

GHOST PLANE

By ARTHUR STRINGER

W.M.A.S. SERVICE

THIS STORY SO FAR: Although he suspects him of being up to something, Alan Slade has agreed to go to something named Frazne and his partner, who are on the Anavotto river to look for the breeding ground of the trumpeter swan. Frazne has paid them well enough to enable Alan's partner, Croger, to buy a Lockheed that will help them. Alan helps Lynn Morlock, daughter of the "Big Boy" Padre, give her first treatment to an ocean flyer named Slim Tumstead and learns that Tumstead knows about the plane and about Frazne's expedition. During that night the new plane is stolen by a masked man who spreads the night at the cabin of his prospective co-pilot, Zakewand-Ginty, where Slade keeps a gas cache. Frazne shows no interest in either gold or platinum, the latter a newly discovered source of power. But the next morning, when they have been in the air only a few minutes, Frazne decides to land and stay there on the Kaskana. Instead of going to the gas cache, Alan and Lynn go on his way back. Lynn and her father are remaining in operation in the Eskimo Eskimo, in the hope of restoring his sight. Lynn has just suggested that they try to reach the Eskimo to bring the supplies they need for the operation.

New continue with the story.

CHAPTER VIII

So while the radio searched the Barrens for the whereabouts of Alan Slade, the abandoned Ivvik Inlet shed had been turned over to an emergency hospital. It had been scrubbed and disinfected and fitted with a homemade operating table.

Lynn turned from the sea front and walked up the slope to its rough-boarded walls.

She tried to tell herself that it was for the man with the Viking eyes who she was waiting.

No, she stubbornly contended—it was for Alan she was waiting. It was for those needed supplies he was bringing in to them.

Her thoughts, a moment later, went to other things. She crossed to the door, convinced that she had heard the faint and far-off hum of a motor. She scanned the gray-blue sky and searched the long line of the hazy horizon above the southern muskies fields. But all she could see was a single, pale blue geese winging silently northward.

She was still at the door when she observed that Kogaluk was entering old Umanak through the topekh-ludde toward her.

"You hear um?" Kogaluk surprised her by asking.

"Hear what?" questioned the girl, still again searching the horizon.

"It was Umanak who entered." "The devil-bird that comes from nowhere, and go nowhere, I hear um, go for two days now." "What does he mean?" Lynn inquired of the slanting Kogaluk.

The young Eskimo woman found it hard to explain.

"Um a plane, a 'ghost plane', she finally asserted.

"But your father can't see," Lynn persisted.

"But see," said Umanak. "But hear um. Hear um two, three days now."

"It didn't just melt away," said Lynn. "It must have gone somewhere."

Kogaluk's braided head nodded unexpected assent to her.

"Um go to Echo Harbor," she asserted. "That harbor on sea, full of devil devices. Echo Harbor taboo to our people."

"But what could it do there?" It was Umanak who answered.

"If Umanak have good eyes hee stood go. Me no see any thing there. He squared his sturdy old shoulders.

"When was the last time you thought you heard this 'ghost plane'?" asked the young white woman. They were, she knew, countless miles away from any possible air route.

"Me hear um today," said Umanak. And he said it with conviction.

Lynn gave some thought to this. She was still trying to persuade herself that these credulous and child-headed people were merely fabricating a mystery out of something that could and would be quickly reduced to the commonplace.

But even as she thought there she could see old Umanak stiffen in his tracks.

"Me hear um now," was his abrupt cry of triumph.

His hearing, apparently, was keener than the others'. For when Lynn stepped forward, with streaming ears, she could hear nothing.

"Me hear um," repeated the old Eskimo.

But Lynn disregarded his cry. For as her coasting gage wandered back and forth along the southern skyline she caught sight of a small speck that grew bigger as she watched.

"That's no ghost plane, Umanak," she cried. "That's Alan Slade with his Snow-Ball Baby and the puppets we've been waiting for."

The Flying Padre, waiting at the water's edge as Slade came ashore, promptly noted the sense of strain on the bush pilot's face.

"What's wrong?" promptly questioned Padre.

"I hit of bad luck," said Slade. "We've lost our Lockheed."

"A crash?"

The tired face became grim.

"That's what I mean. My cache at Slade indicated his armful of packed-

The young Eskimo woman found it hard to explain. "Um a ghost plane."

"But who could have done it?" questioned Lynn. "It's such empty country."

