THE STORY SO FAR: Forced to run from the law to save his life when he is suspected of being the notorious "Comanche Linn," Con Cameron is trying to prove his honesty. With his pal, Caramba Vear, he is working the Toledo-Tennesson, owner of the Broken Wheel ranch. Nevada Lowe, marshal of the neighboring town of Trivan, is after him but doesn't yet know that the twenty-assesser of Broken Wheel is the man he suspects of being Comanche Linn. Con's wife, Janet, is staying with the Tennessons. They are deeply attached to her, having lost their only child, a boy, who was kidnapped many years before. Among the enemies of the Broken Wheel are Dud Tennesson, Merwin and his friend Wood Kirby, and the very tough Lammers. Con has already encountered all of them and has far gotten the best of them. Caramba and Dud Paramore also hate Nevill Lowe and are trying to kidnap him. Con makes friends with old "Step" Gaylord, a cow hand, by giving him a pint of whiskey. Step teaches him more tricks of "driving" and shooting.

Now continue with the story.

CHAPTER XVIII

Con had a chance to look at the rest of the casa principal when, after supper, Mrs. Tennesson led them out to the great front porch. A wide fire escape across the end, and vivid Navajo rugs everywhere. When Mrs. Tennesson wanted to look at her patients, he said, almost without thinking:

"This just suits me, somehow. I feel like—well, it's like home."

"Then, why not make it home?" Janet asked contemptuously, looking straight at him now. "A little thought and you could look at her vaguely recall this, and that, and remember little things in your childhood that get it."

"I can't do it," he said promptly. "And he told me that he'd been in this part of the country."

He shook his head and looked with regret at the girl at the cigarette he was rolling.

"You know me for what I am and you can warn the Tennessons not to believe a word I say. I can't warn 'em again. Oh! Sent word to Nevill that I'm here?"

"Con haven't said a word to them! And I haven't sent any message to Nevill. No matter what you are, you—"

Outside, going slowly toward the bunkhouse, he kicked viciously, blindly, at pebbles.

"I'll keep out of her way," he promised himself. "The word will have to be leaving, sometime. I'll do good here until she does."

She was right. The bodies of the Martinezes had buried, for while, after the bunkhouse was dark and quiet. But it was as Mrs. Tennesson said, he decided to fight in country you hardened yourself to fight for your own.

Perch was snoring evenly. So was the cook. Con took his pistol from under the mattress and went noiselessly to the "door." There was a table moon, now, and in the faint light he saw a horseman going to the corral.

When he was sure that only one man was there, Con crossed the space in bare feet, pistol up. The corral gate squeaked. He waited until he was sure that no one was ascending, then went forward for a final look. A slouching figure came toward him, dragging rather than carrying a saddle.

"Who's it?" Con challenged him softly. "Take it easy!"

"Twenty!" the man answered. "This is Lanny. Topeka sent me back. I got to send him Johnny Dutch tomorrow, in my place. I can't see an ankle sprain and sleep enough that it'd take a pair of chaps to piece out my hide. But that ain't what's got me down, boy. Hell's to say, or going to be. The damn' fools aim to work Helligo Canyon this roundup. First thing!"

Con whistled softly.

"Yes, sir! The Big Augers been scheming it. Y Bar and LA and Walking X and 56 and 4U and Pigeon and the rest never heard of Antelope Springs, no more'n we done. Skull Spring was the place!"

"Well," Con said cheerfully, "I think it's about time! Come on inside. Let's wawa this out some more. Your notion is, the outfit from Alamogordo in the Canyon and Gloomy and his gang will stay covered and frazzle our side?"

He carried the horse wrangler's saddle for him, then he barked and called to Perch and the cook. Lanny lit the wall lamp and went over to sprawl on a bunk. Con made himself comfortable on a bench with a cigarette. He told Perch and the cook what Lanny had said. Perch snickered softly, staring.

Con watched him. For the first time in hours, he thought of the English penny given him by Judge Wiley, as he had seemed to feel its weight when looking at little Step.

But Lanny seemed sincerely troubled and Con could not think that the wrangler would have showed so much concern over possible damage to the thieves. Lanny lit another cigarette and sprawled flat, easing his sprained ankle.

"I think I'll go tell old Step about this," Con mumbled.

He went over to put down his pistol and draw on boots. Perch listened gently.

