Col. Merian C. Cooper (left) points to map of China and Burma as he makes report to Robert Lovett, assistant secretary of war for air, in Washington. Colonel Cooper returned to the United States after serving as chief of staff of Gen. Claire L. Chennault, commander of the Chinese Air Task Force.

WORLD FEDERATION: Asked by Wallace. Ever since his "quart of milk a day" speech forecasting bettered conditions for the world's underprivileged, Vice President Henry A. Wallace has been regarded as a No. 1 administration spokesman on post-war reconstruction.

4-WAY OFFENSIVE: By Russ Arms. The Russians continued to prove that while the summer might have belonged to the invading Nazi hordes, the winter was the season for Red revival.

HIGHLIGHTS in the week's news. WASHINGTON: The navy department announced that dive bombers from Guadalcanal had sunk a 3,000-ton Japanese vessel near Wickham island in the central Solomons.

CANNED RATIONING: Little Panic Buying

Fears that a nation-wide scramble of housewives to buy canned foodstuffs would develop following official disclosure of a point rationing system would be inaugurated in February failed to materialize as reports from retail grocers indicated only isolated instances of panic buying.

CASUALTY LISTS: Full Publicity Ahead. Confident that the American public can "take bad news," government officials revealed that the ban on nation-wide publication of war casualty and prisoner lists had been lifted.

SPRING VEAT TRAP. Acting with all the detective-thriller technique for which they are famous, G-men brought to light the liberty of jail-breaking Roger ("Terrible") Touhy and his associates.

TUNISIA Battlefront. Although tropical sunshine had dried the surface of Tunisia's boggy roads, the gumbo mud continued to hamper free movement of either the Allied or Axis forces.

TOJO: 'Real War Starts'. Bland-visaged Gen. Hideki Tojo, war minister, had no bland words for the Japanese people when he appeared before the Japanese diet.

This Generation Must Pay for the War . . . The State Department Becomes Annoyed . . .

Bill Syndicator—WNU Features

WASHINGTON.—In every war there are those who insist taxes should be so high that no unbearable burden of debt should be left for our grandchildren. And there are others who say that the privations of war are bad enough, without taxing the people already suffering endure super taxation as well.

In the last war we heard another argument—that this, the 1917 affair was a war to end wars, since there would be a better world after it. It was only fair that the victors to come in and pay a little for what had been passed on to them.

There is a joker in the argument on both sides, when it comes to deciding whether to pay the cost now or pass it on to future generations. The simple fact is we are not able to pass it on. We must pay it ourselves. It is only the method of paying in which we differ.

The fundamental error in most arguments about war financing is that the debaters insist on regarding a national government in the same way they regard an individual.

Some Own, Some Don't

If a country sells bonds to its own people, the eventual result is that a lot of its people own bonds, and another group does not. As a general rule, it will be the prosperous people who own the bonds, while the poor, most of the taxes, which in turn must pay the interest on the bonds. And the principle, if indeed that is not paid, (Britain has never paid the interest on the bonds it incurred to fight Napoleon.)

Now, none of this will have any effect whatever on the production of food, clothing, houses, furniture, automobiles, or other things which people want to produce and which are shipped out of the country to pay interest.

The worst thing that could have happened, financially would have been inflation. Bad as that is, it is not our grandchildren who suffer so much from it as ourselves. The reshuffling of property which inflation always produces has little effect on the economy of people as a whole, a couple of generations later. So it is the folks living during the next few years who do the suffering. They can't pass much of it on!

Hecklers Compared To Boat Rockers

There is a growing impatience in Washington, and London also, if reports are correct with the element so vocal in both Britain and America who keep rocking the boat about peace terms. Admirals in the media, and a few other ticklish politicians.

These critics of our relations with Darlan did not even wait until Darlan was safely in our hands before insisting that he must be thrown overboard at once, as he has up to now.

No one has publicized that Darlan has been executed for reasons utterly unconnected with the present war, that it would not surprise the state department at any moment if this also should be demanded.