"That's what I intend to find out," Slade told her with determination.

Lynn stood upright, fixed by the sudden thought of the ghost plane. But before that thought was put into words the Flying Padre appeared in his pontifical-looking surgical gown.

"If you've time to sit in on this," he said with one eye on the flyer and one on his waiting instruments, "you can wash up and help. It's a rather interesting bit of work."

"Will the old boy see any?"

"That's what we're counting on," said the man of medicine. "But Umanak speaks a little English, remember."

"Me see the devil-bird that go nowhere after you make eyes good," proclaimed the patient.

There was sureness in the delicate movements of the doctor's fingers, but Slade couldn't rid his mind of the thought that one small slip might mean disaster. One wrong move could mean blindness for life. He was glad when the bandages were about the weary-shouldered old face concealing what had been done to it.

"Is that all you do?" Slade inquired. He tried to make the question seem a casual one. But he found himself touched by a new respect for a calling which he had so recently been tempted to disparage.

"That's all we can do," said the Flying Padre, "for the present. But Lynn is going to stay on the flyer after Umanak. I've a couple of meningitis cases at Cape Morrow that mustn't be neglected."

"And he'll be able to see again?" persisted the skeptic-minded layman.

"Of course he'll see again," was Lynn's low-noted reply as she tucked a warmed four-pointer about her patient.

"Me see devil-bird that go nowhere," murmured Umanak.

Slade stood suddenly arrested by those murmured words. He knew well enough that a devil-bird was taboo to a native.

"What does he mean by that?"

"He's kept at bay, he can hear a ghost plane, a devil-bird that comes and goes along the coast-line," Lynn explained. "And his daughter Kogaluk claims she's sensed it, flying between her and Echo Harbor."

"It was Dr. Morlock who spoke first."

"I suppose," he said as he checked over instruments and bottles and stowed them away in his bag, "that you'll be heading south tomorrow?"

Slade crossed to the window and looked out at the empty and interminable skyline.

"No," he said, "I'm not going south tomorrow."

"What are you going to do?" asked Lynn, startled by the grimness of his face.

"I think I'll look into this devil-bird business," he said as his narrowed gaze rested on the horizon.

"For just above that horizon he caught sight of a small and ghost-like-gnat of silver, winging its resolute way southward above the dark line of the muskies country. It looked as if it were about to burst a bubble. But Slade, as the silver fleet finally vanished, told himself that he knew a plane when he saw one."

"Where'll that take you?" the Flying Padre was asking.

"I don't know yet," said Slade.

"But I've an idea I'll end up somewhere along the Anavotto."

"I'll go down to the plane with you," said Umanak, who had been kissed and having been kissed, found the world a different shape.

The Flying Padre's face took on a deeper line of thought.

"How about Alan?"

Instead of answering, Lynn crossed to the window. She gave a glance out over the empty rock ridges, she took up the two letters lying on the sill.

"Let's see what Barrett has to say," she observed with a forced casualness.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Lesson for November 22

MOTIVES THAT STRENGTHEN FAMILY LIFE

LESSON TEXT—Exodus 21:4; Joshua 24:15; Ephesians 6:1-4; 1 Peter 3:1-6; 1 Timothy 2:1-4; 1 Corinthians 13:13.

Last week we saw the things which strengthen the family life. Now we turn to those things which give strength to the home and to daily life. This is a lesson much needed just now when so much of our normal home life is thrown out of joint.

We begin at the right place when we say that there must be a

1. Recognition of God in the Home (Exod. 21:4; Josh. 24:14, 15).

Failure at this point is without question the great mistake of our day. Christianity touches every phase of life, but nowhere is its blessed influence of greater importance than in the home.

Our lesson suggests that this is to be done in two ways in our homes.

1. By Faith in God (Exod. 21:4). The story of the birth of the babe who was to be Moses, possibly the greatest civic, social and religious leader of all time, reminds us that the Jewish people, who had found favor in the eyes of the Pharaohs in Joseph's time, were now being persecuted. A decree had gone out that all boys were to be destroyed at birth.

Here were two parents faced with the sad fact that their baby boy was condemned to death. Did they weep in fear and despair? No, they wept in God and sent the little one forth on a venture of faith, the charming story of which follows the verses of our lesson. God honored their faith by using their enemies to serve them.

