FOR A CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION LOOK FOR THIS QUESTION ON YOUR BALLOT

"Are you in favor of the calling of a convention for the purpose of revising or amending the present Constitution of Kentucky, and such amendments as may have been made to the same?"

VOTE "YES" BECAUSE UNDER OUR PRESENT "OUT-OF-DATE" CONSTITUTION

No. 1 School funds cannot be distributed fairly. No. 2 Education cannot be taken out of politics. No. 3 Kentucky voters lose $500,000 every two years through inefficient election methods.

BOTH PARTY CANDIDATES FOR GOVERNOR AGREE WE NEED A CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION.

This advertisement is contributed by a group of public spirited citizens who believe the present State Constitution retards Kentucky's development.

Save Europe Or Risk Ruin

Secretary of State Marshall warned at Boston Wednesday that the plight of Europe has confronted Americans...

Marshall told the Congress of the dire conditions in Europe...

Warning that present American efforts to send aid to Western Europe will not suffice...

The basic issue is simply whether we are to be left free to organize their economic and political existence...

The alternative he said, is detaching the small groups of men who have arrogated to themselves power to regulate and control the lives of all...

The issue is as old as recorded history, Marshall asserted...

TRUMAN DIET

Heartless Tuesday

The campaign to put weight on the emaciated bodies of hunger-stricken Europeans... President Truman called for food sacrifices as an American 'contribution' to Europe.

President Truman called for food sacrifices as an American 'contribution' to Europe.

In addition to the meat shortage, the conservation program included a pay-as-you-go program for meat.

The term 'self denial' was used to plug the widespread adoption of these measures.

Sen. Kenneth S. Wherry (Rep., Neb.) pointed out with some vehemence that President Truman's food conservation program is a '100 per cent American' program.

Another aspect of the conservation campaign was Mr. Truman's demand that grain exchanges raise the margin (deposit) on grain.

Finally, grain conservation even hit America's skirt down as the War Relocation Authority urged the industry shut down for 90 days.

How to Eat Wisely

This is President Truman's 'simple and straightforward program' on how to save food in the home:

- 1. Use no meat on Tuesdays.
2. Use no poultry or eggs on Thursdays.
3. Save a slice of bread every day.

4. Public eating places will serve bread and butter only on request.

WHEAT BUYER: Less Speculation

U. S. government may cap its campaign against grain speculation by requiring the purchase of wheat directly from farmers.

Secretary of Agriculture Gifford Anderson has disclosed.

Anderson said the government would 'prefer to continue buying through the normal channels of grain trade.'

End to Friendship

WASHINGTON—The British secret service recognized as one of the most efficient in the world... submitted a confidential and highly important report to the British foreign office regarding the inner debates of the Soviet Politburo.

This British report indicates that the Soviet Union has just made an historic decision... to give up all pretense of friendship with the United States.

The report, which goes into detail regarding the new Soviet policy... reveals:

- 1. Luctant to go along with the change toward the U. S. but was overruled.
2. Arabs intensively using the Partition of Palestine as a weapon against Russia's position in the oil-rich East.
3. That Russian strategy in Europe will be to defeat the Marshall plan and to create European chaos as possible.

WASHINGTON—Here are some more notes from a reporter's notebook... reporters don't really carry notebooks—they write on whatever is handy—this is a menu of the United Nations.

Some of the people who are reading this column attended sessions of the United Nations... I think I recognized some of them. It was hard to get in because so many nations felt this session was so important that they brought much larger staffs than ever before.

PLAYING WITH DYNAMITE

The attitude of a great many people toward the problem of inflation is not helpful. They dodge the facts involved. Most people cannot build homes. Their ability to buy many of the better foods is diminishing. Basic manufacturing industries are confronted with costs which every businessman knows threaten to shove prices to the point of crippling mass production. The distribution industry, also dependent upon high volume movement of goods, is up against a similar situation. Intelligent farmers are aware that disaster is the inevitable consequence of endlessly rising prices. Union leaders with a grain of sense under their hats will admit, privately if not publicly, that a race between wages and prices, if continued long enough, will make paupers of American workmen.

