Corporal Gabbard, then a first class private, was one of the Leatherneck trail-blazers who first hit Japanese-held soil when the Solomons offensive was launched.

Shys an official Marine Corps announcement: "Corporal Gabbard was one of the first men sent to Guadalcanal ahead of schedule to clear the way for the land mines for the invasion operation. Corporal Gabbard managed to machine gun in the prow of the first Higgins boat to hit the water."

At 6:35 a. m., August 7, his boat, the "Bardonia," Island 7, P. V. #14, minutes later, Corporal Gabbard was the trigger of his gun, and the Solomons Islands campaign began.

Minutes later, Corporal Gabbard was sent to Gavutu, where other Marines were meeting stubborn resistance. A Jap shell fell near by, spraying him with shrapnel and breaking his arm. He was evacuated to a base hospital.

As soon as he recovered, Corporal Gabbard returned to duty at an island base in the South Pacific, where he is now serving as chief-clerk in the air mail post office.

Rejections for Army 300. By the end of June there will be 300 more than 3 million men in the armed forces. There were about 2 million in service at the time of Pearl Harbor, and Kentucky has contributed about 110,000, almost 50 per cent having been rejected out of the 165,000 examined.

Medical care for families of soldiers in service. An allotment has been set up by the federal government for medical care of soldiers' wives who are expectant mothers or who have children.

County Agent's Notes

Poultry Pointers For June. If the demand for poultry and eggs isn't too early to think ahead on the flock for next year.

One of the diseases which can cut production in the winter and also of fowl cholera is a loss in hen's chicken pox. It can be prevented. Vaccinate your pullets and those over-lay breeders. Do this when they are about 12 weeks old using chicken pox vaccine. Directions for vaccination come with each bottle of vaccine at this year. The cost is low.

The feed situation does not seem to be getting better. Do all you can to supply the feed for the pullets. If they use the range unevenly move your feeders twice a week. This will help control diseases and parasites to each better. The old "brush arbor" idea is a great help too on ranges where natural shade is not available.

Do you plan to keep cockerels from your flock for breeders next year? If you do, select the prospects for the year you sell your fryers. Pick the largest, best-looking, feathered individuals. Too many flock owners select from the cults that are left after selling the best fryers. Rapid feathering and rapid growth are inherited. Breed for a better flock.

Call a few hens at this time. This will save good reasons for the loss. It will save 20¢ feed, create some income, and keep your profit up. Market those with yellow backs or wilted combs. You can't afford to feed a non-laying hen at this time.

THE GARDEN (By John S. Gardner) Bordeaux Mixture. Rainy days, with hot and sultry ones between, make an ideal "blight" season.

Blight is the leafspot disease that knocks away the leaves of tomatoes, and those of potatoes, summer and winter beans, etc., and egg-plants, always. It is quite understandable that plants that have few feathers on their leaves cannot bear satisfactory crops.

Control is to "copper-plate" the foliage. This is another name for Bordeaux Mixture. It is made of copper sulfate, copper oxide, and water. It is not so universally obtainable as the copper ingredient of the Bordeaux, copper-sulfate, blue vitriol.

On the Copper sulfate, directions are given for its use, but here follows the formula for Bordeaux mixture as made.

In 5 quarts of water, in a stone crock of wooden pot, dissolve 4 lbs. of Bordeaux Mixture. This will dissolve in an hour with no attention, but the powdered form can be dissolved by stirring, to be ready for instant use.

In the tank of a knapsack sprayer, put 9 quarts of water and a handful (1 ounce) of hydrated lime and stir. Follow with 1-1/2 quarts Bordeaux. It should be used immediately. The tank should be washed out thoroughly with no delay, to keep the metal tank from being eaten. The stirred water should be put into a stone or glass jug, ready to use when the next spray of Bordeaux is to be made.

If leaf-eaters are present, too, arsenate of lead or calcium should be added, a rounded tablespoon to the gallon of Bordeaux. If the spray is to be used on beans (as for the Mexican beetle), magnesium arsenate should replace the other two.

