Victorious Russian Drive Sweeps On As German Army Faces New Threats; Political Situation in North Africa Inflamed by Peyrouton Appointment

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union.)

MALTA—After beating off Axis attacks, a convoy laden with the necessary stores of war drops anchor in harbor at Malta. The Axis does everything possible to halt the stream of supplies pouring into this vital important British island base, but the convoys are getting through. This photograph was made from an board an accompanying British six-inch gun cruiser which helped escort the ships through the Mediterranean.

INSPIRATION: For the Russians

There were reports of later Russian successes following the breaking of the siege of Leningrad that story carried more drama for the Russian people themselves than the reports of all the rest. For Leningrad is Russia's second city and it had been almost a year and a half since there had been any land communication between it and the rest of the country.

As the Red army battled to widen the five-mile corridor through which the siege was first broken there were dispatches from all along the 1,200-mile front reporting new losses for the Germans. At all points the German lines were sagging before the newly found power of the Russians. In fact, the German lines were sagging before the newly found power of the Russians. In fact, the German lines were sagging before the newly found power of the Russians.

NORTH AFRICA: DeCaulists Object

New names were ignited under the bubbling cauldron of political dissatisfaction in North Africa when Marcel Peyrouton, veteran French politician and former Vichy minister of the interior, was named governor of Algeria.

ARGENTINA: Stands Alone

After Chile's senate had voted 30 to 10 to break off diplomatic ties with the Axis, Argentina remained the only American country retaining relations with Germany, Italy and Japan.

HIGHLIGHTS in the week's news

ELIGIBLE: Washington officials revealed that boys who have reached the age of 17 are eligible for training in the army enlisted reserve corps and air corps enlisted reserve, providing they have the consent of their parents. Not until they are 18, however, will the 17-year-old enlistees be called to active duty.

FARM LABOR: And the Draft

In efforts designed to keep more workers on the nation's farms the War Manpower commission has put into effect a broad liberalization of agricultural draft requirements.

Heretofore farmers have usually been required to be responsible for 16 "farm units." Now as few as eight "units" could result in holding of military draft.

Premiums would increase proportionately to the reciprocal to 10 per cent of the worker's paycheck. During the first stages of the plan's operation these premiums would be paid jointly by the employer and employee, much like the present social security program.

BIRTH-TO-GRAVE: Social Security

President Roosevelt is scheduled to receive from the department of labor a draft bill broadening the birth-to-grave-social-security plan.

POINT RATIONING: System Explained

When Office of Price Administration officials began explaining the system of point rationing it became immediately evident that points will be in importance with the nation's housewives.

RATION DATES

Feb. 1—Period A fast-food coupons valid; Feb. 2—Final date on which No. 28 coffee coupons is valid; Feb. 20—Expiration date for No. 28 coffee coupons.

the rationed foods on hand. Home canned foods are exempt. Each person will be allowed to have a certain number—probably between 8 and 12—on hand without penalty.

New War Poster

This dramatic poster depicting the enemy's ruthless intention, was entered in the national war poster competition contest by the United States Museum of Modern Art and was chosen as the best. Duane Breyer, artist, who drew the winning entry is currently awaiting induction into the army.

MORE ACTION:

Striking at Japanese shipping in the Pacific and Far East, U. S. Navy marines have sunk 112 enemy ships since Pearl Harbor. The latest command issued on this subject by the navy department showed the sinking of one destroyer, one large cargo ship, one medium sized transport, one medium-sized cargo ship and one small patrol boat.

Washington Digest Opinions Vary on Success Of Mexican Labor Plans

West, Southwest Farmers Reported Objecting to Minimum Wage Clause; Many Prefer 'Familial' 'Padrone' System.

By BAUKHAGE News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, 1343 H Street, N.W., Washington, D. C.

What has happened to the Mexican laborer for bringing Mexican labor into the United States to help fill the gap left by the drain which industry and the draft have taken from the farm?

I first went to an official in one of the war agencies with my query about Mexican labor. He is a very energetic, sincere worker, an anti-New Dealer, who is here trying to do his share to win the war.