Tragic is the attitude of many of our public officials who, while waging a political sham battle against inflation, are fully aware that the solvency of the Federal government and the integrity of the dollar itself are at stake. All of us from the President down are observing the result of inflation and depreciated money, in country after country, from China to England. Desperate people in such countries have submitted to ruthless dictatorships which are destroying their liberties. They are losing spiritual and moral values in a futile scramble for a false security, the like of which the world has never seen.

It is almost unbelievable that in the face of this situation, leading citizens, in and out of public life in the United States, can for a moment play politics with inflation, or utter a single word which they do not believe to be based upon sound reasoning—yet it is being done daily.

AUTUMN MIRAGE

Sitting we may welcome more heavenly Autumn we are the more loathe to let go. The days, shortened by early twilight, become yet more precious, as do most things when demand begins to exceed supply.

Over our autumns impends always that feeling of imminent departure. Autumn is like a short sojourn in some far and lovely land. From every peak we climb, from every tower of momentary delight, from every window looking on the year's sunset—we can see in the darkening harbor the shadow of a great ship. It is a vessel built for long and arduous traveling through work-a-day oceans back to a work-a-day world.

No other season builds this strange mirage. Winter, spring, summer, lead each to the very doorstep of the other.

Only from the edge of autumn, standing on gold with deep purple overhead, do we look out as if on uncharted distances. Only here are we touched with the feeling that, come autumn through a long procession of years, we may not meet this moment again, or ever find this one exquisite promontory.

HOT AIR DID NOT WORK

A few months ago the Newburyport plan was enthusiastically ballyhooed from coast to coast. It was a scheme for stopping inflation in its tracks by cutting retail prices. Within a few weeks the fuss died down and the plan was dropped. Hot-air and good intentions are poor weapons to combat economic law.

Another scheme has now appeared. The government industry, with the clear implication that these industries have been a substantial factor in bringing prices to current levels. Regardless of the legal justification for the suits, promotion of the idea that any basic industry today has deliberately raised prices on the obsolete theory of "charging an effort to find a scapegoat. And it is doomed to failure, all the traffic will bear, is just plain political maneuvering as was the unworkable Newburyport plan.

Our present inflation is deeply rooted in events of the past 15 years. It began with the idea that modern governments do not need balanced budgets, that expanding public debt is beneficial. It began with the development of the philosophy that the public treasury be pledged to forever abolish the responsibility of the individual to provide for himself. It has simply moved faster since the war which saw the public debt jump to nearly three-hundred-billion dollars. It will not end until every community and every individual finally comes to realize that government, even the immensely powerful U.S. government, must learn to spend less than it takes from the people in taxes.

If the government is going to start blaming various groups of private citizens for the inflation which was largely brought on by its own actions, why not start with the labor unions? Or better yet, why not start with an educational program to show people that when congressmen are patted on the back for securing unnecessary appropriations for hometown activities, the ground is being prepared for still higher prices to come.

No, inflation of the kind we have in America today is not a superficial ailment, and it cannot be corrected by superficial treatment.

BUSINESS FOR ALL

There is always a good deal of talk concerning the relative virtues of "big business" and "small business." One important and frequently overlooked aspect is that small business is often the training for big business executives—and that, conversely, training received in big business often enables a man to start a small business and make a go of it.

This is particularly well illustrated in retail merchandizing. The "big businessmen" in retailing were almost all "little businessmen" in the past. The major chain systems all developed from small stores. And the largest department stores, for the most part, were once little outlets run by one or two people.

Again, many men and women have gone to work for large retail stores in minor capacities, have gained the desired experience, and then have opened their own stores and prospered. Of late, a legion of veterans have been learning in this fashion, and it is to the credit of the retail industry that established chains and independents willingly provided a training ground for men who will be their competitors in the future.

America has been a country where small business, to move with the times gradually becomes small business and eventually goes out of business altogether. That kind of under efficient and intelligent management, becomes big business—and where the big business that is too lethargic opportunity, and the economic system which makes it possible, must be perpetuated.

