he would not only be doing the best job he could do for the army but he would be making a contribution to his experience and training and therefore his peace of mind. He was a man who was energetic and had to wear glasses, he would get some kind of clerical work rather than a more active assignment.

As a rule you will find, I believe, that the man of military age feels this way: he is willing to do whatever job his country wants him to do. He wants to do the job he can do best. He doesn't want to break up his education, his family arrangements, his business career if he is not going to do a better job than he has already done. He is sure of these things are going to be necessary. When he is called, and the decision is made and he finds himself in the army and finds that army life and army routine are a lot more businesslike than he thought his more active life would be, the mercury in August. That is the reason why a lot of soldiers are saying, "What's the matter with

ALASKA FRONT: Japan Strikes

As had been expected ever since General Doolittle's spectacular air raid on Pearl Harbor, Japanese warplanes struck at the American base at Dutch Harbor, Alaska. The first two attacks occurred within six hours of each other. The fact that the fighter planes accompanied the bombers on their raids indicated that the Japs came from aircraft carriers, since the nearest enemy island is 400 miles away—far beyond the range of fighter craft.

Significance of the Jap attack on the most formidable American bastion in the Aleutian Islands is that Alaska and the Aleutian archipelago lie across Japan's expected northern route and shut off communications and supply lines to Russia in the event of a Japanese attack on Siberia.

Midway Island

When Jap task forces undertook an attack on Midway Island, nearest American base to Japan, 24 hours after the Dutch Harbor assault, the growing power of American air and naval strength manifested itself.

BALKAN FOES: U. S. Acts

President Roosevelt asked for and obtained a declaration of war by congress on the three Nazi-occupied governments of Bulgaria, Hungary and Rumania.

On the home front this newest war move meant a general round-up of enemy aliens of these nations and a freezing of their funds. On the European front it was calculated to produce a two-fold effect. It would underline closer American collaboration with Russia, which long has desired such an action and contribute hearteningly to the Soviet's morale. It would serve to freeze Hitler's three Balkan allies that they could not escape the consequences of their association with him. Few, however, expected America's war effort against the three new enemies to go beyond speeding up shipments of essential materials.

WAR WEAPONS: Army Has Plenty

Expanding power of Uncle Sam's army was disclosed in a report of Undersecretary of War Robert P. Patterson, who revealed that the army has all the weapons it can send abroad under present shipping conditions and enough to arm every soldier in the United States.

Salvage Program: Patch and Pray

Great civilian co-operation with the salvage program to speed up the flow of scrap metals and rubber looked as William L. Batt, chairman of the reconstruction committee of the War Production Board, warned that industry must get ready to "patch and pray."

RAIDS ON REICH: RAF Sows Havoc

As air raid after air raid by the RAF wrought destruction in the heart of Germany, the British attacked the pattern of the offensive became increasingly clear: smash the industrial plants that produce materials for Hitler's armies; dislocate the railways that carry these products to his forces in Russia; shake the Nazi civilian morale.

How well these objectives were succeeding was indicated by British communications. A damaging raid on Cologne was followed by two crippling blows at Essen in the Ruhr valley, concentration point for half of Germany's heavy war industries.

In the first Essen raid, 1,038 British planes converged over the Krupp works, the Reich's second largest plant, was next on the schedule.

While German propaganda continued to minimize the extent of the raids, the outlook was undeniably gloomy. But the Reich itself was not the only target of the British planes. In a series of daylight raids the RAF hurled more than 1,000 planes in rallies over northern France, fanning the flames of revolt among French patriots.

WAR BONDS: More Sales Needed

"Do I really need what I am going to buy? Can't I do without it?" That is what you ask after the war. Americans were urged by Secretary of the Treasury Henry L. Morgenthau to ask themselves these questions before making any purchases. The point of the secretary's plea was that the buying of war bonds transcends any other purchase.

"Any man or woman who chooses this time to go on a buying spree is committing an act of sabotage against our war effort," Morgenthau said in a nationwide radio address. Unnecessary spending, he added, is a waste of the money that the government has to spend to win the war.

NAVY BILL: Billions for Ships

Two facts of prime significance to the future conduct of the war stood out in provisions included in the new $10,452,000,000 naval expansion program which congress deliberated as a means of giving the United States the largest navy in the world.

These facts were: 1. The emphasis on the construction of aircraft carriers and fast, lighter ships equipped to fight submarines will be a determining factor in winning the war. 2. The naval building program, introduced by Chairman Carl Vinson of the house naval committee, would provide $5,300,000,000 for more than 600 new fighting ships over and above the current two-ocean navy plan. It would include many aircraft carriers, cruisers, destroyers and convoy escort ships specially equipped to fight submarines. Representative Vinson reported that 100 new warships will join the fleet during the remaining seven months of this year. He predicted that the two-ocean navy program would be completed in 24 months.