"Likely, the old hellion'll kill you for roosting him out. You won't need the light to come in by. Blow it out, and we'll catch up your forks."

Con nodded. At the door, he blew out the lamp flame, then moved toward the line of quiet abodes.

Con had passed the border of the corral when a soft scuff of feet startled him mechanically. His hand went toward his belt before he remembered that his Colt was on the hip. A man came out of shadow and the faint light showing him only as a distorted shape. Then he saw the outline of the man's hand, slightly lifted. He stiffened. For what looked to be an enormously lengthened forefinger was a pistol barrel, he knew.

"Hello, Con!" the man said drawlingly. "How you been?"

Con tried to place the voice, vaguely familiar as it was, while he watched the pistol aim wanders. He breathed again.

"Long time since we wawed us an evening away. Yes, sir! You kind raised up hell and shored a chunk under it, since then—You—"

"Martino Palafox, the deputy!"

"Yes. And I'm here to see you. Reach up your paw, boy, and see if your both ears still hang right. They'll run up to the heat damn' boy, that I ain't like some Territory star poles! I would have shot you right out from under your cowlick if the reward had five hundred dead or alive! And it's easier to pack beef than a kicking steers."

"My gracious! A thousand thanks!" Con raised his eyes up the wrangler, amigo. Comanche Linn was killed outside Salido. Linn Welsh Con told him to meet the bunch in Fronteras. You'll make no five hundred on Con Cameron, going by Twenty Johnson on the Wheel. Another thing, I'm hell on you tonight. Listen, now: the wagons went to Skull Spring and they are going to ram Helligo Canyon. Canyons first creek out of the box. You know they're going to get frazzled."

"Veh? So you aim to hightail and get frazzled with 'em? Or do you figure, maybe, to stop it? Stand still! Nothing we can do about it, boy. They'll run up to the heat damn' and about half the boys won't never smile again. Then they'll pull off and Gloomy and Quirk and Dud and the rest'll have hurrup on every outfit this side the Bravo."

He went around Con and searched him deftly. The white waistband hidouus was obviously no mystery to him!

"All I'm packing is some money," Con told him straight and silver again, an English squire, Martino! I've got one. Sort of scratched up. Somebody put W.W. on it. Might catch you tonight."

"Right," Palafox agreed blandly. "if it was in somebody else's pocket."

But he stood frowningly before Con, pistol at his waist, the hammer down. Then he shook his head and shrugged.

"Sorry! There's lots of things I like about your style—and your record in the Territory. But it's yes, and no, on the scale. The no is a little bit bigger. Sorry!"

Con's hands, pinching his ears, moved flashing downward in short strokes. He used to meet the bunch. Palafox staggered, but his gunhand jerked a terrific swinging right at the man's head while he pivoted to drive the unprotected jaw. Palafox dropped his gun and one leg buckled.

Con snatched him over the head and sent him sprawling backward. Then he stooped to snatch up the Colt and move in.

Two derringers and a sheath knife formed the rest of the deputy's armament. Sure of this, Con stepped back to Palafox's pants. Like voice to his own questions came Step's drawl:

"Now that you got him, what you aim to do with him?"

Palafox sat up as the little man came shadow-quiet up to Con. He shook his head to clear it. Con shrugged grimly, looking from Step to the prisoner.

"Does this boy Comanche Linn, huh?" Step drawled. "Well, that goes kind of rip the cover off some things."

"Listen," Con drawled in his turn, wearily. "I'm tired of saying that I'm not Comanche Linn, who was a dirty little murdering maniac over in Tennesson. He used to ride with Welsh and the Ramers. He got kicked riding with 'em. I met the three at Fronteras and came on with 'em. So if the country had called me Comanche Linn. Every time I've had lots of luck doing something that I, Con Cameron, wanted to do or had to do because it was the right thing, the Territory has called me Comanche Linn. I'm damn' tired of it. Gonales was the first man I ever killed, and that was a simon-pure accident!"

He lowered at both of them. Neither said anything.

"I go think I'm a damn' sight better man than this Comanche was!" he burst out. "From what I heard, he was like the Ramiers, and Dud Tennesson. You got any gun?"

Now, Martino! You rammed your nose into me at the wrong time. I'm going to tie you up long enough to keep you from under my feet. Step! I want to talk to you, straight and hard. Topeka and Gale—"

"I was listening. I believe him. I never could quite put it straight in my head, the way he looks and acts, and the tales about Comanche Linn."