Washington Digest Victory inevitable Despite Deadly, Undeclared Foe

Optimistic Americans Fail to Realize Enemy's Strength in Experienced Men, Naval Forces and Air Power.

WNU Service, Union Trust Building, Washington, D. C. "But, General... The other day I said that after a long and enlightening talk by a high army officer who was patiently trying to show us why, despite the recent victories of the Allies, we still had a formidable enemy to be reckoned with."

yet, Japan's vaunted Zeros which could outmaneuver us because of their lightness, it is true, exploded at one shot. They have been improved by experience than our men. But those of our men who have had equal training and experience are as good or better, man for man, although not yet perhaps, officer for officer.

A Closet for Your Sewing Equipment

MANY women who have learned to sew for the Red Cross are also sewing for themselves. They are thinking of sewing as a craft and taking pride in their tools. Many who do not have space for a sewing room are planning efficient closets to house equipment.

The cupboard is six and one-half feet high, four inches wide and twenty inches deep. The dress form compartment is five feet six inches high and twenty-four inches wide. The ironing board is four feet ten inches high and eight inches wide.

Construction: you are in need of more closets and storage space you will find directions in BOOK 7 for a linen closet built into wardrobe. Also in BOOK 8 there are directions for making door openings to use every inch of space for clothes closets. Booklets are 15 cents each. Send requisits for booklets direct to:

HOW NOT TO CATCH A FLY. The SLAP METHOD is the most correct method in the world. It is employed in swatting flies. You simply swat a pecked fly on the back of a loosely draped, fly-free dress and—so does your social standing. A better way to get flies is to catch 'em with TANGLEFOOT FLYPAPER.

Believe my own exclamation, "What a typical example of some of those 'but's' which have arisen in your minds." America is the super-duper land of invention, genius, business genius, organizing genius, mass production, high standard of living, assembly line, giant industry, efficiency, wealth, central heating, power, and unlimited opportunity. True, we got our first real drubbing at Pearl Harbor but we came back; the British were beaten at Singapore, too, but they won the battle of Britain.

After tomorrow, we can consider: The enemy has not the initiative the Americans and British have. When things don't go according to plan, the enemy is likely to be patient. The enemy has not as tight a control in the army a long time—its replacements are not as good as ours will be.

The general looked a little weary but he went on politely—"I can't quote all he said but will give you the parts that are most important." "The enemy has the biggest, most effective fighting force in history." "Biggest? But America and Russia are bigger."

Such of the enemy-held territory has a hostile population which will work with the Allies against the enemy's effort to make it. Japan and Germany will fall on critical materials before we will be able to beat them at their own game of attrition. We can manufacture and build faster than they can. The enemy is farther away from the battle front—and it is more in sympathy with our government, despite political difficulties.

And even today, after Midway, Guadalcanal, Attu, Tunisia, Stalingrad, and the bombings, the enemy still has a combat force well trained, well co-ordinated, can operate under adverse conditions and in the face of terrific hardships, which our men are just now beginning to master.

As to the enemy naval forces, the Germans have, though you may not have realized from recent news, a combat fleet of 200,000 men, navy still afloat, plus the sub!

The submarine is still the biggest allied problem. Submarines are still the enemy's even though they are tough enough and these animals are the German specialty. Depth charges have not yet been used to any more than break the glass in the shaving mirrors and instrument faces. Even in the last war, it took 100 depth bombs to get one sub. Now the subs can crash dive, silver and rise to fight back... and fight back they can! They are mounted with guns, they can stand up to an escort ship, at least a corvette, and it takes a destroyer or a fast cruiser to get them. They are still afloat on the surface where they can turn fire. The small stout (30 caliber) bounce off their scales.

It will be recalled that the boom after the last war created the condition of an audience of "Eager" boys. The word "collegiate" had a meaning then which took it far ahead from the days of learning. The crop of students—veterans—was more serious. They must be taken more seriously. They must have applied and achievement tests rather than book-learning examinations; there must be more individualized instruction, more tutorial and seminar methods, special attention must be given to co-ordinated instruction that will aid in the transition from the student life to the peacetime community and family relations and the responsibilities of citizenship.

