THE deafening applause thundered about her, and cries of "Bravo!" greeted the debutante...

could anyone sing when such genius was present. Louis had come over to the car, and sat casually on the arm of the chair.

tened, she thought. She had thought to herself, "This is only young Louis, but oh, he is an artist!" She scarcely dared give utterance to the other thought, "And I love him."

At the social center she had met Eleanor, Louis' sister. They were such a charming family, the Alvanos. Mother and father, first generation immigrants from Italy...

When she left, Louis volunteered to walk with her to the street car. At the door she paused to thank Adele for the lovely day. Smiling radiantly at Louis, she told him the name of the artist; "this young man is a great artist; he must be encouraged."

After the concert, Marya began to see Louis more frequently. They would take long walks through the parks on the south side, their hands clasped together. Would Louis never speak to her of love, she wondered.

When she arrived, dinner was ready. They had to be to church early so that they would have time in readiness for her visit. Albert, Mr. Alvano's son, was not home. Albert traveled for a drug company, and frequently had to be on the road.

But Mrs. Alvano only laughed, and made some remark about Eleanor not being the one with the talent. As they walked to the car line, they exchanged but a few brief sentences, but a tacit understanding

Marya joined the Red Cross program and worked in several of the large social centers in New York. Dr. Freeman Barnabas was not a brilliant man, perhaps not even a strong one, though he had

It was a jolly, wonderful dinner it had been. They had had their usual arctichoke. She especially remembered the arctichoke, because it was the first time she had eaten them. They had to show her how to pull out the little spines and slide the soft, pulpy, white meat off between your teeth. And they had served chestnuts for dessert.

seemed to have grown between them. On the way to the suburb where she lived, Marya thought about her day—and Louis. She became so engrossed in her thoughts that she left the brief case with the music on the train.

Each year at Christmas she got the Alvano's card, and the sprightly, talking note sent across the back in Adele's illegible hand. "Eleanor was at Curtis Institute," she wrote, "and Carmen was studying with Mastrovelli."

Then a group of noisy young people from the settlement house clubs joined them. Carmen played the violin. She was a fine player, and they finally coaxed Louis to play the violin. Louis had been playing the violin since he was ten. Just Marya's age, but he was so shy, Louis played for them, resting his round, somewhat boyish face on the chin rest of the instrument.

During the intermission the people talked and buzzed, and the Alvanos looked toward her and smiled, as though to say, "See, we told you. Eleanor's the one!" The orchestra returned and the program continued. Then Louis played, and the angels listened. Louis, with his soft, round chin resting on the violin. From the bay of the violin, where the feeling for music was born, from the hills of albuza where the shepherds sang, the music welled up to pour from this handsome young man's mouth.

But of Louis' studying? Marya tried to put him from her mind, but she fought a losing battle. She worked furiously, trying to forget. Then the war was over, and the period of readjustment began. She continued to work in New York. One day she returned to her desk and found a letter from Louis. He was to have his debut in Carnegie hall, and had enclosed a ticket for her. "Would she be so kind as to come."

Marya sensed that this was the real Louis. Louis with the laughing black eyes and the tight ringlets of raven hair. Louis who had been playing, the others were noisy again, but Marya sat quietly in the chair, contemplating the magic artistry of the music. They wanted her to sing some more, but she refused. How

She remembered the arctichoke and chestnuts... she thought about her music, the music in that brief case all around her, the people stood, cheering! The cheering and applause echoed through the huge auditorium, but Marya was remembering another Sunday afternoon. She remembered the arctichoke and chestnuts... she thought about her music, the music in that brief case all around her, the people stood, cheering! The cheering and applause echoed through the huge auditorium, but Marya was remembering another Sunday afternoon.

As she hurried from the auditorium and walked up the street, people smiled. People smiled at the young woman who was humming to herself while she walked up the street. They stopped to stare at the girl singing and walking in the snow. During that applause, she had reached her decision. She thought that Louis, like her songs, had been lost to her; but one never lost songs, and one never lost love. These were things of the heart—they could never be lost.