"Bueno! There's a trail we found, forty-some year back, down into the valley. Helligo's back door. We can make it down with a little rifle. Now, hand Martino back his hardware store. Let's get our horses. You better take a Wheel caballo, Martino, in place of your tired one. Twenty-Con—amble to the bunkhouse and rust out them Sunday punchers. We want stellas, four guns 44, like ours, Martino!"

"Pistol is. But I pack a .45-07 rifle; no carbine."

"Come on, then! We'll saddle up, while Cq hunts 44's."

Con dozed with his ears full through the door and trotted toward the corral. When almost there, he stopped short. For a slim figure in some sort of dark robe came from the shadows toward him.

"Con! Stee! Goo!"

"They musn't! I've heard Nevill say that nobody can get into Helligo Canyon against the fire of a handful of men. You'll all be killed without a chance!"

"We've got a notion. Can't tell you what it is. But it may just tip things over this side."

"We're the ones to do the tipping, if it can be done. Now, we're in a rush."

She said something under her breath, but he hurried past and went on to where Step and Martino waited, with Pancho and two other horses saddled.

"Buen viaje!" Janet called shakily, as they rode off. "Hasta la vista, Con!"

Step led the way out across the east range at the hard trot, a jolting gait that did not encourage talk. They rode steadily until daylight, then halted briefly to eat some of the steak and biscuits that Step had brought, smoke and relax.

The going was rougher, and the climbing steady, in afternoon. The sun was warm, but as it slid westward the air grew chill under the trees. They were riding on a trail and finished the food. Step had them in the saddle before dawn. But they rode only a few miles, then unsaddled and hobbled the horses. Step went off in the gray light and was gone for a half-hour. When he came back, he was like another man. His faded eyes shone like narrow bits of glass and his teeth showed snarlingly.

"Grab your ropes! Glad you got that long rawhide, Martino. Mine's another like it. Come on! Can't hear from down here, but when you hit the rim, up yonder—only place you can hit it—you can make out the shooting. Begun while I was listening. Wagons must've rolled up and opened the ball."

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

Do not eat the skins from apples when making applesauce. Remove blossom end, stems and parts that are not good. When thoroughly cooked, put through a coarse sieve. Made in this way, give the sauce a pink coloring.

To help prevent peeled pears, apples and bananas from darkening, give the surface a light coating of fruit gum, sugar then with grapefruit juice.

A good space tip: Try putting cinnamon in lamb stew.

When making raisin breads, cookies, etc., cover the raisins with hot water and simmer them for about five minutes before using. They will be larger and softer.

Make an oilcloth cover for your ironing board, to use when brushing and sponging garments.

Serviceman Took Words Out of Burrough's Mouth

While Firestone, Edison, Ford and Burroughs were touring, a light bulb and a tire on the car went wrong. Mr. Ford went into a store and said to the proprietor: "What kind of lights do you have?"

"Edison," was the reply.

"And tires?"

"Firestone."

"You may be interested to know that Mr. Edison and Mr. Firestone are in my car, and that I am Henry Ford."

As the man was putting on the tire, Mr. Burroughs, with long white whiskers, leaned out of the car, and the man, looking at him, said: "Well, I know, you've said it."

Potatoes?

A nourishing food, Mr. Hitler!

WE HAVE potatoes in America. We also have fruits, meats and green and yellow vegetables. For every crop you harvest with forced labor, we have a larger crop grown by men who work hard from dawn until dark because it's their land, their country. You've never met an American farmer—see his wife—have you, Mr. Hitler? Too bad. Otherwise you might have thought twice before you started this war.

Our cellars are used to store foods, not as bomb shelters. But our boys know the meaning of bombs. How did you like that first air raid, with not a single U. S. plane lost? Those boys didn't live on potatoes—they had meat, milk, fruits, vegetables... all the things we have at home. American food follows them to the corners of the earth.

How can we do it? American women are doing it—home-canning for the home front and saving money for War Bonds at the same time! Do you know how much of it they're doing? Well... what would you give for FOUR BILLION JARS of home-canned foods, Mr. Hitler?

BALL BROTHERS COMPANY
MUNCIE, INDIANA, U. S. A.