2. Service for God (Josh. 24:14, 15). Joshua, who followed Moses in leadership, led the Jews to Canaan, was giving his last admonition to his people. He knew how they had repeatedly turned from God in their hearts, that even when they were worshipping false gods.

He pleads with them to turn to the one true God; but notice that his method was effective by the fact that he and his house were serving the Lord. Every man who has a position of leadership in this world must first be a man of God.

It is a pity that we see so many men of power, as a testimony for God. Now and then we hear of a high public official, a man of God who loves and serves Christ in his office, and our hearts rejoice: The faith of a whole nation may thus be strengthened.

Every one of us has a sphere of influence, and our family life counts for or against God in our own country and among our own friends.

The members of a family that recognize God have a high

11. Regard for One Another in the Home (Eph. 5:28-31; 6:1-4).

It is pure hypocrisy for the family to parade an outward show of religion which does not effectively reach into the hearts of the members of the family. Incidentally, it is the kind of hypocrisy which is strikingly ineffective—men see through it too easily.

What then does Christianity do for the home itself? It determines, directs, sweetens and glorifies the relationship between

1. Husband and Wife (Eph. 5:28-31). This passage puts marriage on a par with the relationship between Christ and the church. This marriage is the joining of man and wife in a holy union, which calls forth love in its highest and noblest sense.

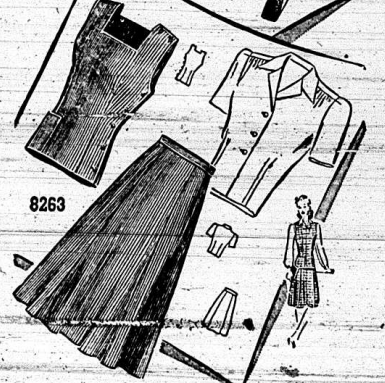

This means that the husband cherishes his wife as his own body, against which no man would do any harm, and for which he makes every possible provision for its comfort, health, usefulness and attractiveness. Such love between parents will lead the entire home life along in a serene, happy and wholesome way, and will not only double the joy, but will give strength in the hour of sorrow, dividing the griefs and burdens of life.

2. Parents and Children (Eph. 6:1-4). The first, and one might almost say the only, law of childhood is obedience. It is God's way to joy and a satisfying life experience for the child in the Christian home. The command to obey carries with it the understanding that the parents are "in the Lord." What father or mother would be impetuous to direct a child apart from faith in Christ?

Notice too, that the parent has an obligation to deal intelligently and justly with the child. The child needs a great deal of improvement, and perhaps instruction, at that point. Authority, asking obedience is necessary, but it can be wise and kind.

Above all, there is to be a tender nurture, a guiding of the tender child life in the ways of God. Here is life's greatest opportunity and its mightiest challenge. How surprising that fathers (and mothers) who are looking for the greatest measure of blessing to their generation should see it in the privilege they have to rear intelligent, godly children.

Shoes with pointed toes one to two feet long were favorites with English men during Edward IV's reign. The points were tightly stuffed with hay or moss. But they were out-ped by the flat shoe points in Richard II's reign. Those were so long the toes had to be fastened by chains to the knees or waist so the men could walk. Fans were two feet wide in 18th century England, and large enough to shelter an entire family in a rainstorm. As when at work, men carried them. The dresser lads liked theirs frilly, with ruffles and mirrors.

A Plan to Protect Agriculture After This War

By Pauline Coffey

For years the tragic results of the expansion of food-producing acreage during World War I has haunted American agriculture. Every farmer who has been in production has interrupted his rotation of crops to produce food and more food for our own people and for the Allies in Europe. It seems plain that by the end of this war American farmers will be faced with a tremendous surplus production which ordinary peacetime requirements will not absorb. The year of 1942 our total average acreage production was 20 percent above the average for the last 10 years will be more than 21 per cent. How then can we prevent a glut of surplus production which will result in a post-war farm tragedy even worse than that following World War I?