MacArthur Lauded For Leadership

When the chapter of war history dealing with the "Battle of New Guinea" is written, it will be one of the most important that stir on the whole book. That is what military men here tell me.

That sounded very bad to me, so I called up the office of Senator Downey of California and Senator McFarland of Arizona, who are now in the committee on immigration and naturalization.

Success Reported

Senator Downey was still in California but his office was enthusiastic. I was told about how successful the use of this imported Mexican labor had been under the government's plan for rubber production.

Then I talked with Senator McFarland. He said he would go along with Senator Downey in some of the things but not all.

Long-Staple Cotton

He said, on the whole, that the Arizona farmer didn't get as many workers as needed and didn't get as good a price as he expected.

BRIEFS... by Baukhage

"An Idle Ship Is a Crime Against the Public Interest," so reads a sign over the door of John H. Lofgren, chief of the Ship Repair and Conversion.

Officers of ships sailing the inland waterways of the United States are urged to sail their ships on a river where no ships sail—the Red River of the North.

their money in planting the long-staple cotton the government wants. Neither Senator Downey's office nor Senator McFarland's had any comments on the padrone system.

Here are three quite different viewpoints. They represent a tiny fraction of the angle which Washington has to untangle, has to reconcile.

MacArthur Lauded For Leadership

When the chapter of war history dealing with the "Battle of New Guinea" is written, it will be one of the most important that stir on the whole book. That is what military men here tell me.

It is great because he has accomplished what it was freely predicted the Japs could not do (and didn't).

There are two reasons, which military men put forward why the battle of New Guinea was so important.

Arthur's reports are given out from his headquarters in Australia instead of by the war department in Washington. He is best known in Batavia (and perhaps MacArthur) want that way, and another is because American newspapers, who pay a price for news, are in the area.

Why He Is Winning

MacArthur may have another reason for not ballyhooing his achievements. He was best known in Batavia (and perhaps MacArthur) want that way, and another is because American newspapers, who pay a price for news, are in the area.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

The first known rubber hose was manufactured in England in 1827.

Collapsible rubber boots equipped with a special rubber sole for an airtight seal, are being produced in the United States.

Production of war time is definitely tied to the production of processed rubber. It is estimated that the country's rubber capacity to produce 200,000 tons of finished rubber in 1940.

Rubber activities estimate that 600 million tires have been made in the world.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

Wake Up and Shine . . . for a Hearty Breakfast!
(See Recipes Below)

Winter Breakfasts

Though the wind may howl moon-fully and the icicles crackle coldly these mornings when you arise to meet the day and its tasks, a hot, well-balanced breakfast is bound to bring you to the alert in double quick time. Fruit or fruit juice will wake you first, then eggs, hot cereal, rolls or flapjacks will do the rest toward getting you on your way.

Citrus fruit crops are especially good this winter and will be at your breakfast service with all their rich vitamins, minerals and health-giving qualities. Their zest and freshness will give you a new start these busy mornings.

Vitamin Cereals.

It's a wonderful idea to follow up the fruit course with one of those quickly prepared hot cereals which are so rich in vitamin B1—that important vitamins you need daily for preventing nervousness, fatigue and restlessness.

There are several ways of doing up the hot cereals. The quick-cooking wheat and oat cereals may be readily prepared along with the rest of breakfast—in just a few minutes' time. If you have a deep-well cooker on an electric range you can place the cereal in glass jars along with dried fruits you are able to obtain, turn on the unit overnight, and have fruit and cereal ready-to-eat.

Don't hesitate at cooking the quick-cooking cereals longer—they are improved in flavor and more palatable if you give them a few extra minutes.

Coddled Eggs.

Coddled or soft cooked eggs are made by bringing a sauce pan of water to a good boil. Then turn off the heat, transfer into it the eggs with a spoon. Cover and let stand for 10 minutes depending upon the consistency of egg you desire. This is a good way to fix eggs you can place them in the water while you're getting the rest of the breakfast.

Change Your Breakfasts.

Fried mush is a wonderful breakfast food; serve with syrup, butter and honey, and even fried apple rings—for a late Sunday morning feast.

Toasted English muffins teamed with poached eggs—and a piece of broiled ham in-between will work wonders toward getting the family on its way out of bed.