Can Successfully! Put some of those 4 billion jars on your shelves; they represent a dependable, low cost food supply for your family. But be sure your home-canned food keeps. MENTAL CASES

During the last war a medical officer, examining a recruit, reminded him that as he had had attacks of bronchitis, he would hardly be fit for overseas. The chest was clear but the physician pointed out that under such a bad weather conditions the bronchitis might return and would be a liability to the country. He was a type of individual and pleaded so hard that the medical officer

Over with the captain of the work he was joining. As it was thought that the outdoor life might "toughen" him, it was agreed to accept him as there was nothing against him but the "history" of the attacks.

The outdoor life at camp agreed with him, he had no attacks of bronchitis, and gained 15 pounds—the heaviest he had ever been. However, arriving in England the damp climate caused an acute attack of bronchitis and pneumonia and he had to be evacuated home without going to France.

Tom even met his ex-K-may film made of his chest before he receives the rest of his examination. Other tests are also made.

What about the mental condition of recruits? How can it be known how recruits will behave under the shock, danger, noise and surroundings of war?

This is going to be a difficult matter for the psychiatrist or mental specialist attached to the board of medical examiners. Thus Dr. Loren H. Smith, physician-in-chief, department for mental and nervous diseases, Pennsylvania hospital, Philadelphia, says that the mental specialist ordinarily sees fully developed mental cases; we want to use his skill to check on us far as possible, all those people who would be seriously damaged in their capacity for useful living by the circumstances of war.

However, as recruits are examined first at their own villages, towns or cities, the local physician is able to give information as to how the recruit conducts himself in the community and can advise whether the recruit should be accepted for home service only, from the mental and emotional standpoint. Doubtful cases can always be sent on to the Medical Advisory Board.

Exercise—Food—Blood Pressure

A mistake often made is in thinking that exercise should not be taken by middle-aged individuals as it will increase the blood pressure and enlarge the heart.

As a matter of fact, the blood pressure of athletes is slightly lower than those of the same age who take no exercise and the heart is, if anything, smaller.

Thus it can be seen that two individuals whose blood pressure is the same, can live for one or three weeks and on their return the blood pressure of one is higher than the blood pressure of the other. Questioning brings out the fact that the one whose blood pressure is higher than when he went away has "rested" all the time while the other has been active. The one who rested all the time admits, however, that as he was outdoors all the time he had a great appetite and as the food was good he had eaten more than was his custom and his weight had increased several pounds.

The lack of exercise and increase in food intake increases the blood pressure is pointed out by Dr. H. O. Quinwade in his book "Blood Pressure and its Sequelae (Results)", who states that physical inactivity—taking no work or exercise—plays an important part in high blood pressure conditions in India. High blood pressure rarely occurs among rickshaw runners who take violent exercise with long and exhausting hours, whereas high blood pressure is notably common among certain social groups who lead sedentary (sit down) most of the time) lives, with overeating. The thought is that as we grow older, we have less desire to exercise and when the heart is affected or failing, too much exercise can put a strain on the heart and on the blood vessels. However, in the normal individual some exercise should be taken daily—a few bending exercises and a brisk walk—if the heart and blood vessels are to get their own needed exercise of their elastic tissues.

QUESTION BOX

Q. What would cause me to have a sharp pain in chest and a thumping in chest?

A. The pain may be due to gas, nervousness, or even to a heart condition. Consult your physician.

Q. Would an excessive flow of saliva following a meal be considered an indication that an abnormal thyroid condition is present?

A. An excess of saliva is more likely to be due to nervousness, or some stomach disturbance.

Church Notes

MT. VERNON BAPTIST CHURCH

W. C. Young, Pastor.
We are living in the day of great things; great production, great undertakings. In view of all the big and great things that we do as Christians attempt great things for God, and accept great things from God.
World it not be pleasing in the sight of God, as well as commendable in the sight of men, if all claim to be followers of Christ would at least attend the church services on Sunday?

Sunday School - 9:45 A. M. Present last Sunday, 137.
Morning Worship - 11:00 o'clock.
Sermon: "An Inquiry which expresses the felt need of mankind, expressed in hours of distress and perplexity."

Prayer Service
He who lives without prayer, he who lives with little prayer, he who seldom reads the Bible, he who seldom looks up to Heaven for power, he will be the prey whose heart will become dry and barren. But he who calls in secret on his God, who spends much time in meditation on the words and the work of God, whose soul is given completely to Christ - such a person will be actively and happily engaged in some Christian service, ready to give of himself.