Experiments in Rubber and Other Synthetic Products
 Our Government is now experimenting with domestic sources for rubber. Some sixty thousand acres of American acreage are producing a post-war farm tragedy even worse than that following World War I?
 Denied the use of kapok which we imported from the East Indies and used in life preservers, we have discovered that the flax from our own weed makes better life preservers than kapok ever did. Factories have been built and several thousand acres are now devoted to raising milkweed intensively.
 Already we are producing tung oil from our own trees.
 Luckily we have at hand the National Geographic Magazine, an organization of research chemists from our several industries who compare notes and gain new enthusiasm in the search for uses of old crops and new crops which can be cultivated in America.
 Our government has established regional research laboratories.
 More than fifteen thousand different kinds of plants grow in the national state of the United States. We use less than three hundred of these plants. Farm chemistry will not be complete, nor the post-war problem of agriculture solved, until our plant is re-examined in the light of modern science and made to serve a part in contributing to the comfort, happiness and security of our America of the future.
 A Plan That Deserves Support.
 The United States Senate is considering a plan which would require the use of 20 per cent of war profits during the war for the purchase of Recovery Bonds by each company in order to have available the necessary cash to quickly change their business and industrial plants back to peace-time activities at the close of the war and to adjust the employment of their normal number of factory workers.
 This percentage of war profits could also be used in a broad plan of research by industrial chemists to develop new uses for products of the farm or our domestic industry. If our industry has the knowledge and the money in hand to conceive an all-out effort to convert production, maintain employment and launch the new products discovered by science, we have a reasonable chance to absorb our farm surplus even in the post-war period.
 Depression hit our rural areas longer and harder than our industrial areas. Our hope for the security, happiness and prosperity of Rural America is at stake. If we can develop this practical plan for taking care of our surplus in the after war period, we can go forward unafraid in an all-out production effort for the winning of this war and in providing the food necessary for starving people in the after war period. We will know that we have provided an ever-expanding America with new crops and new uses. Worth thinking about.
 Agriculture and Labor
 "Agriculture has excellent reasons to take concern for the welfare of labor," says Wheeler McMillen. "The situation after the war is over will be of particular importance to farmers. Men earning good wages full time are much better customers than men without jobs. Men steadily employed under satisfactory conditions are far less likely than men without work to become the prey of men who agitate for strange kinds of government. Agriculture ought not, therefore, to develop hostility toward labor and toward labor organizations as such. A wiser course would be to try to use agriculture's influence for correction of those men which do good either to laborers, farmers or the nation."
 America's Real Stimulant
 "The United States every man's value is determined by his activity, and every man is given the opportunity to develop his abilities. An American's real stimulant pride consist in being a self-made man, in fighting, and in winning the fight."
 -Javier Prado.

Town Marshal Pless Debord was an outstanding member of the profession who served Mt. Vernon for many years and is remembered with affection by the county's older citizens.

During his years in office, Pless was in many times arrested, more than once he faced threatening pistols, barking pistols, bowie knives and drunken bluster.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

U. S. North African Occupation Seen As 'Springboard' for Southern Front; Hitler's Seizure of Southern France Thins Axis Forces for Russ Campaign

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of the writer. They do not necessarily reflect the views of the Signal. Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

Territory in North Africa occupied by U. S. expeditionary forces under Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower will be used as a springboard for offensive action against Italy, the Adriatic Balkan and possibly southern France, military experts believe. Principal features on above map show (1) American control over Atlantic ports in French Morocco; (2) Mediterranean ports of Oran and Algiers in American hands; (3) strategic Bizerte in Tunisia, which would complete control of the Mediterranean; and (4) Vichy-held Dakar, which military experts expect to be taken over by Allies.

BLITZ TIMETABLE Beats Schedule

Two immediate jobs had remained for Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's American invasion forces after they had completed their spectacular blitzkrieg of the Mediterranean. The first was to take the record time of 71 days to control of Tunisia, a French protectorate jutting northward into the Mediterranean and offering via strategic Bizerte an ideal stepping stone toward the Axis "soft spots" of Italy and the Adriatic Balkans.

HITLER: Seizes All France

Military observers agreed that Hitler's seizure of unoccupied France meant a further lengthening of his lines and a weakening of his forces. The Fuehrer had no other choice than to try to close the "back door" to prospective Allied invasion by ordering his own legions southward to the Mediterranean and the Spanish frontier and those of his Italian "stooge" northward to the Riviera. Corsica, island birthplace of Napoleon, was likewise seized.

DRAFT: Inductions Soar

Induction of 18 and 19-year-olds into the nation's armed forces by January 1, 1943, appeared certain as the Senate finally approved legislation lowering the selective service induction age. In order to fill military requirements up to the first of the year, local boards throughout the country indicated they would soon have to begin drafting childless, married men.