It happens that the position of Secretary of State Cordell Hull on all this hubbub about Darlan and peace terms is well known. Hull agrees heartily that it would have been absurd and wicked to have spurned the tremendous aid which Darlan was able to bring to the side of the United Nations, inasmuch as such spurning would not only have cost the lives of many thousands of Americans and British soldiers and sailors in the immediate North African campaign, but might easily have prolonged the war for years by demanding that North African campaign to disaster.

Most of the critics of this use of Darlan began their shouting while the North African campaign still looked—from a four thousand mile distance, like a walkover. When it lighted that fighting around Tunis and Bizerte was really serious, with air power not sufficient to retain the control of the skies which had made Rommel's advance impossible, they had committed themselves so definitely that they could hardly draw back.

With regard to peace terms, the position of Cordell Hull is that it would be perfectly futile to discuss peace terms while a long, hard war is still before us, especially in the Pacific.

What the critics of the handling of Darlan by the United Nations, of the failure to give India the same independence, of the failure to declare that no country shall ever again rule another, and of the failure of never bother to explain is what might happen if all that they clamor for should be done.

Little Lunches Flatter Wartime Menus

(See Recipes Below)

Victory Lunches

Mid-day meals with that go-get-it-spirit are those that are properly balanced, and have plenty of eye-appeal. The days are gone when you can make a quick dash to the corner grocery and bring home lamb chops to broil quickly. Gone, too, are days when you had to eat a cold, dry, unappetizing sandwich. Now, however, you need not be felled, rather let your ingenuity devise new ways of getting nutrition requirements into your menus. Use protein foods like peas, beans, eggs, and vitamin B1 foods like cereals—add vitamins to make up for meat. Your New Year victory menu parade starts off with a meat loaf "stretched" with oatmeal.

- ### 1 pound ground beef
- 1/2 cup oatmeal
  - 1 egg, beaten
  - 1/2 onion, grated
  - 1/2 cup milk
  - 2 tablespoons chopped parsley
  - 3 tablespoons catsup
  - 1/2 teaspoons salt
- Bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees) about 1 hour. Makes approximately 2 1/2-pound meat loaf.

- ### "Little Lunchons," (Serves 6)
- 2 cups sifted enriched flour
  - 3 teaspoons baking powder
  - 1 teaspoon salt
  - 2 to 4 tablespoons shortening
  - 3/4 to 1 cup milk
  - 1 cup ground meat
  - 6 packages Egg Creamy Cheese Sauce

- ### Sift flour, baking powder and salt together. Cut or rub in shortening. Add milk to form a soft dough. Turn out on lightly floured surface and knead 7 to 10 minutes. Roll dough out in a rectangle 8 inches wide and 1/2 inch thick. Cut in half lengthwise and spread each half with ham and roll jelly-roll fashion, sealing edges well. Cut rolls into 8-inch pieces. Bake each piece into rings on baking sheet. Pinch ends together. With scissors, cut through rings almost to center, in slices about 1 inch thick. Turn each slice slightly on its side. Bake in hot oven (450 degrees) 10 to 12 minutes. Place a poached egg in the center of each ring and serve with Creamy Cheese Sauce.

Lynn Says:
Cans and Jars: You will have noticed that your grocery shelves present a different picture than in the past. Instead of all food being put up in cans, some food has been preserved in glass. In those foods placed in cans, the government has decreed three different sized cans. A number two sized can, one of the standard sizes yields 2 1/2 cups and will serve four to five people. The number 2 1/2 sized can averages 3 1/2 cups and feeds six people. Largest food can is number 10, usually used by institutions and restaurants. This large size is not usually practical for a family of less than eight since it yields 12 cups and would last for at least two months. A few additional sized cans are allowed in the case of canned meats, fish, baby food, and citrus juices.

THE WORKING LIVER

For a number of years I found myself writing about the liver almost every month. I pointed out the various jobs done by the liver such as manufacturing bile, and then the various jobs done by the bile; the storing of sugar in the liver for future needs of the body; the importance of the liver in filtering out the harmful substances from the blood and the effects these harmful substances would have on the body tissues and body processes if they were not filtered out; the coloring and other materials in the liver used to help form the blood; that the liver was the largest organ in the body and about one-quarter of all the blood of the body.