Packaged pancake mixtures will speed your breakfast tempo at breakfast time. Serve them with butter or vitaminized margarine—honey and butter sprays, fruit preserves, or dark corn syrup flavored with maple extract are all that could be desired, luscious indeed.

No, I haven't forgotten omelets! For a fluffy omelet allow 3 eggs for 2 people. Separate eggs, and beat each separately. Add ½ tablespoon cream to yolks, salt and pepper,

Big Issues in Peace With Japan... Will Germany Collapse This Spring? . . .

Washington—(WNU Features).—This winter for Russia anything like the pattern in flows that last winter did, we may expect Russian successes to continue as long as bitter cold weather lasts. By the same token, with the advent of spring, the tide may turn and we may see further Nazi advances.

No one anywhere has anything but praise for the Soviet forces. Their fighting has been magnificent, their strategy admirable. The fact remains that they lost a great deal more last summer than they did and gained last winter, measure in territory.

For example take a look at the map, seeing approximately where the battle lines are now. Then note the references to the battle lines, it will be seen that the Germans could be driven a long way back without surrendering the gains they made last summer.

This is the best answer to the question so frequently asked: whether the Russians will content themselves with driving the Germans back across their frontier, or will they pursue the Germans to Berlin. From the present outlook the Nazis will be on Russian soil until the German collapse comes.

It also seems probable, just as in 1918, that the collapse will come without the German army driven back into Germany on any front. It will not be necessary for the Germans to hold on to Sevastopol to win the war. Sevastopol is mentioned only because it is an obvious landmark illustrating that the Germans are still holding on and continue to hold unless the Soviet successes are much more spectacular than any so far this winter, much of their gain made last summer. And it must be remembered that this last summer's Nazi gain was made after the winter campaign for the Germans in the winter of 1941-42.

Actually, every bit of information worth due allowance for the lack of outside checking possible on this highly screened and censored front, is that Russia is cutting out the heart of the German war power in their food and supplies. If, on top of this, the Germans are being completely out of Africa before they get a chance to start their spring drive against the Russians; it may well be that the effect on the German morale will approach closely the point necessary to bring out a collapse.

Korean Seizure by Japan Not So Good

Not content with talking about the Four Freedoms as the basis of peace terms, the sweetest and light advocates are already talking about geographical boundaries. One of these recently said what should be done about Japan—the Nipponese to keep all territory they had on December 7, 1941.

Now that it is not so cockeyed, it flies directly in the face of one principle which this government has pursued through two administrations—those of Herbert Hoover and Franklin D. Roosevelt. Both in the Pacific when Japan moved in on Manchuria, thus starting the inevitable progression of conquest in the Pacific to Pearl Harbor, a protest was made by the secretary of state, Henry L. Stimson. This is the same Stimson who is now secretary of war.

In fact it seems very likely that if Stimson had succeeded in getting Britain to join the U. S. in that protest, the present trouble in the Pacific might have been avoided. At least Japan might not now be such a formidable opponent. Of course, a mere protest would not have been enough. Japan would have had to be convinced that Britain and the U. S. would fight rather than let her pursue her aggressions on continental Asia.

And how about Korea? The seizure of Korea by Japan is not an episode of our history of which any American could be proud. Perhaps it is just as well that so few Americans know anything about it. But the truth is that the United States had a treaty with Korea under which we had agreed to protect her from outside aggressions. We forgot all about that treaty when Japan moved in.

One can well imagine how most Americans would have felt about it then if the government had taken measures which might lead to this. Why should we risk the lives of our boys for a little bit of soil 6,000 miles away, folks would have asked. But this is the world we live in. We would have saved ourselves and the world if we had just slapped Japan down then.

To get back to the present, why should Japan be allowed to continue the enslavement of the Koreans after this war is over? Does that fit in with the Four Freedoms?

All Kentucky Youth to Have Opportunity to Help Win the War

Every rural boy and girl in Kentucky will have an opportunity to do something definite in helping to win the war according to plans under way at the State College of Agriculture and Home Economics. Already 48,000 4-H club boys and girls living on farms are engaged in producing and conserving food for our armed forces and those of our allies. But many more are needed.