A Good Farmer Is Bound To Make A Good Governor

FEET ON THE GROUND—Earle Clements is a real farmer. He was born on a Union County farm, the son of a farmer, and is actively engaged in farming. He knows the farmers' problems from wrestling with the soil — not just the theories.

MARKETING—As a member of the House Agriculture Committee, Clements helped write and enact the Federal Marketing and Research Act, and he pledges the creation of a vigorous State Division of Marketing and Research in the Agricultural Department at Frankfort.

SOIL CONSERVATION—Clements has always helped the Soil Conservation program. He knows its great value to Kentucky farmers.

GOOD ROADS—Clements stands for more and better rural roads.

R.E.A. AND T.V.A.—In the State Senate he voted for the Kentucky T.V.A. enabling Act, and since his election to Congress he has always fought for both T.V.A. and R.E.A.

KNOWS ECONOMY—As a County judge of Union County, Clements cut the debt in half by shrewd management.

TOBACCO PRICE HELP—Clements sponsored the law which added 6 to 8 cents to the price of dark tobacco.

EXPERIENCE—Clements is a Democrat of the progress school. His motto is progress. His able service in County, State and Congressional posts qualifies him to do a real job as Governor.

Behind the microphone since she was six, and still barely a high-school senior, Donna Jean WLW's youngest singer in the show. She stars in two network shows, "The Circle" and "Archie" over more than 60 NBC stations Sunday afternoon, and "Ernie Lee's Omega Show," heard over 65 Mutual Broadcasting System stations Sunday afternoons.

A decade of public experience began when a seven-year-old Donna Jean announced one day to her mother that "I can yodel." Yodel she did, and two years later she walked off with the Ohio state prize in yodeling. The same year Donna Jean previewed her present program, "When the Ring and Spanish is her favorite tonic, and she was 17½ years old.

ADVENTURE LIMITED

By IDA BREED

CAROLYN TAYLOR looked at herself critically in the full length mirror, then gave her reflection a smiling little nod of approval. The smile was justified. Her mirrored image showed a twenty-year-old beauty whose eyes looked hardly more than twenty-five—vivid, well defined, content. She was much charming, more delightful than the pretty young Carolyn of eleven years before when she finished college.

That was the Carolyn who, all her senior year at college, had to keep reminding herself that this was earth she lived on, and not really heaven, as it seemed, because of Lee, Lee, who was tall and lean, with intense blue eyes, and delightfully curly hair. Lee, who loved her and treasured the secret of her abandonment. Lee, who was so sweet about wanting to prevent her from being a part of a beautiful surprise after Commencement. Not even his abandoned mother had been able to do this. Commencement time was to be the climax of everything that seemed important to her.

Then, with Commencement still three weeks away, it happened. Just after Lee passed the final examinations for his doctor's degree, he offered an extraordinary chance to do the very research work that he most wanted—a unique glance for "an unmarked man" required to do at least five years to the project.

Carolyn remembered how honored Lee had been in breaking the news to her. He might have let their engagement continue, he told her; he might have kept her from deceiving her about their prospects for marriage, putting it off, or promising to marry her at the end of the five years. But he did not consider that the right thing to do. No, it was only the part of a gentleman to tell her that it was not to be. She was not to feel hurt, there was no other girl, just his career. He put anguish into Carolyn's heart, but managed somehow to impress her with the difficulty of his own part in the scene. Even in the pain and shock of losing him, Carolyn told herself that Lee was the finest person she had ever known.

That belief had never left her. Three years later she married Jefferson Taylor, a big, broad Westerner, done in shades of brown. She sometimes felt a slight disdain for Jeff's substantial size, remembering Lee's aristocratic slenderness, but she repressed the thought. Lots of fun, Jeff was, and with a practical mind for business that made them enough money to enjoy a pleasant life. She loved Jeff, of course. But there was a part of herself that she withheld, one section of her heart and mind withheld off, that would always belong to Lee.

She never spoke to Jeff of this reservation. Only in secret did Carolyn now and then open the door on that precious might-have-been part of her, and take it out to dream over.