There was one point I mentioned once or twice but did not emphasize it should have done, and that was the advisability of having the liver tested for its working ability just as the heart, kidneys, stomach, bowels and other organs are tested. A test can be made showing the working ability of the liver by the use of substances taken by mouth or injected into a vein. The liver should remove these substances from the blood within a definite time. In the treatment of patients with these substances is hippuric acid. A test can be made showing the working ability of the liver by the use of substances taken by mouth or injected into a vein. The liver should remove these substances from the blood within a definite time. In the treatment of patients with these substances is hippuric acid.

In the Medical Journal of Australia, Drs. Margaret Henderson and B. Spillart report their results in 80 patients with liver disease, 36 with various other disorders, and 25 normal adults. Patients recovering from minor ailments. Not only did the results show the extent to which the liver was damaged, but it showed also how the damaged condition of the liver was allowing poisons to aggravate other conditions present in the body, such as pernicious anemia, tuberculosis and rheumatic arthritis.

However, we can keep the liver in good working condition by taking long breathers by breathing exercises, keeping the knees straight (both exercises squeeze the liver) and by avoiding overeating.

Mental Clinics Doing Good Work

A few years ago the statement was made that at the present rate of increase in the number of mental cases in any and all communities, within 50 years it would mean that at least one out of every 100 people would require mental care. Naturally health departments everywhere are doing their best to prevent this condition by various means.

Today mental institutions by regular and special forms of treatment, by the help of visiting or resident specialists—throat, teeth, heart, lungs, and others—are able to send back to home and business about 85 in every 100 patients admitted.

Where the greatest progress is being made, however, is the recognition of the "early" symptoms and signs of mental ailments by the family and general physician, and the sending of these early cases to a mental hygiene clinic. "If the average taxpayer stopped to think of what it costs to keep just one patient in a mental institution, he would gladly pay double each extra year to prevent it."

Dr. Victor H. Vogel of the U.S. Health Service, as recorded by Science Service, states: "It would not cost taxpayers a cent if their local health services added mental hygiene clinics to their child health clinics and other services. Such clinics would produce the number of patients admitted for mental hospitals. Mental illness is the most expensive kind because of its long duration. In three people a year are saved from becoming public charges in a mental institution, that means enough money saved to support a mental hygiene clinic for an entire year." The saving of money is but the least of the benefits of a mental clinic. It cannot be compared with the saving of life and happiness. Mental hygiene clinics help people whose lives are threatened by other dangers, too. A divorce can sometimes be prevented, a home kept intact or a suicide prevented.

QUESTION BOX

Q.—What is the cause of white spots on the skin?
A.—Cause of these white spots—vitiligo—is unknown. There is no cure. Your druggist can supply you with a coloring substance for these white spots.
Q.—Is electrolysis a safe method for removing superfluous hair?
A.—Electrolysis treatment by an expert—not necessarily a physician usually gives good results.

MODERN LIFE WITH ITS BUSY AND STRESSFUL habits, overexertion, and drinking--the rate of exposure and work--often brings about the work-overload and fall to liver and kidney blood.

Try Doan's Pills. Doan's help the kidneys, the liver, the bladder, the stomach, the bowels, the nerves, all worn out. Other pills may give a temporary relief, but Doan's is the only one that cures.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

A little salt added to the last rinse water will prevent clothes from freezing on the line.

If a fruit pie runs out in the oven, sprinkle salt over the spilled juice and the oven will not become filled with smoke.

Dip the knot on the end of that new halter rope in glue and let it dry a few days. You'll use it and you won't have any trouble keeping the knot in it. Better use waterproof glue if you can get it.

A few raspberries added to the pleasure when cooking will give a delightfully new and interesting flavor.

To stretch the fingers of washable kid gloves when cleaning, place a curling iron in each finger and it will be easy to bring back to the original size.

When removing good buttons from worn-out overalls, cut about two inches of the surrounding cloth with the scissors and use it on other overalls where the button has been pulled out. The button and patch are in one piece.
