Record War Bond Sales Is Goal Of Women At War Week Nov. 22

WASHINGTON, D. C.—America's women in the cities and on the farms—in war factories and in their homes—are determined to make Women At War Week the greatest War Bond selling effort since Pearl Harbor.

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt sounded the keynote for the Treasury Department's Women At War Week, Nov. 22 to 29, with an appeal to women to save on "little things" to provide money for War Bonds.

"We women want to work hard, we want to be a part of this strenuous period because unless we are, we will not be able to face the men when they return and claim our share of the future responsibility for building a peaceful world," the First Lady declared.

The overall direction of Women At War Week rests with the Women's Section of the War Savings Staff under the leadership of Miss Harriet Elliott, Associate Field Director, and Mrs. Henry Morgenstau, Jr., Chief of the Special Activities Unit.

From coast to coast women in every community have made plans for torchlight parades, fashion shows, teas, rallies, store window displays, Stamp and Bond booths, pageants, civic sings, balls and mardi gras. In each locality administration of the one week drive rests with the local War Savings Committee which has worked out activities adapted to their areas.

Mrs. Morgenstau, in a special message for Women At War Week, declared that the spirit of America's pioneer women lives today more strongly than ever.

"The average American woman began to rise to new heights of Sunday, Dec. 7, 1841," Mrs. Morgenstau said. "This winter the average American woman will be spending less time to save more to invest in War Bonds and Stamps. She will not, please God, ever have to fire a gun or fly a bomber. But she will, please God, always do everything she can to help buy anything—and the best of everything—that fires or flies or floats in this terrible war."

WOMEN AT WAR—Oreansh, wrenches and drills replace barter as these war workers in an Army Arsenal march to tank repair shops. Note the determination on their faces. These women are typical of hundreds of thousands who are working in war factories and investing part of their earnings in War Bonds.

GOVERNMENT SHOPS LOCATED HERE

The War Manpower Commission, working through the NYA, has opened a training center in Mt. Vernon for students in auto mechanics with equipment sufficient to enroll and instruct about forty boys in this branch of Government service prior to sending them to Patterson Field Dayton, Ohio, where they will receive about two months of training. After training at Patterson Field they will enter Civil Service with jobs as helper-mechanics for the U.S. Army.

The equipment for the school was formerly located at Williamsburg, where it remained for fourteen months in the training of 600 youths. According to Mr. Hubert W. Cattlet, shop superintendent, this will be the best equipped shop of its kind in the state. It is located in the building of the former Mt. Vernon Motor Co., on Richmond Avenue.

Only cars and trucks belonging to Government agencies will be worked on in the shop, Mr. Cattlet said. No other work will be done, but it is repaired there. Enrollments have already started and the boys will begin their training in about 10 days. They will receive 82 months of learning. Enrollment in the classes is gained by recommendation and through S. Employment Service, Mr. Cattlet said. The school will do the work painting and cleaning the building for the installation of the machinery.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Pacific Sea Victories Prove U. S. Naval Strength Is Growing as Japs' Declines; Russ Smash Nazi Threat to Caucasus; MacArthur Encircles Japs in New Guinea

EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns they are those of the writer and not necessarily those of the newspaper.

The North African coast was the end of the first lap of their journey to Berlin for thousands of U. S. soldiers who participated in the successful invasion of French North Africa. The above photograph, one of the first pictures passed by the war department, shows a detachment of U. S. troops looking at a picturesque Algerian Mediterranean village west of Oran.

SOLOMONS:

Smashing U. S. Victory

Americans had scarcely received the news of the brilliant naval victory in the Solomon which drove the Japs back reeling with 23 ships sunk and 30,000 sailors and soldiers drowned, when additional reports were forthcoming on the sinking of five enemy warships. The second action was the concluding part of a great three-day campaign which ended the Jap fleet from the Guadalcanal area.

Shrewd and resourceful Vice Admiral William F. Halsey, commander of the American forces, emerged from the battle as one of the outstanding heroes of the war, for it was his audacity and guile in the face of superior Japanese forces that won a smashing three-day victory.

Ship losses in the slugging encounter included one battleship, three heavy cruisers, two light cruisers, five destroyers and eight transport transports sunk; four cargo transports destroyed on the beach near Guadalcanal, and one battleship and one destroyer sunk. Enemy losses in the second engagement were one battleship, three large cruisers and one destroyer sunk.