Now 141 non-rural boys and girls, those who do not live on farms, will have a chance to enter in the campaign for the production of more food—and in this way to become full-fledged 4-H club members.

If a boy or girl is not so situated that he can actually raise a garden and livestock, he can by doing 150 hours of labor on the farm or in the home earn the coveted badge of 4-H club membership.

It is estimated that a total of 200,000 boys and girls from 10 to 20 years of age will be engaged in some form of wartime food production this year. Interest among rural and non-rural youth in this vital food production is high. For example, in Caldwell county, the total enrollment of 4-H club members for 1943 has increased to 411, which is double that of this year, and more neighborhoods are being organized.

Boys and girls entering in the campaign must take part in as many types of work as they are able to carry. The plan is to have quantity production of a garden which should at least three pecks of poultry for the production of eggs and meat for both home and market, and the production of a garden which should include beans, beef cattle and dairy cattle and sheep are war-time projects to receive major emphasis.

Of special interest to girls will be the selection and preparation of foods, home baking, school lunches, and the growing, canning and storing of garden products. Making, mending, washing and storing of clothing will also be stressed.

Rockcastle county will have to enroll 2000 boys and girls in the 4-H clubs to reach its quota - enroll now. Ask your county agent for enrollment card. All children between 10 and 20 are asked to enroll in the 4-H Victory Club. Boys and girls don't have to attend club meetings to enroll or carry out their work. We want all to enroll who will do something toward winning the war.

Teachers and parents are invited to assist their children in getting organized. Any teacher, or parent or friend who is interested in getting boys and girls enrolled can send cards from the county agent's office at Mt. Vernon.

Tidbits Of Kentucky Folklore

By Gordon Wilson, Ph. D.

"When good Queen Victoria ruled Great Britain and all its wide-flung empire and, in spirit, nearly all the rest of the nice world, it was not proper to speak about smells, unless they were pleasant things. (After all of my years as a teacher of English, I want to use "nice" for every adjective in that sentence.) Of course, we were supposed to like and to remember the smell of roses, lavender and dried and kept to scent up the linen. We found a smooty delight in telling how much we enjoyed the odor of honeysuckle and many of the flowers in the old-fashioned gardens. But it would have horrified all the oldsters when I knew if they could hear me declare now could I remember also many another odor from the Fidelity period of my life, remember them unblushingly.

First let us go to the old front room, the Holy of Holies of that time. Shut up from air and sunlight for six days of the week, it was able to acquire a smell that I am not able to acquire enough to name. That odor, like many that I recall, was composite. The dye in the threads of the best carpet, the smell of some of the close air would account for more; the wood smoke from the fireplace would add its distinctive part; and all of these recognizable things could not account for all of it; not to have slept in a refined front room is to have missed one of the strange joys of other times with the musciness all around, with the feather bed snuggling all about one's body, and with the mingled odors pervading everything.

If I knew more words that tell of a smell, I could use a dozen or more about the smokehouse. As in the front room, some of these can be traced to definite things: smoked hams and bacon, sauerkraut, sauerkraut, bay soap. Put all of these together and you have a smell that only "smokehouse" describes.

Individual things as well as rooms had their smells. For instance, the old family Bible combined the odor of links of various kinds, and that of flowers pressed between its pages. I suppose that I have had a sense of prevented sense of things when I associated the smell of the Bible with the rather lurid pictures of Hell in it. All our old books had a smell, too, varying with their age. Grubby fingers with no thumb card to protect the leaves were my first acquaintance with Shakespeare was through the nose, since I still yet the smell of the leather volume that one of our teachers brought one day and showed me, sincerely, youngsters who probably thought that "Shakespeare was some new Gospel that our old Bible had left out.

Smelling of school books reminds me of the schoolroom itself. Just as to one exactly pin down the right expression for a smokehouse and its odor, so it would be impossible without creating some new words, to tell an outside what was in the air that branded the old schoolroom as effluvia as the bare walls, the ancient blackboards, and the wood stove. Dinner baskets and buckets, with their food that had been packed steaming hot early in the morning, would add to the odors of the stable and crib ought to be ashamed of himself, and of his own. Even strong muskies, hanging out to the tobacco fields, has a tang about it that still reminds me of my own days in the fields. Somehow my car does not have a smell that reminds me of the cows or the horses or the sheep of other times.