But today, as she looked at her delightful self in the mirror, it was not to dream; it was with a plan for action. She was back in New York after an absence of two years. Nearly every Spring since her marriage, she had made the trip, and had always stopped off for a brief visit in her old college town. This time she was planning to follow the same course, but with what addition? One of her old school friends had written her last year that Lee Towne had returned to their alma mater to direct the research work there. So Lee was back and Carolyn was going to see him. Accidentally, of course. She had it all planned.

There would be a casual drifting about the campus in her dapper new Spring suit, lingering over a table in Crofton House, where everybody dropped in at tea time. Then when Lee appeared—Carolyn had this part rehearsed in her mind—she would give just the right look of pleased surprise, just the right degree of invitation to remember. Lee would see what he had missed all these years. What would happen after they met—what did she want to happen? That Carolyn did not quite know, and she stopped short of trying to decide. This was to be an adventure.

The adventure proceeded as if planned. Carolyn chatted into Crofton House at tea time. Two men at a nearby table stared at her with obvious admiration; they were younger faculty members that she did not know.

Then, somehow, without the faintest of trumps that would have seemed fitting to her, there was Lee in the doorway. Without glancing around, he went to a table straight ahead. He passed so near to Carolyn that she could have stopped him with a word, but she did not speak. This was the Lee whom she had treasured in her heart for eleven years! Lee, tall, but, with shoulders sloped; still lean, but with a follow-cherished look. Lee, his blue eyes intent now only with a near-sighted, peering expression; his hair no longer unruly, because there was not enough of it to be, just some wisps "barrowed" from one side to cover a bald spot. And it was obvious that for all he saw of the life butting around him, he might have had his eye bent to a microscope as he walked.

Carolyn had to keep reminding herself that it was earth she lived on, not really heaven.

Carolyn sat and stared, helpless to force her gaze away from this changed Lee. What she did not know was that she had missed all these years. The men at the next table were noticing her concentrated gaze; she finally forced herself to look away. The men at the next table were noticing her concentrated gaze; she finally forced herself to look away.

"Leaving for home tonight instead of next week," she began to write. Her angles, personality. She was glad that her husband was such a substantial person in every way. Such nice, thick hair, too, and straight shoulders. She had never been so sweet to him as she was now. Why, he was the finest person that she had ever known!

Back at their table, the two curious young men continued to speculate after they had watched Carolyn rush from the room. "Did you see her staring at Johnny Towne as if she were fascinated? If it had been Lee, now, you could understand it—he's a handsome devil!"

Russia's First Railroads Carried 'Church Cars'

For several decades after Russia's first railroad began to operate between Petersburg and Moscow in 1851, the trains running on Sunday and holidays carried, for religious services, one or two "church cars" whose special equipment included stained-glass windows and sacred paintings.

Law on Stolen-Aircraft

The U. S. government had no law that specifically applied to persons involved in interstate flights of stolen aircraft until September 24, 1945, when the National Motor Vehicle Theft act was amended to cover such cases.

WHAT AGE IS THE BEST AGE?

Personality knows no age limits, and a developed personality can go on with undimmed lustre as long as life endures. Indeed, the full fruition of a personality seldom comes much before middle-age or older, because it is a long time in building and each successive day adds a bit of charm.

Some fame for their beauty are seldom the very young. Quite often as not they have passed middle-age. Frequently they will be what the world calls old.

Consider Ninon L'Enclos, perhaps the most beautiful and charming woman of history. She was unhard of until she was fifty, yet at eighty she was still sought after by rich and fashionable gentlemen, who could have taken her for the daughter of the court belle. It wasn't her youth that gave L'Enclos charm. It was her ageless personality.

But perhaps the crowning achievement of personality in a woman is the career of Elizabeth Browning, wife of the English poet.

Elizabeth was an invalid from childhood, bed-ridden, but illness brought quicken her spirits for hers of her beauty, and the long hours she spent in solitude had enabled her to develop something that would have taken with her, and she with him. She was bed-ridden, mind you, but she arose from her sick bed, and when she died at the age of 56, with her head on her husband's arm, he wrote the next day that his face was the face of a young girl.

By step through the quiet years personality develops. And it never too late to start or to create one out of what you have, out of what you are. That is the fascinating thing.