Naval officials said there was "good reason to believe" that the sinkings reported in second engagement were in addition to those previously recorded.

American losses were two light cruisers and six destroyers sunk. The major part of the sea picture was fought directly off Guadalcanal island, which the Japs approached from three strong and gale on the intent on effecting a landing that would dislodge the heroic American defenders. One of the decisive elements in the battle was the coming of American surface units in steaming directly between the lines of the Jap columns, firing broadsides in both directions. This phase was led by Adm. Daniel J. Callaghan, former naval aide of President Roosevelt, who killed an enemy ship.

While the navy rejoiced in its triumph, it accorded full credit to General MacArthur's aircraft which had originally spotted the Jap convoys and made repeated bombing attacks on the enemy shipping.

NEW GUINEA:

Jap Dunkirk?

Steadily the jaws of the Australian-American trap had closed on the strategic Jap-held port of Buna in New Guinea. Significant of the importance of the New Guinea drive to dislodge the Japs was the presence in the field of Gen. Douglas MacArthur. While his hand for some time conveyed the enemy positions, MacArthur's bombers had fanned out for widespread aerial activity, the Japs calling list besides Buna were enemy installations at Lae and Salamaua.

The critical plight of the Jap garrison at Buna was emphasized by the arrival of eight enemy warships in the vicinity. In a grim game of hide-and-seek that ensued between the American Flying Fortresses and the Jap vessels, one enemy cruiser and a destroyer were sunk and another destroyer damaged before the flotilla fled. Observers were of the opinion that the Jap warships might have been preparing to evacuate the Jap defenders of Buna.

18-19-YEAR DRAFT:

High Schoolers Deferred

President Roosevelt set aside two weeks beginning December 11 for registration of youths who have reached or will reach their 18th birthdays since June 30. The President's order likewise provided continuous registration on their birthdays of youths who become 18 on or after next January 1.

A presidential proclamation hailed the new registration as "advisable to insure victory."

ROOSEVELT:

War's 'Turning Point'

American victories in the Solomons and in North Africa might well be hailed as an appeal to the turning point in the war, President Roosevelt declared. But, he warned, the American people, there is time only for working and fighting, none for exaltation.

The President coupled his analysis of recent military events with a rebuke to critics of the government's war and international policies, who speak "either out of ignorance or out of ill-will."

Declaring that he had made a constant effort to keep politics out of the fighting of the war, Mr. Roosevelt pledged loyalty, however, to having "permitted pressure to disclose the sinking of an American aircraft carrier 10 days before the November elections." He said he had realized that "if the news of the sinking had been given out two or three weeks later it would have been charged that this news had been suppressed by me until after the election." The result was that vigorous protests had come from commanding admirals in the Southwest Pacific and at Pearl Harbor that military information was being given to the Japs, because they probably had no sure knowledge of the sinking.

GAS RATION:

Curtailed in East

Demands for petroleum products by the American Expeditionary forces in North Africa in excess of original estimates resulted in a curtailment of 28 per cent in the gasoline of motorists in the Eastern States. The OPA order did not affect the Middle West, where rationing had been scheduled for December 1.

Motorists traveling in the East from other states, however, would have to comply with the new rationing which gave three gallons of gasoline for 70 coupons, instead of four.

Officials said the East Coast curtailment would result in about 20,000 barrels of gasoline a day.

'FREE RUMANIA':

Fund Grab Foiled

Carol of Rumania into the United States from Mexico and establish a "Free Rumanian" movement in this country was foiled, was disclosed with the indictment by Detroit of three leaders in the cabal. At stake was nearly $80,000,000 in frozen Rumanian funds.

At the other end of the Caucasus front German attempts to break through the Soviet lines near Tispak were reported by the Red army, while reports said winter was closing down rapidly over the entire Russian front.

It had for weeks past, the Nazi front at Stalingrad remained at a stalemate, with German attacks beaten off by the stout-hearted Russian defenders. The oil refinery area was the principal target of the Nazis' effort to gain a foothold in this strategic Volga metropolis.

NORTH AFRICA:

3-Pronged Pincer

Was left of the towering Axis empire in North Africa had drawn closer around Tripoli, as Allied forces menaced it from the east, the west and south, while the Mediterranean on the north had fast become a lake dominated by United Nations air and sea power.