Special Short Term Offered at Morehead

A special short term of school for teachers in the rural districts is being offered at Morehead State Teachers College beginning February 8. Dean Warren C. Lippin has announced. Students may earn from eight to ten quarter hours in the term. Dean Lippin said that the schedule of classes will be arranged so that the needs of all the students will be met. The short term will start on March 17, and the spring quarter will open March 22.

YOUR FEDERAL INCOME TAX

No. 3
FORM OF RETURN

Persons subject to the Federal income tax must report their income to the Government on forms, or blanks, prescribed by regulations. These forms are obtainable from any collector of internal revenue, and generally from any bank. Special forms are designated for corporations, for partnerships, for trusts and fiduciaries, and for nonresident aliens. Farmers who keep no books on an account of accrual method must attach a special schedule to their return (Form 1040-F).

For individuals, two forms are used, depending upon the amount and source of income to be reported.

Form 1040. This form is intended for general use of individuals who are citizens of the United States or residents in this country, whether citizens or not. It contains spaces to show the amount of income from various sources, deductions allowable, exemptions and credits, and computation of tax liability. As most of the items require explanation, in order to be allowable, the form also contains appropriate schedules to show in more detail how the income or the deductions are determined.

Form 1040-A. This is a simplified report, which may, at the option of the taxpayer who makes his return on the basis of gross income, be used by non-1040 by citizens and residents whose gross income was $3,000 or less during 1942, provided all this income consists of one or more of the following: salary, wages, dividends, interest, or annuities. In using this form, it is necessary only to enter the amount of gross income as shown, deduct the credit allowable for dependents, and insert the appropriate amount of tax liability as determined by the personal exemption status, as shown on the table on the reverse form. This form has no entries for deductions allowable, since the taxes indicated in the table on the back of the form are computed after taking into account what have been considered average deductions for persons of this income class.

A taxpayer should, therefore, consider carefully which form would be appropriate for his purpose. Which form to use is a matter of personal information called for in the spaces should be entered so far as applicable to the taxpayer, in order to avoid the possibility of the Government and the possible inconvenience to the taxpayer of subsequent check and inquiry.

With each return form is a set of accompanying instructions, and these instructions should be carefully read by the taxpayer before making his return.

Returns for the calendar year 1942 must be filed not later than March 15, 1943. They may be filed by mailing to the collector of internal revenue in the appropriate district in which is located the legal residence or principal place of business of the taxpayer. If the return is filed by mailing, it should be posted in ample time to reach the collector of course on or before March 15, 1943. Returns received later than the due date are subject to a penalty variable according to the lateness in filing.

Windows On New Worlds

Hair-splitting is no longer a joke with the new electron microscope, which makes visible a whole world that has previously been too small for scientists to study.

1. Using particles of electricity instead of light, the instrument makes a mosquito's stinger 1/1000 the diameter of a hair, look like this.

2. Crystals that particles, disassembled, can be enlarged to a million times to examine their nature and structure.

3. Portable, operating from ordinary power lines, it is expected to speed war research in laboratories of colleges and war plants.

4. After the war, it may be useful in many fields—for example, in searching for the cause of such diseases as the common cold.

KENTUCKY CLOTHES FOR RUSSIA COLLECTION

For several weeks the schools of the State have been collecting clothes for the Russian civilians. This project organized by Mrs. Versailles High School, Versailles, Kentucky, on Armistice Day. Every public school in the State was contacted.

The initial success indicated that much more could be accomplished. Russian War Relief sent their Regional Director, Mr. Thomas Byrd, to Kentucky for the purpose of organizing a clothes collection. Discovering the project had already been started by the principal of the Versailles High School, was asked to head this drive. The Versailles Board of Education gave Mr. Yates a month's leave absence from the state was then appointed. (See State Committee at the top of letterhead.)