Churchill Expects Germany's Collapse by Christmas

Bell Syndicate-WNU Features.

WASHINGTON—Official Britain has been greatly surprised by what it regards as the lack of interest in the United States in that part of Winston Churchill's recent broadcast, which related to German casualties in the Russian campaign.

The men around Mr. Churchill, according to reports just received here, had expected to see headlines six inches high on the front page of every American newspaper on the feature. When the first 15 papers telling of the broadcast arrived in London you could have knocked them over with the proverbial feather. They even cancelled their embassy in Washington to find out what had happened. Had the all-important newspaper been another, what?

The item in question here is Churchill's statement that Nazi losses on the Russian front already had passed the total German losses in World War No. 1. He did not mention the number. A few American newspapers and magazines picked up the fact that German killed, alone, in World War No. 1, numbered more than 1,700,000. So that was the item.

Now let's look at the background to the tremendous disappointment in the officialdom that the United States newspapers did not run to front-page display on it. Actually the British officials knew that Mr. Churchill was exploding a bombshell. Yet so far as America was concerned it was virtually news.

They probably thought that by this time their own painstaking habit of checking and rechecking before making any claim, or giving any understanding which this process produces, would have been properly appraised in America. It has been correct here by virtually every returned correspondent. But it hasn't been fully appreciated.

So here's a tip to Mr. Churchill should he visit America. He should make which he expects to excite America. This is the way he should have expressed it, "I wish the U. S. papers played it down."

"You have not known what to believe about what was happening in Russia. You have been rightly puzzled. But the British government, which never claims a Nazi plane was shot down until somebody BESIDES the flier who did the shooting SAW and REPORTED it, has checked the figures. The British government, through its press exclusively, and with triple checking to see that no dead Nazi check was counted twice, can inform you that more than 1,700,000 Jews have been killed, and proportionate numbers captured and wounded, in Russian territory. Nazi losses in that country began last June."

That statement would have gotten headlines. Although it would have expressed it much better, it is an accurate statement of the facts before him at the time.

Another, considering how skeptical some of us have been about the Soviet claims, is the best news yet.

Can Germany Face Another Winter of Fighting?

Putting together two of Winston Churchill's statements in recent speeches, it is a rather simple deduction that he really hopes for the war to be ended by Christmas, so far as Hitler is concerned. THIS Christmas. Not the end of the war by that time. That is the end of the deal with—but the collapse of Hitler.

The first of these two statements was in his broadcast, when he said "The losses of the German army have exceeded total German losses of World War No. 1. He mentioned no figures, but more than 1,700,000. He also mentioned counting wounded and captured, in World War No. 1.

The second was that while he had no reached the crest, we were in sight of it.

The "crest" is when Germany faces another year of fighting in Russia. That will surely mean the end of the German lines. Mr. Churchill believes, when the cold of next November comes, into the bitter frigidity of December along the Russian battle line, Mr. Churchill is assuming, in this premise, that we will reach the "crest" in November. That means he does not believe there will be such a Nazi victory in the warm weather of this summer as to prevent the cold of next German morale when cold weather sets in. In short, he does not believe the Germans will win through to the aid of the Caucasus this summer.

Otherwise, what would be driven back out of sight, the "crest" in the next few months.

TO YOUR HEALTH

By DR. JAMES W. BARTON

BAD BREATH

A few years ago I followed a controversy as to whether bad breath was due to food particles between the teeth or to some disturbance in the stomach and intestines.

It is admitted that bad breath can be caused by mouth and nose conditions such as infected teeth and tonsils, and by the dry form of catarrh. But what causes bad breath when mouth, nose and throat are free of infection?

Dr. Barton — Drs. Burrill B. Crohn and Rudolph Dross, New York, in the Journal of the American Medical Association, state that hereofore patients with bad breath have consulted nose and throat specialists and dentists who searched for decayed teeth, infected tonsils and infections of throat and sinus. The teeth, the gums, the tonsils and sinuses are the cause at times only of bad breath. The cause is an throat condition.

These research workers state that halitosis is due to the fact that fat in the food is handled poorly or is not handled completely by the liver and it is these incompletely digested fats which are the cause of the bad breath. The small intestine, that is the odoriferous intestine, particularly the small intestine into which the partially digested fat is poured from stomach.