We believe that our Lord expects every member of the church who possibly can to attend the Wednesday night prayer services, since we are engaged in His work.
We are glad to report that Sue Noe and Ronald Stokes have returned home from the hospital and are getting along nicely.

Camp Forrest, Tenn. August 15, 1942.

Dear Friends:
I wish to thank you for the letter which I received from you. I really enjoyed reading it. It is something every one should read.
I want to especially thank you for remembering me in your prayer.

I am inclosed a copy of some pamphlets which you might enjoy reading.
While closing I wish to thank you again for the thoughtfulness of all boys in the Armed Forces.

Very truly yours,

"STEP LIVELY" IS THE WORD

DURING 1941 the railroads moved the greatest volume of freight in their history.

In the first 6 months of 1942 they carried 36% more than in the same period of history-making 1941.

One reason the railroads have been able to do this has been the all-out cooperation of shippers. Cars have been loaded heavier, sent away faster, emptied quicker.

This is important. For to carry everything the Government, Army, Navy and Business have to haul, cars have to be kept moving.

So you see why there's no room for sleeping shipments. It's transportation we have to deliver - someone else will supply the storage accommodations.

And so to keep war equipment, foods and commercial goods on the move, "step lively" is the word.

"The first World War taught the Government and the railroads the public a lesson they will never forget. First, transportation can better our Government or any international agency. Second, that railroads cars are never to be used for storage, but for transportation. Nothing shall be put in a car that cannot be immediately dispatched and unloaded at destination." - COLONEL J. MONROE JOHNSON, Member of Interstate Commerce Commission in Charge of Bureau of Service.

YOUR GARDEN

(By John S. Gardner) The cool vegetables are cabbage, white potatoes and the root crops...

Potatoes, turnips and beets should be moved to where the temperature is between 34 and 38 degrees...

A simple storage, a "cross" between a pit and a cellar, is the buried barrel described in Kentucky Extension Circular 256...

Cabbage is stored in the same manner as potatoes, but the difference so often is to have it matured and well headed.

If the cabbage is well grown, but cannot be made to result in this way, it should be stored in a cool place...

Another way to save soft cabbage is to lift the entire roots, wash the leaves and all, and rest them in a shallow trench or in a plowed-out area...

Water should be poured deep in the trench to make sure the roots take hold...

FDR Plans Nationwide Gas Rationing With 35-Mile Speed Limit for U. S.; Double-Time Pay Gained for Duration; British Renew Madagascar Occupation

(EDITOR'S NOTE: While opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Viewpoints, and are not necessarily those of this newspaper.)

When the U. S. marines accomplished their history-making offensive in the Solomon Islands, amphibian tractors churned South Seas water to carry them to their first attack to win back Jap-held territory since the start of the war. The tractor is in the background as these marines dug in at the beach soon after the battle's opening. The area was soon cleared of the enemy.

Nazi Break With Russia Foiled Sabotage in U. S.

Hitler Held Responsible for Wrecking Germany's Elaborate Plans to Blow Up Vital Points in U. S.

By BAUKHAGE News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, 1343 H Street, N.W., Washington, D. C.

A mystery that has perplexed many laymen and some officials in Washington with respect to the manner in which the government has forestalled a mammoth Nazi plan for sabotaging America's streets...

It is a sentence: The man who wrecked elaborate Nazi plans for blowing up munitions plants, railroads, bridges, electric lines and power plants in the United States was none other than Adolf Schickelgruber, Hitler himself.

He did it when he tossed the Ribbentrop-Molotov pact out of the window just after Nazi Germany had launched their surprise drive on Russia.

To understand what a job the Nazis did for himself, you must remember that for years, with the methodical care of the Germans, a detailed plan had been worked out for the sabotage of American industry...

But the Nazis began where the least was expected. They had schools for the training of saboteurs, especially selected from Germans who had lived in the United States and were familiar with the life and customs of the United States...

Details of this training came out in the secret testimony in the recent trial of the Nazi saboteurs in Washington. It was an ancient history to the department of justice.

While the Germans had their pact of friendship with Russia, Nazi agents were busy making friends with Communists all over the world in the hope that they could use them for subversive activities.

Then came the double cross, Germany attacked Russia, and Communist and Nazi who had always worked each other thoroughly gave up the idea which may never appear in the official communiques of our ministry of foreign relations.