Final impingement on the law's passage was hurdled when a group of senators decided not to press their attempt to require a full year's training for all 18 and 19-year-olds before they could be sent into combat service overseas. The house had previously approved a measure eliminating this feature.

RUSSIAN FRONT: Nazi Drives Stalled

Communications from Moscow took on an increasing note of optimism as the Russians maintained that the German offensive against the Red line from the Baltic to the Black Sea had been smashed for the year.

Southeast of Nalchik where the German drive for the strategic Trans-Caucasian military highway had been stalled, the Russ defenders continued their fierce attacks. Elsewhere in the Caucasus the Red where in the mountainous vicinity of Tzupze, Black sea base, and thwarted every enemy attempt to break through.

SOUTH PACIFIC: MacArthur Wins

Slam-bang warfare continued in the air and on the ground in the South Pacific, with American and British forces pressing the Japs hard on New Guinea and Guadalcanal in the Solomon Islands.

Washington Digest Second Front in Africa Points North to Italy

Underground Anti-Fascists in Italy Want Strong Brand of Democracy for Aiding the Allies; Seek U. S. Pledge.

By BAUKHAGE News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, 1343 H Street, N.W., Washington, D. C.

According to a number of people in Washington, of whom your correspondent is one, the most startlingly important event of the war may be taking place and nobody including the enemy, will admit it. A second front has been opened, the first carefully planned and meticulously worked offensive against the Axis since the war started has begun in Africa. There are diplomatic developments as well as military which, some believe, indicate that the path to victory will lead through Rome.

Of course, you couldn't get even a whit of official confirmation for such a presumptuous assumption from anyone higher than a first sergeant. Nevertheless, there seems to be quite a bit of circumstantial evidence to support the observation of such a development. At the same time certain phases of the diplomatic field add their touch of verisimilitude to what the military might say was a bald and unwarranted claim if not unconvincing statement.

Such military information as I might offer, which has not been a matter of official record, is permitted to write. But it is permissible to recall that the Germans claim that the British have a million men in the Mediterranean command in Africa. The official accounts of the number of American down planes in almost continuous activity over a huge area indicate that the American air force in Egypt is not inconsiderable, even in these days of giant armies and armadas.

Apprehension in Tunisia

There are diplomatic reports of apprehension on the part of the populace of Tunisia, a vital strip of territory lying along the coast of the narrow waters that separate it from Sicily, the Axis stepping stone from Italy to Africa, which hint that the Japs may extend even further west than Libya.

There is something of a parallel between these Italian demands and the revelations, or what the conservative diplomat would call indiscretions, of Wendell Willkie when he called for assurances of the non-imperialistic designs of the United Nations.

Willkie, as is his wont, used a blunderbuss instead of a scalpel to obtain his end, but he did clear up the atmosphere on the subject of what Russia and China thought about the need of extending the scope of the Atlantic Charter. The realistic Jan Smuts, prime minister of South Africa, echoed this sentiment a few days after Willkie's report by making it a major item in his demand for a full statement of peace aims.

Strong Brand of Democracy

Another point upon which some of our allies, and particularly our potential allies in Italy, were recognized by us and emphasized in our belief, many times stated by the speaker, was that we were not to be so seldom elaborated, namely, that democracy has to go back to things as they were.

They expect democracy, but they make it plain they expect it to be economic as well as political, and they want a brand that may prove stronger medicine than everyone might care to take. The groups in Italy, like those in other countries, have forged their political philosophies in the fire of aggression.

The revolt against the physical brutalities of totalitarianism is likely to carry them far in the opposite direction. They demand an ideal of democracy that has to be a physical effort approaches, to formulate a post-war world peace ideal. If, as seems possible, the second front to approach Italy's coasts of Fascism, before it reaches Nazi borders, the attitude of Italy's anti-Fascists must be clearly understood as taken into account.

they have known no other party and no other government through their entire years. They are members of the armed forces because they are loyal to Italy.

According to the report which I mention, made by supposedly authentic and authorized representatives of the anti-Fascists, the underground movement in Italy is powerful and effective; it has accomplished a weakening of civilian and military morale; publishes a large and efficient anti-Fascist press; has organized political meetings and combat groups in nearly every Italian town; has brought about a strike for the first time in Italian history between the working class and the intelligentsia; it has caused general inefficiency in the army, caused sabotage in the campaigns of Greece, Albania and Libya and has actively sabotaged war industries.