IT TAKES SO LITTLE

It takes so little to put back the beans in any one's loving world of peace. Uttered sincerely, phrases may turn a light like sunshine running through the days.

It takes so little when the heart is sad To lift it up—some bright encouragement May make the sorrowing one and make him glad, Even when seemingly all hope is spent.

It takes so little, why should we withhold That precious thing within our power to give? Love, like a warm garment in the cold, And sympathy for others while we live?

It takes so little, ah, dear God, I pray, He asks us to give, dear day by day.

ASK ME ANOTHER? A General Quiz. 1. What is New York state's most familiar nickname? 2. How often will a royal flush occur in poker?

The Man for the Job

LESSON for September 12, 1948. HISTORY KNOWS some men are known by their nicknames. Stalla is a nickname, so was Charlemagne, and so is Barnabas, one of the best of the early Christians.

When Saul was converted, there was an awkward situation when that young convert went to Jerusalem. The little society of Christians there knew Saul for a while. They had noticed him on a journey in the back districts the natives would take him for Zeus, king of all the gods. But it was not his looks that were important; it was his big heart.

After THAT EXPERIENCE with Saul, Barnabas' friends came to think of him as a man who could probably see the good in any man or situation if there was any good to be seen. So when the headquarters church in old Jerusalem heard of a novel sort of church down in Antioch, they sent this "Son of Encouragement" down to see what went on. It was certainly no church on the Jerusalem pattern; it was a good church, or even a genuine church at all! Barnabas would know. And so he did.

Other men could see the large number of church members in Antioch; others could give you statistics about its rate of growth; others could tell you it was a great, a daring, some might say as now. Some applauded, some raised their eyebrows. But we read that Barnabas had eyes in his soul as well as in his head. What he saw, as he looked at it, was a stirring new church with its new ways, was "the grace of God." All of us can see things on the surface, we can count noses, we can make reports for the papers, but seeing underneath, seeing the grace of God (or the need of it)—that is so easy. Wanted for every church: a Barnabas!

WHEN BARNABAS had taken stock at Antioch he knew the people wanted a man, and he knew the people for the place. He went across the Taurus mountains to Tarsus, where Saul was doing nothing particular, and he brought Saul to Tarsus and set him to work. Saul turned out to be, as Barnabas expected, the round peg for the round hole. That team was a "natural"—but only Barnabas would have thought of it. Filled fitted with the church, too. A stirring new church with its new ways, was "the grace of God." All of us can see things on the surface, we can count noses, we can make reports for the papers, but seeing underneath, seeing the grace of God (or the need of it)—that is so easy. Wanted for every church: a Barnabas!

THE HANDS of the Church. THE TIME came when Barnabas and Saul were sent out by that same Antioch church to be the first foreign missionaries ever deliberately sent out by a Christian church. The hands of the church were laid on them before they left. To this day, when a man is sent apart, by ordination, for a particular work in the Christian church, hands are laid upon his head. This is more than an antique ceremony; there is more than magic in it.

EXECUTRIX SALE

Mrs. Lola Cox, Executrix Of The Estate Of R. A. Whitehead

Fertile 153 Acre Blue Grass Farm

"Subdivided" and Personality

Located 3 Mi. Northeast of Stanford Ky. On Lancaster Pike Highway 27

ABSOLUTE AUCTION

Wednesday, Sept. 15th, 2:30 p.m.

LOCATION—This fine farm is perfectly located just 3 miles Northeast of Stanford, Ky., on the East side of Lancaster Pike (Highway No. 27) in a good neighborhood, between two county seats. School bus route, mix route, Greyhound Bus Station, mail route, laundry route—in short—a perfectly located farm.