When Germany declared war on the United States last December after Pearl Harbor, there were still several hundred Americans, men and women, living in Paris. Many of them had lived there for 20 years, getting their American passports renewed periodically.

And the government wants the skilled farmers to stay on the land where he is: Food will win the war and write the peace.

The Whole Truth The Nazi regime is not usually credited with doing much to encourage its citizens. Hitler himself spends many paragraphs in "Mein Kampf" telling about the importance of being a good liar.

Not all of these belated amendments were accepted by the Nazi officials—gallant for once. The committee which had the rigors of the Nazi internment camps are now being suffered by women who, if they had been less coquettish about their years, would not say, "Yes."

There are still a number of men and women in the West who are now doing war work who honestly think the sun rises in the East river and sets in the Hudson. They work on the grounds that if New York heard about it, it doesn't exist.

JUDAH: AN EXAMPLE OF SELF-SACRIFICE

LESSON TEXT—Genesis 44:18-34.
GOLDEN TEXT—Berey perceive we the love of God, because he laid down his life for us; and we ought to lay down our lives for the brethren—1 John 3:16.

The family is still the fundamental unit of society, and is therefore of more importance than the church, the state, or the social order of which it is a vital part. Every force which encourages the breakdown of the sacred relationships of the home and family is set for the destruction of society itself.

Her career was often chosen to go the way of the flesh, and therefore they have disregarded God's plan and purpose. But marriage is just as sacred as ever in His sight; the home is to be kept for Him; and brotherly love still finds a high place among the virtues of real men.

Today's lesson is a continuation of the story of Joseph's life. As we study it we must bear in mind Joseph's dealings with his brethren, who as yet did not recognize him as the one they had sold into captivity. He was bringing them kindly but definitely to the point of real repentance, so that he could show himself gracious to them.

To do so he had brought disaster upon them. Being happily on their way home with a new supply of food, they were overtaken and proved to be thieves, and Benjamin, the beloved of their own Jacob, was condemned by their own words to death.

In that crisis the mouths of the others seemed closed, but Judah, who had really saved Joseph's life (Gen. 37:26, 27) and who had apparently come to himself as a man of essential goodness, pleaded for Benjamin's life. That plea presented a truly sacrificial brotherly love, as he manifested:

I. Compassion (v. 18).
Easy runs the yoke of family life as long as all is joyful and prosperous. But when adversity strikes, when sorrow comes, or sickness, then the true test of devotion is at hand.

It was a brave and manly thing for Judah to stand before the one whom he knew only as the man who was "even as Pharaoh." The circumstances were all against him. He expected the fuming anger of the offended ruler. His brethren had collapsed in despair. It was one of those dark hours which come to every family when someone must demonstrate true love by being strong-hearted and steady.

II. Intelligence (vv. 20, 21).
Cries call for more than a cheerful smile or an encouraging word, much as they may mean in such an hour. We must be prepared by our close contact with our loved ones to speak and act with vigor and assurance.

Judah's plea is a masterpiece of argumentation and appeal, demonstrating that he was not only well-informed about his family and its problems, but ready to use his knowledge skillfully and effectively.

III. Self-Denial (vv. 30-33).
One step deeper goes the devotion of this man to his father and his brother. He had done no wrong that merited punishment, but evidently his brother Benjamin had been guilty. Had he been of the spirit of Cain he would have said, "Am I my brother's keeper?", and let him suffer for another? Why should Judah suffer for another? Why should he allow himself to be imprisoned in a strange land to save his father from sorrow and his brother from what seemed to be the just reward for his deed?

Thus reasons the man of the world, but such is not the language of the true brother, who says, "Let thy servant abide instead of the lad as a bondman."
IV. Love (v. 34).
Love for father and brother underlies all of the courage, conviction and self-sacrifice of a man like Judah. In his younger years, and possibly under the influence of his brothers, he had called them to respect, but now his real devotion to his brother was evident.

That affection was a real, powerful, and beautiful thing, and yet it is but a faint prefiguring of the affection of the One who "sticketh closer than a brother," who "though he was rich, yet for your sakes he became poor, that ye through his poverty might be rich" (Prov. 18:24; II Cor. 8:9).

Let us improve the opportunity to review our relations with our own family, to determine whether there is aught that we in intelligent and courageous self-sacrifice should do for our own.

Know Your Neighbors.
Know your neighbors. Call on them to meet together, in your home to exchange information. This friendly association, the neighborliness, will create courage and confidence—the morale so necessary for victory.