The members of these groups, the young men who grew up under Fascism, are not revolting to bring about a change of government, they are revolting against the status quo for definite aims. They want a new democratic order.

Italian Anti-Fascist Demands

The members of the Italian underground are determined to overthrow Fascism wherever it exists. But they demand a concrete, complete, sincere statement of the program of the anti-Fascist forces before they will join them, since they risk everything in revolt and they might simply gain new chains for old if they faced a typical political peace.

They want, specifically, a clear-cut statement of the peace aims of the United Nations. They want these aims stated without equivocation or couched in the fine generalities of the Atlantic Charter, and they want to be sure that they have the guarantee of the United States as the administrator of those terms which they must build the kind of an Italy they want.

There is something of a parallel between these Italian demands and the revelations, or what the conservative diplomat would call indiscretions, of Wendell Willkie when he called for assurances of the non-imperialistic designs of the United Nations.

Willkie, as is his wont, used a blunderbuss instead of a scalpel to obtain his end, but he did clear up the atmosphere on the subject of what Russia and China thought about the need of extending the scope of the Atlantic Charter. Bureau Chief's Pretense At Being Essential . . . Save $1,000,000,000 a Year?

By Syndicate—WVU Features.

WASHINGTON.—There are two fundamental difficulties in accomplishing governmental economy in non-war activities. These explain the recent announcement of the senate appropriations sub-committee have not been heard by the administration.

One of these is the human desire on the part of each government official to retain his own importance—to preserve not only his job but his position for advancement. This sort of thing is not confined to the government service, of course. It is rampant in business.

The human nature operates on precisely the same pattern. The larger the corporation the more chance the individual "cheater" has of getting away with it. A check which hides more than reveals.

In a corporation there is at least an incentive for somebody to discover the waste. It is the most reviled, among the liberals, profit motive. Even a lowly minority stockholder is apt to demand the waste of his money, and to sound off about it. Then there are officers of the corporation who will get credit for their boards of directors by pointing out how the savings could be effected.

There is a waste of money in government. It is almost unthinkable that the studies made by Senator Harry R. Byrd of Virginia would have been discontinued if the investigation he had conducted had been into the activities of the department of telephone company.

More publication of Byrd's reports would have stirred up such a hornet's nest among the minority stockholders that action by the high courts would have been virtually compulsory.

Business of Government
But in this business of government, unfortunately, there do not seem to be any minority stockholders. All of us taxpayers actually are comparable to the minority stockholders of a corporation, of course, but we are not "profit conscious" in the way most "minority stockholders" are.

The best example of pure waste of man power and government money is the department of agriculture, which is proceeding to divide up all the divisions which formerly were created to prevent surpluses in the staple crops, in other words to limit production of food to prevent price declines.

It is true that in wheat and some other staples there are large surpluses at present. But the idea of making surveys and paying farmers not to grow needed foodstuffs in view of the war situation, "plus the situation everybody knows will exist the moment war is over—that of feeding a starved world—is one that would not appeal to a grammar school boy. If there were no national commitments involved. That is where the man who wants to preserve his own importance comes in.

The second element is always with us—the desire to reform everybody else.—Granted that this is an essential part of government, in ordinary times are the activities of hundreds of department of justice lawyers and clerks trying to reform the Associated Press, and the like. It is particularly, to mention just two pending cases, necessary now? Couldn't they be postponed until we are not so terribly busy with something more important?

Zealous to Save Government Money?
If President Roosevelt had a lieutenant, say one he trusted as much as Harry Hopkins, who would be as zealous in trying to save government money on non-military matters as Henry Morgenthau is in trying to devise new taxes, you and you would have a billion and a half billion dollars less taxes next year, and every year after that.

Different persons might differ as to the total results, but it is probably no disinterested investigator would place the amount at less than one billion dollars. And we must one thousand million more.

They say one cannot visualize a billion dollars. True. But any grammar school boy can visualize a billion dollars in terms of what they comprehend the total or not.

One of the ablest men in the country, recently estimated that the clerical force could be increased, and he was thinking of the war agencies, by a reduction of 70 per cent in the clerical personnel. This particular man had not been interested in the non-war activities.

In some of them there should be a 50 per cent reduction, because the work a few of them are doing there is not only the waste of the salaries, typewriters, stationery and mail perquisites, not to mention the man power, but the work done is actually harmful to the war effort.