From the east, Gen. Montgomery's Eighth Army had swung through Libya in pursuit of Marshal "Rommel's" battered Afrika Korps. From the west, American and British forces had pushed into Tunisia, aided by units of Gen. Giraud's French North African army.

From the south, it was reported that 10,000 of the fighting French army, mechanized with American equipment, had struck northward from Lake Chad in French West Africa.

Goal of the Anglo-British armies was to capture the coastal city of Bizerte in Tunisia, the "springboard" to southern Italy. British paratroopers flown in American planes had captured the island of Pantelaria, reports disclosed. The Moroccan fleet described these Paratrooper operations as the largest ever carried out by air-borne troops.

FRANCE:

Laval Mask Off

Pierre Laval could now write his own ticket. Observers believed that the Marshal had been ordered to the enemy positions, MacArthur's bombers had fanned out for widespread aerial activity, the Japs calling list besides Buna were enemy installations at Lae and Salamaua.

The critical plight of the Jap garrison at Buna was emphasized by the arrival of eight enemy warships in the vicinity. Across the Mediterranean in Algeria, Admiral Jean Darlan continued as the titular head of French North Africa. But no longer had Vichy's blessing and no longer was he heir-presumptive to Petain's post in the event of the latter's death. International Turncoat No. 1, Darlan had dexterously cast his lot with the Allies. He had been successful in American invasion. Pres his had been notoriously pro-Axis. His elevation to second in command to the engagement in the fight against Axis leanings after the 1940 French Collapse.

Washington Digest
Willkie Emphasizes Need For U. S. to Direct Peace

Dedicates His Life to Arousing American Leadership in 'All-Out Offensive for Global Peace When War Ends'

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

WU Service, 1344 H Street, N. W., Washington, D. C.

Editor's Note: In an exclusive interview with Baukhage, Wendell Willkie discloses his views on the following article, "Willkie's Dismissal of the Third-Party Question and the American Job, in the Post-war Peace."

Wendell Willkie has "cut out a huge chunk" of himself.

That revelation came to me in one startling, raptier sentence, hurriedly spoken, in a quiet room, an unsuspecting, unprepared reporter.

It is the biggest job Willkie ever tackled. Biggie, I am sure he believes, was once a president, even in wartime, would have been.

It is not the job of leading a third party. He has his word that he considers formation of a third party impossible.

It is the job of arousing America to leadership in an all-out offensive for a global peace when the war ends—beginning now.

With his well-thatched head and his square jawed, albeit-courteous against the flashing panorama of the East river below, Willkie talked to me in the office of his law firm recently, in a New York City jangling telephone interrupted occasionally, he paused to give quick answers to pencilled notes from his secretary. He answered a list of 14 questions.

The remark that convinced me that he means business was a part of his answer to the ninth of my 14 questions. After he had stressed the necessity of a new American leadership in the war effort of the United Nations, I asked:

"What will happen, Mr. Willkie, if you take this leadership job as necessary? How will it affect the war? How will it affect the post-war world?"

American Leadership

"Willkie has a habit of looking you in the eye, and he looks you into space and meditate before he speaks.

"If there is not a United Nations leadership, we must expect to see America playing its part in the leadership—I mean political and moral leadership—as well as military leadership. I mean that the United States will last longer, many more lives will be lost uselessly . . ."

By this time his words were staccato, each sharply emphasized, the words of a man who wanted his hearers to believe. The last phrase came crescendo:

" . . . and the world will revert to the old spirit of nationalism. Then he turned and looked at me intensely: "That's why I have dedicated my life to this job."

Those words and the way they were spoken convinced me that Wendell Willkie, whatever his political ambitions might be, had drawn his blueprint for his own future that was wider than the map of the United States.

"We have to get started now," he said. "We can't wait until the war is over. We have to get the machinery step by step. It isn't a thing that will come full-blown out of the sky."

"What are you going to do about it?" I asked.

"Third Party Again

"I am going to speak, I am going to write, I am going to try to convert the country to the belief—and I am going to work within the framework of the Republican party toward the adoption of this idea as a policy."

"What about a third party?" I asked.

"The formation of a third party is legally impossible," he replied, impatiently brushing aside the political question. "I am going to return to the question of a war and peace policy."

Just what is this "policy"? Mr. Willkie made that pretty plain in his report to the nation. He said:

"To win that peace three things seem to be necessary—first, we must plan now for peace on a global basis; second, the world must be free economically; and third, we must have for nations and for men that peace may exist in it; third, America must play an active, constructive part in freeing it and keeping its peace."