On Second Thought—What Does It Matter?

"Darling," he asked, as he drew his fiancee closer to him, "am I the first man you have ever kissed?"
"William," replied the girl, somewhat testily, "before we go any farther I would like to ask you a few questions. You are aware that my father is a millionaire something like ten times over, aren't you?"

"Y-yes."
"You understand that when he dies his fortune will be left to me?"
"Y-yes."
"You know that I have a quarter of a million in my name at the bank?"
"Y-yes."
"And own two and a half mil-

"Y-yes."
"That my diamonds are insured for a quarter of a million?"
"Y-yes."
"Then, for goodness' sake, talk sense! What difference does it make to you if I had been kissed by a thousand men before I met you?"
Hope or Regret
Do not anxiously hope for what is not yet come; do not vainly regret what is already past.—Ch-

The Touch of a Friendly Hand

A gentleman went into a jeweler's shop and asked to be shown some precious stones. The shopkeeper brought forth a tray containing, among other stones, an opal. As it lay beside the others it appeared dull and altogether of little value.

Then the jeweler took it in his hand and held it for some moments, and again showed it to his customer. Now it shone and flashed with all the hues of the rainbow. It needed the warm touch of a human hand to bring out its color and beauty. There are human lives about us that seem cold and dull and lusterless. Perhaps because they need a helpful hand from some of us!

All Out FOR VICTORY AT Firestone

To the men and women of the Firestone organization, whose loyalty, skill, and efficiency have won the nation's highest industrial tribute, we extend our sincere appreciation of the fine spirit and whole-hearted cooperation which merited these Army-Navy Production Awards.

To our fellow Americans, we of the Firestone organization affirm that we regard this high honor as a challenge for the future as well as a reward for the past. It shall serve as a continuing inspiration to all of us to strive for increased quality and quantity of production in the war effort and to final victory.

WAR DEPARTMENT
OFFICE OF THE UNDER SECRETARY
WASHINGTON, D. C.

August 8, 1942

Mr. Harvey A. Firestone, Jr., President
Firestone Park Plant
Akron, Ohio

Dear Mr. Firestone:

This is to inform you that the Army and Navy are conferring upon the Firestone Park Plant of the Firestone Rubber and Tire Company the Army-Navy Production Award for high achievement in the production of war equipment.

This award is the nation's tribute to the spirit of patriotism and production efforts of the Firestone Park Plant and its employees. The men and women of that plant have every reason to be proud of their great work in building up our soldiers on the fighting fronts.

In conferring this award the Army and Navy wish to express their appreciation to you and your employees for your part in the production of war equipment. This symbol of their permanent contribution to America's war effort is awarded only to those plants which facilitate their own success.

I have full confidence that your present high achievement is indicative of that you and your employees will do in the future.

Sincerely yours,
Robert F. Patterson
Under Secretary of War

Mr. Harvey A. Firestone, Jr., President
Firestone Rubber and Tire Company
Park Plant, Massachusetts

Dear Mr. Firestone:

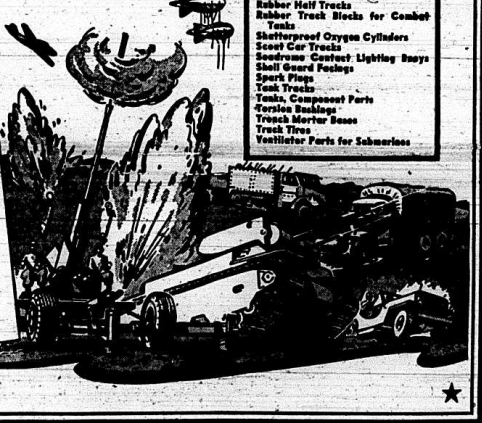

This is to inform you that the Army and Navy are conferring upon your organization the Army-Navy Production Award for high achievement in the production of war equipment.

The award consists of a flag to be flown above your plant, and a 100% plan on every number of the Firestone Rubber and Tire Company may view as a mark of their inspiring contribution to the future of our country.

The accomplishment of the men and women of your organization during the past year has set a high standard of practical patriotism. The Army and Navy are confident that their record of accomplishment in the future will raise that standard even higher.

Sincerely yours,
Robert F. Patterson
Under Secretary of War

The Army-Navy Production Award Ceremonies will be broadcast on the "Voice of Firestone" Radio Program over the National Broadcasting Company coast-to-coast network tonight at 8:30 E.W.T.