Why is the small intestine responsible for bad odors on the breath, because of its peculiar structure? It is because it is not completely digested fats in the small intestine, that is the odoriferous intestine. They point out that patients with peptic ulcer taking much milk daily after meals have a bad breath. These patients are given a diet of cereal, eggs and lean meat, the odor disappears.

Giving Patients Right Impressions

One of the mistakes made by physicians until recently was that after examining the patient and finding no cause for his symptoms, they said, "There is nothing physically the matter."

The very fact that the word "physician" is used is likely to impress the patient feel that his physician's opinion is that he (the patient) just imagines he has these symptoms.

In a letter to the editor of the Journal of the American Medical Association, Dr. Andrew Hart, Jr., Charlottesville, Va., states: "Most physicians have little difficulty in recognizing anxiety states and the fact that patients who have heart, blood vessel, liver, kidney or other disease. But even when by thorough examination these 'neurotic' patients are fully examined and relieved, some physicians still allow patients to leave their office without having been told that their symptoms are present, although no physical changes are present. Nervous disorders are always accompanied by disturbances of the various organs and processes of the body." We all know how the heart beats rapidly, the blood pressure rises, the stomach, intestines and bladder are upset under fear or anxiety. At first these disturbances interfere only with the action of the various organs, but they may persist and cause changes in the structure or tissues; that is, organic disease. This was pointed out some years ago by Prof. W. B. Cannon.

In addressing his fellow physicians, Dr. Hart says: "It takes time to listen to their many complaints, patience to brook their restlessness, and a very definite plan to combat or fight their aggressiveness and to lead them away from an emotional to a rational and realistic outlook on life." He points out that if the doctor is too busy to undertake treatment, he should tell his patients where advice may be had.

QUESTION BOX

Q.—Is there any other treatment for diabetes than insulin and diet?

A.—There is no other treatment other than insulin and diet for diabetes.

Q.—Can a chiropractor correct a hernia?

A.—I'm sorry but I know nothing about Chiropractic, so I have no right to judge it. I would suggest that you consult a specialist. He will not operate if it is not necessary.

UNIMPROVED SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Lesson for June 14

Lesson Text: Luke 24:34-48

The glory and gladness of the resurrection morning drove back the darkness of the tomb and rejoiced the disciples' sadness with holy gladness.

Two of Jesus' disciples had been walking sadly along the road to Emmaus when suddenly a stranger came to them, telling them that the Scriptures taught about the Christ—His sufferings and His glory.

But now they had, a joyous message which sent them hurrying back to Jerusalem to the eleven who had gathered around and listened to Him to discuss the reports which had also come to them of His resurrection.

NEW IDEAS

For Home-makers

STOOL often looks better in front of a desk or telephone stand than a chair. New high back. A substantial, wooden box may make the foundation, and if well padded and smartly covered will be as attractive as anything that you could buy.

Before shopping for materials check over things on hand. Moss, horse hair and even woolen discarded upholstery pieces may be saved in a cheap cloth bag and washed before being pressed for draperies and bedspread usually have unfrayed good pieces in them that may be used for covering a small piece table.

Alfalfa Growing
 Alfalfa is an important crop this year and shall be managed to get the most feed value possible. The growing of alfalfa has increased rapidly in the last few years in this section, which of course means there is more interest taken in the feeding of livestock. Good legume hay means better and more productive livestock.
 The county agent visited a few farmers last week who are alfalfa growers. Jack Hays, Gus Stevenson, Bob McFerron, R. S. Shivel, Guy Roberts and H. H. Harrison. These farmers have excellent first crops. Guy Roberts will start this week. Guy Roberts has an excellent seven acres which has a sprinkling of vetch that came up as a volunteer crop from a seeding in 1940. Each of these men will cut from 1 and one-fourth to one and one-half tons per acre for the cutting last year.
 Farmers who would like to see good crops of alfalfa should visit these men and learn of their methods of getting such good stands and production.
Seed Saving
 The farmer should be vitally interested in saving farm seed this year. The war may make it impossible for us to get field seeds we need next year. Hand stripping should be brought back into practice as well as the use of the frail and machine. We haven't enough seed threshers. We need more. Farmers interested in getting grass seed and grain threshed should begin now to plan for it. If a grass seed thrasher is needed in the community call and talk it over with your county agent who is always in the Mt. Vernon office on Saturday. He will be found out over the county the rest of the time.
 What about a few farmers in each community buying a grass seed thrasher and save hundreds of dollars? We grow the seed, let's thresh them out and save the difference.
Insect Control
 For all insect checking and sucking, on all crops, use Rotenone dust or liquid. The liquid is made from cream of Rotenone. Always follow the directions on container. Rotenone is not poison to people therefore, it can be used on cabbage, beans, mustard, lettuce and other leafy crops with safety as a dust or liquid.
 If you have a duster and can't get Rotenone dust, then use Magnesium arsenate on round to six pounds of lime, thoroughly mixed and dust for insects - in case of bean beetle put the dust on under side of leaves. When pods have formed it is much safer to use Rotenone.
 If you have a sprayer instead of a duster, you can use two tablespoons of arsenate of lead to a gallon of water or you can use two tablespoons of magnesium arsenate to a gallon of water. In case of bean beetle this spray should be put on under side of leaves. These poison sprays and dust can be used with safety until cabbage begins to head or beans to pod - then switch to Rotenone.
 For the best all-around remedy for all insects without fear of poison use Rotenone dust or liquid. For further information write or see the county agent.