PAINFUL FEET

While the word orthopedic means straightening of the feet, orthopedic physicians are consulted by patients who have any trouble with bones and joints of the entire body. That physicians would be of more help to patients if they studied foot pain more, is admitted by the medical profession.

That pains in the feet are very often due to infection, teeth, tonsils - is known and patients with painful feet who are infected with the dental profession are likely suffering with infection.

In fact, some orthopedic physicians state that the most painful feet are due to infection. And when we think of the number of bones and joints in the feet, in which arthritis gets started, this is not hard to understand.

However, there are a great many causes of painful feet due to bearing the weight of the body.

In speaking of functional disorders of the feet (that is not due to disease or infection), Dr. Morton, New York, in the New York State Journal of Medicine, states that the commonest cause of pain in sole of foot because the inner border of the sole of the foot, corresponding with big toe, is shorter than the other four toes and the ligament supporting it are loose or not as tight as with the other bones in sole of foot. This pain here is just like pain in any other part of the body, if constantly strained. In other words improper weight distribution, too much at one point, causes the pain.

Suggestions for treatment of painful feet are: (1) less work or weight-bearing; (2) rest; (3) more short rests; (4) shoes with the legs and feet well supported at level of hips; (5) removal of all irritation (corns, calluses, warts) which cause the individual put his weight elsewhere when walking and avoidance of badly fitting shoes; (6) plunging feet first in hot water then into cold water a few times after the day's work is over to improve the circulation.

Dr. Morton gives a helpful walking rule which is to assume (in general) that pain at top and sides of foot is likely caused by being heavy; when pain is on the bottom of the foot, the trouble is generally inside the foot. An X-ray should be taken then to top of foot to sole of both feet.

Sulfu Drugs Reduce Influenza Death Rate

Physicians who went through the influenza epidemic of 1918-1919, and witnessed the hopelessness in the treatment of thousands of cases, now look with eager eyes toward future battles with influenza.

It was because influenza went on to pneumonia and bronchopneumonia and the heart already damaged by influenza was unable to sustain the continued fight against pneumonia and bronchopneumonia, that so many victims died. Now that the physician has at hand the sulfu drugs and pneumonia has been reduced to about 3 per cent, he is able to fight influenza and pneumonia successfully.

Some interesting figures were recently released by Dr. Louis I. Dublin of the Metropolitan Life Insurance company. The figures show that there has been a decrease in the death rate of influenza and pneumonia of 85 per cent from 1900 to 1940. That is from 202 per hundred thousand of the population in 1900 to 10 in 1940.

While this is gratifying, the use of the sulfu drugs during 1941 and 1942 has caused an even more rapid decrease.

How remarkable this drop in the death rate really is can only be realized by thinking of the rate of decrease in the years 1900, 1910, or before the general use of these drugs. For the general population, the decrease in the death rate from influenza and pneumonia has been at the rate of 1 1/2 per cent a year for the 40 years. During the last two years, judging the whole population by the millions of wage earners and their families of the Metropolitan Insurance company, the death rate has been cut in half each year for a year. In other words, the sulfu drugs have decreased the death rate in influenza and pneumonia over nine times in each of the last two years as in any of the previous 40 years.

Q - Will you please advise on the seriousness of polypos for the benefit of my husband who has them in his nose, but refuses to have them removed.

A - Your husband is like many others who haven't needed doctor's help. However, the polypos is an obstruction and irritates passages so it causes coughing. This coughing may cause more serious trouble. Removal of this soft growth is very simple.

Miracle on Farm Front To Meet New Food Goal

Conservation Farming Proving to Be Godsend

Total war requires total production. The big objective of World War II, as it is true of essential crops as it is of armaments, and the miraculous achievements of factories are being matched by miraculous production on the farms of America to meet greater food goals.