Meat-Saver
Voluntary meat rationing is already in process. This period before the actual rationing starts—and limits—each person to 2½ pounds of meat a week is the time for every Mrs. America to take stock and plan for the days ahead—days when the newly teamed meat ration book beside her sugar ration books and goes to market.

Such rationing has been a challenge, but a challenge which homemakers have met. Meat rationing will be even more of a challenge for many are homes where meat has been set on the table twice and even three times a day. But this challenge, too, will be met, for there are many ways of tiding over the days when meat supplies will be low.

Let's first look at the situation from the nutritional standpoint, for good health and well-being is a first goal. Meat is primarily preferred because it is known as a complete protein—containing all the different types of proteins that the body needs for building and repairing down-out tissues.

The sources for protein you'll tap first are fish and wolf, cheese and milk. We have excellent supplies of these so there will be no excuse for missing out on your quota.

Meat is excellent for its minerals, but the meat-savers mentioned above are also famous for their minerals—calcium, phosphorus and iron.

Now, let's get down to the business of serving these foods appetizing and attractively. Fall in the season and there are many kinds of fish—and your butcher will help you out with the best. Canned fish is now something to be proud of. Fresh-frozen fillets are its own issue-uses items, minus the cooking odor which many find objectionable. Try this idea:

Fillets in Tomato Sauce.
(Serves 4)
2 pounds fish fillets (halibut, perch, pike, whitefish, salmon)
2 cups tomato pulp
1/2 cup vinegar
6 whole cloves
2 bay leaves
6 peppercorns
1/2 teaspoon sugar

Place fish on a greased baking sheet and sprinkle with salt and pepper.

Lynn Says:
The Score Card: The question being asked these days is to how much meat will actually be allowed per person in the civilian Share-the-Meat program. The answer is 2½ pounds of meat a week as it is passed over the counter to you by the butcher—including meat, bone, gristle and fat.

Meats with little waste include the highly nutritious cuts like liver, heart, kidneys, sweetbreads and brains. Canned meat, sausage, scrapple, soups and stews—products will not be subject to restrictions.

Leafy green specials still include apples, grapes, pears, and delightful persimmons—good for canning or for puddings. Cranberries are brightening counters and menus.

Squash, pumpkin and sweet potatoes are holding their own, and there are green peas, spinach, broccoli and brussels sprouts.

"With less foods to choose, the smart homemaker will season to the best of her ability," says Lynn. There is mustard grown here in our own country, and paprika, too. Cayenne from Louisiana and chili, American grown, are earning a fine place on the cook's spice shelf.

TO YOUR HEALTH

by DR. JAMES W. BARTON

HIDDEN HUNGER

Some months ago the Canadian Medical Association, with funds provided by insurance companies, published a little book called "Food and Health," a copy of which was to reach every homemaker in the land.

This little book told of food values, the needs of the body for various kinds of food, the cost of an "all round" meal for families of various sizes and other useful information about food and health.

Dr. Barton food and health. The National Nutrition program, through the United States Federal Security Agency, includes a motion picture on nutrition entitled "Hidden Hunger." "We all have a job to do these days and part of our share in the nation's wartime effort begins with our choice of foods."

A recent nation-wide survey showed that two out of five of us suffer from hidden hunger—live at half speed, because we only feed parts of our body and let the other parts starve. The body needs 40 different food elements to feed its various cells—some elements to feed muscles, others to feed the brain, others for the cells by which we see, feel and hear.

I will not reveal the plot of the film story by which we will be taught "to use food wisely and thereby save the elements of our abundant food stuffs and at the same time get ourselves an equal chance for health, the way we got our equal chance to live."

"If the American people will only buy and cook well-balanced meals those now suffering from hidden hunger will not be hungry coming from an empty stomach but the hunger in their bodies will be the wrong kind of food, but it will be brought back to health and efficiency."

What is the amount and the kinds of food a man should eat every day to be hale and hearty?
1 egg, one pint milk (three-fourths one quart for growing children); two vegetables (green, leafy or yellow) and a potato; an orange or tomato; fish and another fruit; three of four slices of the right kind of bread (whole wheat or enriched white); two tablespoons of butter or margarine, and meat.