Willkie wants, immediately, a full statement of post-war aims, an extension of the Atlantic Charter, so written that the nations of the globe will be assured that all are to be co-beneficiaries. He wants, immediately, a real United Nations under control and a united council ("no second class allies").

Out of this, American leadership will automatically develop, he believes, because the "Wesker good will" which America has built up on her non-imperialistic policy.

Japs Worrying Over Shipping Losses . . . 'Stolen' Planes Angers Stalin . . .

Deliberately 'Stolen' Features.

WASHINGTON—The "most accurate information about Japanese moves comes from China.

It will be recalled that weeks before the Japanese storm broke over the Solomons reports came from China of a big Japanese invasion route there. This was not the first time, nor the third, that the Chinese information about Japanese movements was so accurate. It does seem a pity, incidentally, that better use could not have been made of all this accurate information.

What gas done with it was that it was broadcast over the world. In the first place most newspaper readers regard it merely as rumor and hence rather unimportant. Others regarded it as Chinese propaganda, with some ulterior purpose.

The Japanese, it would appear, who took it seriously were those who KNEW it was true—the Japanese.

Now the latest information from the Chinese sources is that the Japanese are gravely worried about their losses of merchant shipping. They are not able to replace it, according to all this accurate information like the rapidity with which it is destroyed.

Astania's Officials

Again according to the Chinese, the Japs are worried about their shipping losses. The Chinese say that the Japs are unable to replace them about as rapidly as the United States is producing information, assuming it to be correct, is astonishing to official Washington.

But the concern of the Japs about merchant shipping is most encouraging. Nippon simply must supply vast amounts of shipping to supply her troops and to keep her air force, scattered as they are, thousands of miles of ocean.

And there is no doubt that our boys in the air are doing a good job of taking a heavy toll of her merchant ships. Let's hope the good work goes on.

Marked for Russia, Go to England

That story which leaked out about Stalin's rage, manifested in front of Wendell Willkie, has been repeated at Moscow, about the 150 "stolen" airplanes, is interesting from two angles. One of them is the popular belief that the Japs are taking a heavy toll of her merchant ships. Let's hope the good work goes on.

This story has done all sorts of harm, not only in fanning anti-British feeling, but also easy enough to stir in the country, but because of the apparent inefficiency. Heaven knows there is plenty of inefficiency without manufacturing false stories about it.

But thousands of Americans, many in important places in the production of war material, have been telling their friends that all the convoys for North Russia, which not only would involve something like a thousand miles of unnecessary journey, since the route via Iceland would be shorter, and that the British chance for fishing some of the Russian supplies.

The other angle comes later, but first let us get the story straight, said to Willkie. It seems that a list of guests was submitted to Willkie for a dinner to be given by Stalin in his honor. Willkie added the name of the U. S. ambassador.

Stalin agreed, but asked would it be all right to invite the British ambassador as well? Willkie of course agreed. When the time came at the dinner for the British ambassador to propose a toast to Winston Churchill, Stalin, in an obvious anger—which is said to have lost nothing in force of statement by the British press—said that he would stoole 150 airplanes planned for Russia, and who caused the death of hundreds of Russians last year because we did not have those planes.

Inquiry later revealed that it was true, that the Japs had taken 150 British planes from the British in the Far East and sent them from Iceland to Britain. The justification was that the Japs had perhaps something never dreamt of in its philosophy, or about to come out of that corner of Manhattan bounded by Broad and Wall streets.

We have heard so many stories, since the outbreak of the war, about airplanes which were never uncrated, or about ships which were never captured by the Germans, some in Singapore and elsewhere in the Far East which were captured by the Japanese, and so on, that it is to be some logic in this diversion.

The worst phase of the story, however, is that the planes were not immediately replaced, and that the shipping space to North Russia. That this was not done, with full realization of the damage indicated by the rage of the Russian chieftain.

Timbits Of Kentucky Folklore

By Gordon Wilson, Ph. D.