From earliest days there has been a mistaken idea that increased production meant a natural increase in soil ruined. There were a few progressive farmers who raised their voices early for action against soil erosion but their attempts were futile. As long as there appeared to be inexhaustible supply of new land just beyond the western horizon, men preferred to leave the ruined land behind them, and to exploit new frontiers.

World War I created a sudden and abnormal demand for more food, with the emphasis on wheat. Agriculture never was increased food production through increased acreage. Wheat alone jumped from 47 million acres in 1914 to 77 million acres immediately following the start of the increased acreage resulted from a big "plow-up" of land which in

Curculio Threatens 1943 Peach Crop

Peaches are in grave danger of being destroyed by the curculio, if prompt and decisive control measures are not taken, says Dr. Clyde E. Smith, associate entomologist of the state experiment station at North Carolina State College.

He reports that about ten times as many beetles are being found this year as compared with 1942 and that growers will have many wormy peaches at harvest time unless they use every possible means for controlling the curculio.

Dr. Smith makes four suggestions for controlling the beetles and he says that all four methods should be used. First, collect and destroy as many adult curculios as possible by jarring the trees. Second, follow a proper spray program. Third, pick up and destroy the last two Fourth, cultivate under the spread of the trees, as soon as wormy peaches cease to drop.

Farm Notes

When young pigs are old enough they should be pastured on clean ground - pastures which have been freed of worms and disease organisms by plowing.

Most farms have more than one type of soil which with a rearrangement of their boundaries, could grow hay or pasture crops more efficiently than they do at present.

JOHN DESCRIBES TRUE CHRISTIANS

LESSON TEXT - I John 2:1-6; 3:13-18; GOLDEN TEXT - But if we walk in the light, as he is in the light, we have fellowship with another, and the blood of Jesus Christ, who cleanseth us from all unrighteousness.

Religion and life go together. To hold the tenets of Christian truth in one's head and not to have them move the heart is to deny the very faith one professes. Yet this is the danger which faces the believer - temptation before which many have fallen. The result is that much of what is passed for Christianity in these days is very thin stuff, very remote from the original! (Shoemaker.)

John was not content with such a weak imitation, and in his writings he set up the true standard of a Christian's life. He was not content with a religion which was only a matter of the head, but he insisted that it must be a religion of the heart and of the life.

He is not content with such a weak imitation, and in his writings he set up the true standard of a Christian's life. He was not content with a religion which was only a matter of the head, but he insisted that it must be a religion of the heart and of the life.

Real Christianity will cause us to be hated by the world and loved by the brethren (I John 3:13-18).

The world, that is, unregenerate mankind, has a genuine Christianian farm matter how kind and loving he may be. Why? "Because the Christian believer gives the non-believer uncomfortable sense of inferiority. The presence of high Christian ideals in marked contrast to his own selfish policies arouses his anger and resentment" (Douglas).

The presence of a clean, godly life in a community awakens every man's conscience. It is a light to the world, the flesh, and the devil will do everything possible to break down and destroy such a testimony.

We, as Christians, should not be surprised that the world hates us. In fact, we should be troubled if it does not hate us, for if our Christianity has anything, it is unselfish and distasteful to a God-hating world. Beware if sinners find nothing in our lives that distresses them and convicts them of sin.

In the midst of enmity the Christian is not afraid; for he is indwelt by God and is afraid in the world (I John 4:13-17).

A sincere confession of Christ as Saviour brings a man into that close relationship to God which is expressed in the words, "God abideth in him, and he in God" (v. 15).

The full depth of meaning of these words is obviously beyond our limited understanding, but we accept the fact by faith and rejoice in it. We recognize that it means that we are born by the Spirit of Christ into the very center of God's love. Christ, the well-beloved Son, who stands in that blessed place, draws us into the circle and there we stand in Him.

God's love showed itself in the giving of His Son as the Redeemer of the world. It was and is unselfish and sacrificial devotion to the eternal welfare of those who merited only judgment. We are thankful until we reflect that quality in our lives.

Such love casts out fear. Fellowship is possible in an atmosphere of fear, but love rules it out. In Christ we realize that God first loved us, and then our hearts go out in warm devotion to Him.