HINTS ON THE CARE OF YOUR Vacuum Cleaner

Your electric vacuum cleaner speeds up housecleaning and helps prolong the life of rugs, draperies and upholstered furniture. It will serve you better and last longer if you follow these suggestions:

Empty dust bag every time cleaner is used. Dirt in the dust bag reduces power of suction.

Keep brushes free from lint and hair. Replace brushes if tufts become worn.

Avoid running cleaner over pins, nails, coins or other metal objects. Pick them up by hand.

Clean brushes; wipe off other attachments after using.

Follow manufacturer's instructions as to cleaning and oiling. Consult dealer from whom you purchased cleaner if you have lost instructions.

Vacuum rugs frequently. It removes embedded grit that cuts rug fibres under the pressure of constant walking.

Use hand cleaner or vacuum attachments to clean drapes and upholstered furniture. Don't use vacuum on down cushions. They don't like it.

If cleaner is not picking up threads, check belt to see if it is turning brush. If in doubt, replace belt.

Halt Kentucky Soil Depletion

Farm land should be protected when the soil receives adequate nourishment.

CHICAGO—In spite of tremendous improvements in farming methods and machinery in the past half century, crop yields have failed to keep pace with scientific progress and soil fertility has steadily declined, according to a statement issued here by the Middle West Soil Improvement Committee.

Typical of the situation throughout the Middle West, the statement quotes a recent bulletin by Dr. C. E. Millar, head of the soils department of Michigan State College, who declared:

"The fertility of our soils has been greatly depleted as measured by crop yields in the last 60 years. In the case of a few crops such as potatoes and wheat, some increase in yield is shown, but in most of the average yields of the most generally known crops are about the same as they were more than a half-century ago.

"This situation, it is astounding when one considers all the improvements in farming which should have resulted in increased yields of crops.

"All Americans are concerned about this state of affairs, since an ample acreage of fertile land is a national resource which should be conserved because it constitutes a strong stabilizing factor both economically and socially. All persons should join in the movement to provide for the proper use of our soil."

Hope for stemming the steady drain on America's farm land resources," the Middle West Soil Improvement Committee's statement concludes, "lies in an ever-increasing program of education toward soil conservation. Future dangers of soil exhaustion are indicated by the fact that at the present rate of application on American farms, commercial fertilizers and manures store only a fraction of the plant foods removed by growing crops. Only through an adequate system of soil management which includes the use of fertilizers can the problem be solved. Soil fertility, after all, is like a bank account. Withdrawals are constantly made without any deposits in the form of plowed plant food. The result is the result."

Depression Days

The L. & N. weathered the dark days of the Depression better than most American railroads. It completed its $3,000,000 bridge across the Ohio River at Henderson, Ky., on December 31, 1932, and helped construct the gigantic Cincinnati Union Terminal which was completed on March 31, 1933.

Free pick-up and delivery of less-than-carload freight was inaugurated in the early part of 1932 as a means of saving money and both of these innovations proved to be such decided successes that they have been retained to this day.

The daily Sunday breakfast of the Pan-American over Station WSM was inaugurated on August 15, 1932, and has been heard by millions of listeners. It is now on the air at 6:03 p. m. C. S. W. T.

Only a modern and efficiently-operated railroad can provide the best service to the public. Because of a pending bill the L. & N., in 1933, began the abandonment of unproductive tracks and the dismantling of over 250 obsolete locomotives and 4,000 wooden freight cars. The service meeting of employees and their families, which constantly stress the value and importance of Safety and Friendly Service in the railroad's work. An employee suggestion system was also begun in January, 1937.

Today—all over America—the ring of steel wheels on steel rails is beating forth an inspiring tune of courageous endeavor. Neither wind nor rain, mighty mountains nor swollen rivers can stop the railroad as they go about their all-important task of carrying men and material in order that this country may achieve victory with minimum loss of life and in minimum possible time.