The schoolchildren of Kentucky are being asked to donate their own communities in an effort to meet a quota of 250,000 pounds of clothing which they have discarded. Anything suitable for winter wear such as underwear, socks, stockings, girdles, suspenders, belts, vests, trousers, hoods, blouses, jackets, dresses, skirts, topcoats, capes, and shoes are acceptable. It is unnecessary to clean or fumigate. This is done by the Russian War Relief.

GHOST PLANE

By ARTHUR STRINGER

W. N. U. SERVICE

THE STORY SO FAR: A Lockheed stolen from Norfolk Airways. Alan Slade suspects a "german" named Frayne. It is supposed to be a valuable plane, but who turns out to be after bigger game? He has the plane and is using it to carry richbros. A valuable source of power, to the coast for shipment to Germany. A pilot named Slim Turnstead is hired for him. Surprise! Frayne's camp. Slade is knocked unconscious by Frayne's assistant, Karnell, and is taken to a locked-up plane. Turnstead and led there. When he falls asleep Lynn Morlock, daughter of the "Gusting Padre," starts out in her father's plane to find him, while her father, and two old prospector friends of Alan named Zeke and Minty attempt to fight it out with Frayne's crew. Lynn finds Slade, exhausted, ragged and nearly starved, and they return to Frayne's camp to find that Zeke and Minty are the midst of a fight with Karnell. Frayne is in Slade's plane looking for Lynn. Slade and the prospector have cornered Karnell and are chasing him into the marshland.

New content with the story.

CHAPTER XVII

"Why do you say that's Karnell?" Slade asked as he strode on at Minty's side.

"It's Karnell all right," averred Slade. "I told you that when he looked back for a handout o' shells."

"Good," said Slade. "I want to meet up with Karnell."

"I take sure it ain't an unexpected meetin'," Minty warned him.

"I've got my eye peeled," said Slade. He stopped short and blinked across the ridge, - eyes.

"More, I think that our friend Zeke crawling along that hogback."

Minty stared in the direction the other pointed.

"That's Zeke all right," he admitted.

"He sees us," cried Minty as he rounded a sheltering rock. "But this is enemy territory, and we'd best keep under what cover we can find."

Slade, he soon saw, was making no effort to keep under cover. The lavvy-headed bush pilot was advancing down the slope that led down to the marshland, veined with open water. Far for out that soggy tundra, plunging along from the marsh to tussock, was a heavy-showered man with a rifle in his hands.

"That's Karnell," cried Slade. "Let him get away."

Minty promptly stepped on one knee and took a pot shot at the fugitive.

But Karnell ducked in time to beat the bullet whirling toward him. Then he clambered up on an island fringed with shrub-willow and slipped and tumbled. Both Slade and Minty, when they saw the man tumble, lunging themselves on the wet silt. They lay without moving, the gunshots and the shouting.

Karnell, looking into the chamber, saw that his last shell had been fired. His shout, however, was defiance as he turned and leaped from his willow-fringed hand to a runway of broken sedgeweeds leading deeper into the marsh.

He shouted again, hoarsely, as he went panting onward from sedgeweeds to sedgeweeds.

He looked for islets with a showing of clump-willow, for in these root-bound spaces he knew he could always find the promise of support. Across two he leaped. Then in his haste he sprang for an island of wire grass. It was a sizzling hot island and to the eye it had an aspect of solid ground. But instead of being an island it was merely a floating raft of tangled vegetation. He rebounded head on that parted and sank under his weight.

It went down slowly. But as it went down, he felt a ponderable force gripping long arms to catch at the churning water rose to the wide shoulders. It rose to the screaming throat. Then it closed over the back-riding head and a few bubbles appeared between the tatters of fiber-bound peat that floated on the water.

Slade, clinging to a willow-clump, saw the stirred-up water grow quiet again.

"Let's get back," he said. "I've still got Turnstead to deal with."

Then he stopped short, arrested by the familiar drone of a distant plane.

He watched the plane as it passed overhead.

"That's the Padre," he said as Minty came up with him.

The old sourdough blinked after the passing wings that dipped and circled for a landing and then were lost to sight.

"I thought mebbe she was that good plane there's so much talk about."

Slade's jaw was harsh.

"There'll be less talk about ghost planes, he thought when you get my hands on Turnstead when he came to the crest of the ridge."