Not only does the Christian no longer fear the day of judgment, but he is unafraid in the present evil world. This is not because of his own strength or ability, but because through faith in Christ he is "in God" and "He is so near to us in this world" (v. 17). No more perfect or blessed ground of assurance of our future is provided, than we recognize our position in Him, and be strong and unafraid.

Lesson Frugal Manager Taught Stuck With Driver

The works manager of a certain railway company had a reputation for frugality. He was a real frugal manager.

The pet bee in his bonnet was oil and waste. He was always driving home the fact that if every employee was careful with oil and cotton waste, much money would be saved.

One day he was having a few words with a very new driver.

"Tell me," he ordered, "what would you do if you were driving one day, and saw an express thundering towards you on the same line?"

The novice thought hard. Then: "I'd grab the oil can, I'd grab the waste - and I'd jump!"

Corn meal used in puddings, or mush, should be thoroughly mixed in a little cold water before hot water is added. It then will not be lumpy.

Tidbits of Kentucky Folklore

By Gordon Wilson, Ph. D.
A MAN OF ALL WORK
Yesterday I spoke in a small village to a group of farmer people. In order to find out where the meeting was to be held, I stopped at a small shop to inquire. I got so interested in the shop as a left-over that I almost failed to report to my speech. It was a genuine passing institution, the sort that inhabitants of small villages all over our part of the world would easily recognize. The outside window had "Barber Shop" painted in big letters, and in a window letters told the truth. Unlike the witness in court, though, they did not tell the whole truth and nothing but the truth.

but the truth. In fact, it is not easy for me to convey adequately what that shop contained.
I begin with a barber shop with a chair and all the appurtenances. There were several ancient shaving mugs on a rather ratty shelf, the kind of mug that had the name of the owner on it in fancy script. Some of the names were of men long ago dead, just as the custom of keeping such mugs is dead and almost forgotten. There was the typical strap, pretty badly worn with long official use. The chair had seen better days and plenty of them, but so had the barber.
On a table in one corner of the fairly large room were a number of items in various stages of repair. Some of them seemed to have walked out of a story-book, for they were ancient and odd-looking. One looked the proud possession of the barber, was inside a glass case, where all of the fine large watches that were having a glass window into the interior arrangements. Instead of weights of the old fashion at springs of the watch, there was a quantity balanced contraption that swung a half circle in one direction, paused an instant, and then swung back. I was so fascinated with this elaborate mechanism that I almost failed to listen to the yarn spun by the barber. He had a number of big watches, table-watches varying from the big ones that looked like turpans to the tiny little wrist watches that seemed too small to keep any watch.
I saw a number of these time-keepers were sick and in need of the professional attention of the barber. I looked for a while for a watch that I wanted, but none came to me that mizzled. Loading guns were a bit out of date, even in such a shop as this.
But even these were not all that created me. The barber is a sort of collector of oddities: grease lamps, and more, and odd pistols. A second-class museum could have started with his collections of these articles. Given Mr. Henry Ford's money and the right man to show place, where we could see what our ancestors used and traded. There were many things that you could hardly walk from the chair to the door without disturbing some of the objects and certainly some of the things that were set on them.
The whole thing reminded me of the dry-goods store that was still standing in my town when I first came here. Ostensibly the merchant was selling dress goods and such like, but the whole rear third of the building was a vast museum. The owner, already old when I first saw him, had a fondness for acquiring small objects suggestive of life in other parts of the world. He kept in touch with missionaries in many strange lands and bought from them small idols, dolls, toilet articles, glasses and table ware. One of the things went broke in our town and sold out its museum specimens to this merchant. He had a number of very large diamond-backed rattlesnake skin, which hereafter occupied a prominent position in the display of the store. You can see that every village and town has had and some still have a place like these two I have described, but I fear that the most of them are disappearing or else growing pretty ratty.