After I grew up and got big enough to work in a stand on Confederate Reunion days and fourth of July, I learned to be old and responsible enough to work in one of the village stores. And that is just what I got to do after a while. On big days, like election days and -limes when the magistrate's court had a particularly big docket I was able to satisfy my desire to look and feel important. Probably Christmas was the biggest time of all, for we really sold goods that could count on having willing purchasers. So eager was I to work in the store that the next day after a very serious nasal operation I went over to Fidelity to see the election crowd and was roped in for the night, even though my nose was so swollen that I could not breathe through it and I had sat more than two hours the preceding day to have flesh and gristle and bone removed. Something protects fools, I have heard. I suffered no setback from my hardy working in the store and am alive to tell the tale nearly forty years later.

It was not alone the remuneration I received that made a day in the store so big, although I must confess that my own money felt mighty big in my pocket. The importance of being behind the counter instead of in front of it was - all, and more, of my salary. When the other boys came in, there I was, trying to look professional, to resist their candy or sugar - or coffee - or peach - with all the calm of an old hand. A boy bearing a train at a fashionable wedding felt no bigger than I did when I drew molasses or vinegar or coal-oil in the barrels in the side room and returned bearing my jug. -

When there were the yards that I got to hear so many times that knew where we went to catch all the boys at school or at Sunday School.

The fellows who knew every inch of the county seat lost no time in telling all the hairbreadth escapes they had endured or nearly suffered. If, by chance, they had been to county court, they told again and again, whenever a new whittler joined the assembly, all the points in the trials and what the judge and each lawyer said, adding all the fine mimicry that Fidelity people practiced as unconsciously as a duck practices swimming.

As in running a stand, there were times when the joys of Paradise had a serpent to spoil things. Whiskey flowed on all occasions. The water bucket behind the door, with water from the community cistern near by was often the place where the cus-tomess first laddered; sometimes he got no farther than there, regarding himself with many a dipperful to dilute what he had previously drunk. Sometimes it was necessary to cast him out of the store, or if he could not walk straight, to seat him in a chair until he had regained some of his equilibrium. Embarrassing scenes rarely went beyond this, but I got a wholesome disgust that later often stood me in good stead.

THE LADY FAIR
Nature hath made her what the women call a fright, But by painting and by padding here and there.

She contrives to make herself a creature to delight.

A lipstick used to do her lines. A few pads placed to round her hips. She visits the beautician's chair, Has cellulose placed in her hair.

After these few aids to beauty rare, Her many friends then declare She has become a beauty.

And men are known to stand and gaze; You'd think they had the women craze. The way the oldsters misbehave, Sure makes the beauty romp and rave.

It matters not how she became In possession of this tip to fame. We all admire her just the same. For each touch of beauty aids her plan. And helps somewhat to elevate the soul of man.

Dr. J. F. Pennington

Ford, of Washington, New York; Miss Orla Williams, New York; Mrs. Cecil Ramsey, all of Louisville, Lt. and Mrs. Ford will make their home at present at Camp Cooke, Calif.

SILENT-FRANCE

The people of hitherto unoccupied France are being visited by the Nazi invaders with silence. What is in that silence?

For one thing there is a realization which the wind-w-dressing at Vichy was destined to prevent.

The people are being ruled by Germans. The policy of the Nazis was to preserve as long as possible the fiction that French affairs were in the hands of Frenchmen who sought only the best for their country. It was the task of some of these men to convince their fellow citizens that France might be better off in a totalitarian Europe than it had been as a member of a community of free nations.

That usefulness of Vichy to the Nazis is now at an end. Many of us knew it would come to an end some day. Some thought this would be written to it by revolt within France, some by the invasion of France by forces of freedom. What was not so widely foreseen was that it would be terminated by American and British forces fighting in Africa and the cause of its termination would be Hitler's desperation.

Nazi troops in France are now pulling down the facade that Nazi diplomacy has been working hard to keep in repair for more than two years. Nazi leaders did not plan it this way. They are now face to face with the silent France wondering what may be in that silence.

Miss Jean Brown, of Conway spent the week-end with her cousin Miss Lucille Mason.

Mr. Graden Mason spent the week-end with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Graden. Mason is employed at Independence, Ky.

Eliminate Colored Bulbs

Amber-orange and fluorescent bulbs in round or flame shape give a mellow, amber lighting effect, but there is a considerable loss in light to obtain it. Replace them with incandescent lamps of the same wattage and you'll get a lot more light from the same amount of current. It's a good idea, too, to see that bulbs are equipped with shades to prevent glare and to direct light where it is needed. We'll gladly help you in any way we can to make the most of your fighting.