What Causes Bad Breath?
A few years ago I followed a controversy as to whether bad breath was due to food particles left between the teeth or to some disturbance in the stomach and intestinal tract. It was determined that bad breath can be caused by mouth and nose conditions such as infected teeth and tonsils, and by the dry form of catarrh, but what caused bad breath in the mouth, nose and throat are free of infection.

Presented by Dr. Cron and Rudolph Dross, New York, in the Journal of the American Medical Association, state that heretofore patients with bad breath have consulted nose and throat specialists and dentists who searched for decaying teeth, infected gums, and infections of throat and sinuses. The teeth, the gums, the tonsils and sinuses are the cause at times; only and cases due to nose and throat conditions are becoming less in number due to better knowledge of the importance of a healthy mouth, throat and sinuses.

Experiments were made as to the best method or methods to prevent the odor of garlic on the breath. These research workers found that it was not the mouth nor the stomach that was responsible for the odor of garlic on the breath but the intestines, particularly the small intestine into which the partially digested food is poured from the stomach.

Why is the small intestine responsible for bad odors on the breath, because of oil of peppermint and oil of wintergreen were also used in the tests and these two oils acted exactly the same as garlic?

These research workers state that halitosis is due to the fact that food eaten are not handled properly or are not handled completely by the stomach and is therefore incompletely digested fat foods, lying in the small intestine, that cause the odor. They point out that patients with peptic ulcers taking milk daily often have a bad breath. "If these patients are given a diet of cereal, eggs, and lean meat, the odor disappears."

QUESTION BOX
Q.—Is it harmful to eat a raw potato every day?
A.—A raw potato will do no harm if eaten daily. One raw vegetable or fruit daily is recommended by food experts.

Q.—What causes me to be exhausted each day?
A.—Two commonest causes of exhaustion are: (a) nervousness or emotional upsets, worries and conflicts; (b) some low infection, teeth, tonsils, sinuses or intestines.

Prepare Now for V-I-C-T-O-R-Y AFTER VICTORY

The problem of changing from war work, after World War I, to peacetime production, plunged the United States and the rest of the world into a panic. Rural America felt this depression five years ahead of industry and business. We tried to turn back to the farm, but we would not believe the warning and insisted the rainbow and the pot of gold at the end of the rainbow.

To Prevent a Worse Depression. Our problem is to prevent even a worse depression than the one we had in 1918. Every industry, big and little, has been retooled to produce airplanes, tanks, cannon and weapons for the war. Millions of dollars have been spent for this purpose.

When this war is ended it will cost some millions of dollars to turn these industries back to peacetime production. We learned after World War I that our country cannot prosper unless agriculture prospers. We know now that our country cannot prosper unless agriculture, business and industry, and labor are all prosperous.

For each farmer the maximum of farm products if each worker has a peacetime job at good wages. The employer can pay good wages if he has something useful to manufacture and some one has the desire and the money to buy it.

Farm Prices Reflect Good Business. This makes it plain that with employers and business busy in useful undertakings, with all workers employed at good wages, farm prices will be good and consumption at its maximum.

Our United States Senate is searching for a plan that will provide maximum revenue to the government to insure victory, provide a fund at the end of the war big enough and quickly enough to convert business and industry from war work to peacetime necessity; but without the government having to borrow and lend the money for this purpose after the war is over.

Recovery bonds would be a special kind of bond for this purpose only. Recovery bonds could not be sold or borrowed during the war, and neither would they pay any interest. They must be held by the purchaser until the end of the war. The day the war is over these bonds would automatically start to bear interest, could be bought and sold, and would be as good as any other government bond.

MAKING THE MOST OF YOUR LIGHTING

(No. 2 of a Series)

Replace Dark Shades

If your lamp shades are not white or very light-colored on the inside, you're losing a lot of valuable light. Dark colors soak up light like a sponge—in some cases as much as 50% of the light is lost. Clean your lamp shades regularly, or if they're too dark or discolored with age, replace them with fresh, new, white-lined shades. You'll get a lot more light from the same bulbs—light that you need for safer, easier seeing.

AN EFFICIENT GLARE CHASER

is this plastic, screw-in adaptor. Designed to replace bare bulbs on drop cords or in single-socket fixtures, it provides an abundance of glareless, evenly-distributed light that's kind to eyes. It's easy to install—screws in like a light bulb—and costs only $1.65 complete with 150-watt bulb. Ask for a free trial.