MURDER at PIRATES HEAD

By ISABEL WAITT

W.M.U. RELEASE

THE STORY SO FAR: Judy Jason, who is telling the story, receives an anonymous letter asking her to help her to be buried in an abandoned church to be sacrificed the next day. She goes, in an old chest, the body of a man identified as Roddy Lane. Lily Kendall is found dead, with Miss Kendall's scarf around her neck, and a mysteriously broken against the wall on a picture of the church just finished by the priest, Albin Potter. Under the picture of the church is a portrait of Lily Kendall's sister, Gillian Potter. Potter is revealed as a famous movie director, Albin Parker, whose wife ran away with Roddy Lane.

Now continue with Judy's story.

CHAPTER XIX

"Tell me," Victor said. "You killed Lane the night he came to the Head, didn't you? Right? You must have set in, judging from the way Judy described that hand. How did you happen to leave him here?"

"I wanted the body. Had to have a body for Brown. Used all Mrs. Gerry's hair in her kerseane can and the gas from Lane's car. Then I was stupid of me, but I wanted a big fire, and De Witt's breaking the window of the garage made it easy. She burned like tinder, as you say. Took off the ring and put it in Judy's bag."

"Hurry, man! It was you that Quincy and Judy saw running along the bluff last night?"

"No, that must have been Norcross," he said. "He went the other way, through the woods, up the strip of beach and climbed to the church."

"But you took me to town!" Wylie objected.

"Be quiet!" commanded Victor. "Hurry, Potter. You drove to town three times, didn't you? Afternoon to the movies for the nub, night. Again with Wylie and De Witt after supper, when you knew your chance did come because of the nub, night to the Head. But you only stayed until dark. Then you came back, after phoning the truckman to cooperate for a reward. Told him he was a Fourth of July prank at the bridge."

"Right," he said the old bridge needed repairing and that was one way to get it done."

"So you left the time bomb, knowing you'd pick up Wylie Gerry, and the only other car out was the minister's?"

"De Witt had said he'd be back early. Wasn't mine, was it? Hence. Left my car in the woods, off the road near Gerry's barn. Luckily, I got on one on the Neck, and no one at the Head saw me. My lights out. Then I made for the church, after reconnoitering a bit, though the police boat was within pass key. Miss Kendall was asleep on the church steps, worse luck, but I had to take a chance and get me out of the chest and into the sea."

"He was in the chest, then? Since the night before? While the auction was going on?"

"Listen, will you? Can't you see the way this tub's filling? The night Lane came I was hidden in the church basement, as you know, as old Man Brown. I watched Lane digging where his treasure had been taken out by me. Then I came out of the shadows and told him who I was. 'Get up and fight like a man!' I cried. He was an awful coward. He fell at the first shot. I pulled a gun. But I got it away from him and struck him with it. He went down and I got up again. I had a skeleton key that would unlock anything. I wanted to go get my little cart from the shack and drag Lane's body out, but I heard someone coming. That Kendall woman was always hanging around the church. I opened the chest and dumped him in. He was quite dead. As evidence against him, I took the gun. It seemed best to hurl it into the sea. I was afraid to fire it for fear of being heard by the people outside, and it wasn't sure it had been fired—to make it look like a murder weapon. Besides, I had to give the body wouldn't be recognizable before leaving the gun. Then poor Miss Kendall—" he broke off.

"But Lily Kendall had seen you on the rocks near the Pirate's Mouth, just as Victor had; only Victor'd heard still about it, while Lily showed her suspicion."

"And she thought it was yours, Quade," Potter was saying. "She told me to get that revolver. She believed you'd killed Lane with it. She never had any fear of me, when asked her to show me where. But when she leaned over, I struck her with a rock I had ready. She screamed once and my heart stood still. She didn't scream again. I took her Norcross' blue scarf in my pocket, and you know what I did with it. Then I scrambled around the cliff, to the beach, to the woods, to my car in Gerry's barn. Heaven alone knows why none of you caught me, though the beach was visible from the inn. Same as the night before, after dragging Lane from the chest to the shore, I drove to town, bought for the purpose, which burned up in the shed. Then I put out the light and went through the woods to my car, drove to town, and picked up Gerry. Saw De Witt's car and asked him to help me persuade Gerry, who was right, to come home. Strengthened my alibi. But Judy nearly caught me in the church basement. If she'd come out Bessie Norcross, despite all that had happened, grew sentimental. She wanted to take charge of his funeral. Hugh wouldn't let her.