For above the scrub that fringed the valley slope before him he detected a wisp of smoke.

"What's worryin' you, son?" demanded Minty as he leaned on his rifle.

Slade, instead of answering, moved forward until he had a better view of the valley. He saw a purling stream, he saw a campfire. Squating over it was a ragged figure, holding a skillet with a stick-tied to the handle.

"It's Turnstead. He said he was ready to give up."

"What's Zeke?" rasped Minty. "Zeke, arrested by near advance, scrambled for his rifle. But the police barrel slowly lowered as he identified the intruders.

Slade felt a wave of weakness go through his body. He realized, as he subsided beside the fire where the tea pal bubbled, that he was very tired.

"Zee, sandy, you low," cried Zeke, conscious of that sudden slump.

Slade stiffened his shoulders. But it took an effort.

"I'm all right," he protested. "Where's Frayne?"

"He'll go into that," said Zeke. "After I've bucked you with a swallow o' hot tea and some sowl-belly."

"Where's Frayne?" repeated Slade.

Zeke, busy over his fire, caught the determination in the other's quick glance.

"That's what I'd give an arm to know," he admitted. "There ain't been a pop out o' him for two hours now. I don't know what that orangutan mate o' his is."

Zeke showed no emotion when told of Karnell's end. He merely directed Frayne, how to follow his partner. You should've got that buzzard on the wing."

Slade found his boiled tea strong and bitter. But it washed away his weariness.

"How about the other man, Turnstead?"

"I've spoken about it at the encircling spruce ridges."

"That bird seems to be hidin' on us, same as his boss."

"I twisted her fuel-line out."

"I've got to say that Lockheed," he said as he reached for Minty's rifle.

"That's a Lockheed?" queried Zeke.

"Our stolen plane. The plane they're ferrying that pitch-bird out with."

Zeke reached for the battered tea pal and drank from it. Then he wiped his mouth and essayed a head-jerk toward the west.

"She's there," he announced. "And she'll stay there."

"What does that mean?" questioned the startled Slade.

"It means I snaked through the scrub and climbed above her. And ain't there, jus' to make sure o' that?"

"You what?" barked Slade.

"I jus' anchored her where she lay," answered Zeke, "by tearin' out the fuel-line. I emptied the tank. And I ain't got that smell o' gasoline out of my pants yet."

"And you didn't see Frayne?"

"Not hide or hair o' him."

Slade stood thoughtful a moment.

"Then what's he up to? He can't get out of this territory without a plane. Yet he can't use that Lockheed. Ain't he can't skulk back in these hills for long. We've got to knock him out of here."

It was Zeke who spoke next.

"That's what your Flyin' Padre says. He and his girl's busy on the radio. I expect over there at the lakeside, tryin' to get Edminton and Churchill and Mountie headquarters at Coppermine. Said he reckoned it was about time for the air patrol to edge in on this."

"We can't wait for that," announced Slade. "I'm going to Frayne. He won't wait for it. I know that."

"A happy thought lightened Minty's seamed old face.

"How you do it, know he ain't by in' out there with a bullet hit through his head? He was sniped at considerable, by Zeke and me, even if our eyes ain't what they used to be."

"That would still leave Turnstead. I've got my plan and scout over these ridges."

Zeke proceeded to mix a fresh portion of flapjacks on the fire.

"Well, I hope you round 'em up pronto," he announced. "For grub's sake, low with us two, Lindy, and me. We're hankerin' to amble back to that Kasakana shack of ours and know a considerable spell o' peace and quietness."

Slade made no response to that. He merely swung Minty's rifle over his shoulder and started up the slope that stretched between him and the lake where his plane rested. His glance at the sun told him the long northern afternoon would soon be merging into its equally long evening. And that there are things to be done before the brief hours of sub-arctic darkness set in.

It was on the crest of the second ridge that he caught sight of Lynn. She hesitated, apparently bewildered as to what course to take. But once she heard Slade's shout, she ducked her head and came panting up the slope.

"What is it?" he asked, arrested by the alarm on her face.

"It's Turnstead," she said. "He came to Father, just now, with a white rag on the end of a stick. He said he was ready to give up. Frayne, he claimed, was being wounded over the hill and had to have help."