Tiddits Of Kentucky Folklore

By Gordon Wilson, Ph. D.
All DRESSED UP
Almost complete freedom in dress in 60s times seen under the light of our clothes we used to wear. Except when the temperature is in the neighborhood of a hundred, it is possible for me to go where I need to go now without fearing that I will be in a dead faint.
Probably there is too much comfort today, even the breeches cannot reach us by detailing certain forms of punishment in the hereafter.
Light summer clothes are decidedly modern in our part of the world. Suits were once both summer and winter, and there was nothing much worse than for a man to "tail his coat" in company; it was practically the same as for a woman to take down her hair in public. Neither the man or woman nor his family would have soon lived over such a boorish act. It might not have been so bad to have heavy summer suits if only the underwear could have been light, but it was long and dark, the same that one wore in the dead of winter. To make matters nearly as bad as they could conceivably be, collars were starched, and starch becomes soft when saturated with sweat. Put all this together and you have a condition that is a pretty good likeness to the discomfort those same preachers pictured rather too frequently.
Suppose we bring back from the past some terms that may have escaped your notice or may have been covered up by later styles. Just what would a bib or a tucker be in the phrase "best bib and tucker"? You remember the fascinator, the shawl-like thing that girls used to wear on their heads and men later acquired to wrap up head and ears and neck? Were we tenderer then to require such care? Do you know what a tow string is especially when it is in a garter? Before webbing was common, it would have been easy to find such an article in every neighborhood. Colored socks — those that are "just the thing." I always think of oxblood shoes when I learn of the range of some queer color. Now there was a color that was really color. When you walked down the aisle at church with a pair of oxbloods squeaking, people could almost hear the odor, too. Quite as funny in another way were the tooth-pick shoes, long as slide-runners and coming to a point; hence the descriptive name. Did you ever see a false shirt bosom? It served the useful purpose as detachable collars and cuffs but seem to have departed sooner from the realms of style. And do you remember the old watch chains that looked like only slightly smaller log chains hung across the vest? To own one and wear it made you stick out your chest permanently in the manner requested by the photographer when we got our "beauties snatched." And why should I mention bustles and hoop skirts and choker collars and hobble skirts and paper of celluloid collars? Probably any article of dress is funny after it disappears and rarely funny while it is in style, but it does seem to me that in general our styles are much more sensible and hygienic than they used to be.

Don't Let Poor Eyesight Lessen His Chances for Leadership
Give Him Better Light for Better Sight
Most children are born with perfect eyes. But it is an appalling fact that by the time they leave grade school, one out of five has defective vision. At college age, two out of five have faulty eyesight.
Why risk your child's eyes and his chances of future success? Give him enough light and the right kind of light for safe seeing. Put an I. E. S. Study Lamp on his study table. And have plenty of light elsewhere in your home — well shaded and free from glare. Light all of each room, too, not just part of it.
Remember: eyes are priceless; good light is cheap! Have better light tonight!
He has only one pair of eyes to last a lifetime. Safeguard them with better light.

"Retonga Is Grand" States Mrs. Glass

She Felt Like A Nervous Wreck A and Many Days Hardly Had Strength Enough To Cook A Meal, She States. Retonga Brought Prompt Relief.

Hundreds of well-known men and women, in a sincere desire to help others suffering as they did, are coming forward to tell how Retonga relieved them of harassing symptoms due to insufficient flow of gastric juices in the stomach, the toxic wastes of constipation, and need of Vitamin B-1 for digestion, nerves and strength. For instance, Mrs. George W. Glass, 1120 Breckenridge St., Owensboro, Ky., a lifelong and well-known resident, gratefully states:

"I was afraid to eat a bite of solid food, and even soft foods tortured me with gas pains and bloating that some times was so severe that I felt like I couldn't get my breath. I was forced to take a strong laxative nearly every day, and for a year or more I hardly knew what a good night's sleep was like. I felt like a nervous wreck, and many days, I hardly had strength enough to cook a meal."

"Retonga gave me more relief than anything I ever tried. I eat, sleep and feel so much better and stronger that I wish I could tell everyone suffering as I did about Retonga." Thousands praise Retonga. Accept no substitute. Retonga may be obtained at the Maggard, Rexall Drug Store in Mt. Vernon, Ky.—Adv.