"Judy," he said to me, the night before they left, "she's headed for another breakdown right this minute. I'm taking her out on a cruise so she can't make a fool of herself here. When we get back—and this has all died down—there's something I want to ask you. Will you write me, dear?"

Poor Hugh! With that sister of his he'd never have a chance to ask a girl anything. It was the second time he'd called me dear. "I'll answer all your letters," I said.

Hugh's dark eyes held me soberly. Then he leaned over and kissed my hand. "Come! Both here and here!"

"Oh, Hughie! Come close my trunk straps."

Victor Quade was standing in the doorway. Had he seen Hugh kissing my hand? Evidently he had, for as Norcross hurried away to his Lady Simon Leverage, Victor said:

"Faring is such sweet sorrow! Going to miss him? And me?"

"I had some time. Victor was stepping out of my life. I couldn't conceal that I cared, and didn't try. 'Of course I shall miss you—both. When people have been through all we have together—'

"Exactly, Judy, what'll you do for me, this summer?"

"I shrugged. 'Sell it if I can.'"

"Will you? That's what I hoped. I'll buy it. Grand place to write me!—the chance. So full of atmosphere. Do you know short-hand?"

"My heart gave a great bound. 'No, but I could learn.'"

"Bless you! You'll have to, but we'll try to get through this one straight to the machine. Type, can't you?"

"After a fashion. Why?"

"Because, now that the police have wound up this case, I want to get busy right away. You remember my title—'Murder on the Bluff'? Not bad, do you think?"

"Not good, either. Not distinctive enough. 'Murder at Pirate's Head' doesn't sound so—so much as if it, and been used before."

Victor's hands gave a loud clap. "I know! It'll be invaluable to me. You will help me, won't you? Mrs. Gerry'll have to get a new hostess. We'll turn the church into a studio. Trailer always annoyed me; too much in it. A man likes to pace while he writes."

"I'd love to help you, Mr. Quade."

"Who's Mister now, after all we've been through, Judy? Vile, my friends call me—Victor Quade."

"You'll always be Victor to me." I said, and saw how pleased he looked.

"This case will write itself," he said, "all but one thing. What did Potter do with the gun—throw it into the sea the second time? Hardly think so. He seemed pretty nervous. Those fingerprints I guessed at."

"Wait," I said, "recall—the green bead near the hollow stump. The water had crept up, until it had caught on Potter's button when we were going over the auction, and I remembered that he'd started tearing down toward the willow. As the idea clicked I got Victor to hunt down the path. We searched thoroughly and found Lane's revolver hidden in the hollow stump. The green bead was bent and had a new broken strand and dropped when he bent to toss the gun from his pocket."

"That's a Victor's gun, every-thing. Potter was afraid to hold this into the sea. Let me miss again or have someone see him."

"Everything except the fingerprint he left in my powder compact. I'm sure."

"Naturally, and how his teeth gleamed as Victor hinted at me. 'Bless you! There wasn't any.'"

[THE END.]

"Get up and fight like a man!" I cried.

the hammock all last night. I wore it part of the time, in case I should be seen running through the darkness. Gorry about the spot. I really tried to cleanse it."

He gave the oars a shove into the sea. The police boat was within hail, and shouting at us. We didn't shout back. The drama unfolding before our eyes left us paralyzed. The water had crept up, until it seemed as if Albin Potter must drown where he sat.

"Jump for it, man!" begged De Witt.

But Victor said not a word. The police boat was almost upon the Eleanor. Would it reach there in time? Just as I was wondering, she slipped into the sea.

The police launch came chugging up after it was all over. From then on confusion reigned at Pirate's Head. I think I answered a million questions, not that I did any good. But the town had to bury Roddy Lane!

MY FRIEND FLICKA

By Mary O'Hara