Slade's face darkened.

"Did your father believe that?"

"He said he had to," was Lynn's panted reply. "He's gone out to the cabin, but he couldn't let a man die without help."

"I don't like the look of this," said Slade. "Where is Turnstead now?"

"He pretended to go back with Frayne. But something tells me he didn't."

"Where's your plane?" Slade promptly questioned.

"At the lakeside there," said Lynn, leading him to slightly higher ground and pointing to the expanse of blue water that could be seen through the spruce tops. "We'd been working our radio. I expect I've been having trouble in sending and found a transmitter fuse had crystallized and had to be replaced. I was back in the cabin, testing out the set, when Turnstead came down the bank and talked to Father."

THE VITAMINS

Physicians who have followed the latest vitamin studies will remember that vitamin C was one of the best vitamins to gain fame as it was found that scurvy could be prevented by eating foods rich in vitamin C.

JESUS THE BREAD OF LIFE

Lesson for January 31

Lesson Subjects and Scripture Texts: Matthew 13:1-9, 30-35; John 6:1-14; Luke 9:10-17; Mark 8:1-9; Matthew 13:31-33; Luke 13:18-21; Mark 4:1-9; Matthew 13:34-35; John 6:25-27.

Spiritual truth becomes understandable to us as it is put in the language of our daily life. Jesus was the Master Teacher of all times, but it was his use of graphic figures to present the message of salvation.

He spoke of the word of water, and in this lesson of bread. Even a child knows about such things and understands the good news. Bread is still the staff of life. It speaks of life and health, of satisfaction and strength.

Beginning with the five small barley cakes (and two fishes) which a provident little boy had taken with him into the wilderness, and Jesus preaches by miracle and by precept of eternal things. One is glad that the right lad was so thoughtful than all the adults that day, for he provided the occasion for the miracle.

I. Daily Bread (vv. 8-13).

The great multitude had followed Jesus to the other side of Galilee where He had gone to rest. They followed Him and He had compassion on them—these sheep without a shepherd (Matt. 9:36). That interest was first spiritual, for the bread that Jesus had was many loaves, but it was also practical in the realm of daily life. For He saw that they were physically hungry.

His answer to Philip reveals the lack of faith which at times afflicted the disciples. They knew they had a God in their midst, and yet they were bound by the matter of dollars and cents, of portions and—well, they just wished Jesus would send them some more away. That would solve the problem. Oh, yes, "there is a lad here," but what he has amounts to nothing.

It is a perfectly natural. They talked just like most of us do when we are up against a similar thing. But the point is that they (and we too) ought to realize that "little is much when God is in it."

We let Christ have all that it we have. He will be adequate for every need.

Are you worrying about your lack of money or your inability to do things for Him? Are you limiting God? He would like to take what you have and multiply it by His blessing.

II. Heavenly Bread (vv. 14, 30-31).

The people (probably incited by the religious leaders) after their first miracle, thought that Jesus was in the temple and demanded a greater miracle. Jesus never permitted dependence on those who have faith rest on miracles. Let us do well to be careful of those who must have something spectacular to believe in. The time if they are to be interested.

III. The Bread of Life (vv. 25-35).

Feeding the body is important, but the real need of men is for spiritual food. Daily bread is a food that perishes (vv. 27), but the food that endureth unto eternal life," received by faith in Christ (v. 28).

Instead of a sign, or the passing blessing of a moment's assistance, Jesus presents Himself as the bread of life which will eternally satisfy the hunger and thirst of the human soul.

Those who teach that Christ is but our example, giving Himself as a sacrifice to those who by development of character are saved by the life of Him, should read verses 47 to 51 of this same chapter. Here He makes clear that by the giving of His flesh in the death of the cross everlasting life comes to the believer.

It is easy the man who eats of this bread, who by faith makes himself partaker of the death of our Lord, to be in eternal life.

This must be done in the right way—the way of faith.—The people said, "Lord, evermore give us this bread, because we have seen and eaten of some of them did not say it scoffingly, and others perhaps still with the thought of daily bread for their sustenance. How many, however, were surely some earnest souls who that day saw the light of eternity through the wonderful works about the bread of life.