LAND—All this so well that it can be cultivated by tractor, yet has natural drainage to make the topography ideal. Contour farming is not essential for this land since there is no erosion. Watered by well, cistern, 2 springs, Logan's Creek, spring fed pond and Dix River—no better watered farm anywhere. Water in 7 of 8 fields. 3.4 acre tobacco base, 44 acres in corn and the remainder in grass, with blue grass sod predominating. Rows of beautiful shade trees fringe the entire frontage along the Highway. Line and cross fencing all good. This farm has been subdivided into three tracts of about 90 acres, 33 acres and 30 acres, respectively. Blue print will give details.

IMPROVEMENTS—Nestling among stately shade trees is located the home with living room, dining room, 4 bed rooms, kitchen, storage room, two piece bath with own water system, large hall, glazed and screened-in side porch, veranda, small rear porch, partial basement with concrete floor and stone siding, electricity throughout, Tobacco Barn 50 feet by 100 feet, 2 good stock barns, new brooder house, smoke house, coal house, poultry house, large double-crib, double garage—a splendidly improved boundary of land.

PERSONALTY—Consists of some farming implements and small tools.

Prosse in the most superlative degree cannot do this farm justice—it simply must be seen to be appreciated. This is the first time this farm has been offered to the public for the past 25 years and farms like this one are scarce as the proverbial "hens teeth."

This sale is being conducted to settle an estate, therefore will be just as absolute as any Master Commissioner sale ever held in the State of Kentucky.

We cordially invite you to attend this sale on WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 15th, at 2:30 P. M., and you may bid with utmost confidence and assurance—bid last and you will receive a deed.

Some money will be given away at this sale Absolutely Free.

POSSESSION—Of this residence on day of sale. Of the farm land on or before January 1, 1948, with seeding privileges in the Fall of 1948.

TERMS—25% on day of sale, 25% upon delivery of deed and the remainder in two equal annual installments bearing legal interest.

For further particulars, blue print, etc., see, write or phone either the Executrix, Mrs. Lola Cox, Mt. Vernon, Ky., or Mr. Russell McBee at the farm, or

Letter To An American Journalist

By: Raymond McClure

Dear Paul,
Since the beginning of time man has needed a way to transmit information. He has needed it, not to satisfy his curiosity alone, but to inform him on the progress of the world—to satisfy his secret like for gossip and scandal, but to help satisfy his overwhelming desire for knowledge. That is why there are journalists and their medium of expression—the newspaper.

It is obvious to the world that the newspaper is a powerful weapon—a weapon to be handled carefully—not a cannon to be fired wretchedly, but one to be slowly timed and aimed. For the world expects the impact of complete truth, and with few exceptions it has not been misled. But to withhold from the world the truth it needs and asks for defeats our cause and smears our name.

Man is not weak. His very survival denies this. But on innumerable occasions he has not been true and freedom nevertheless, he goes on searching where his intellect leads. His intellect finally finds those two qualities.

The newspaper is in the community to better the existence of the people. It is there for information and to adjust, whether they are intentional or accidental. To suppress this right to speak to them through the written word will cut our heritage and shake the foundations of democracy. For democracy is in reality, a state of mind, and we cannot render it effectual through the opinions its mind expresses; for printing the public ideas for the people to pick up the torch of liberty and flourish it in the face of despair.

But freedom of the press is not a state of mind, it is the child of the state of mind and can only be effectual through complete freedom in human thought and action. The censor's scissors is actually a restriction on complete but it can lead to complete subjugation; and a restriction on the companion of a conquered people.

The press must not become a tool for philosophies and governments. It must be the balance between the cause and the action—between the thought and the practice, and achieve a balance around it and a fair comment. But freedom of the press can only be factual so long as the public remains free. It believes in their own freedom. It will not change then the newspaper will have lost its usefulness.

Today is the beginning of their existence. It is inevitable that to face this challenge of suppression, but seldom has the message been an instigator. Today is no different. We are only to look to see in other nations men dedicating their wills to journalism spotted with philosophical and mental propaganda. A place where individual initiative is sunk in regimentation; where repair is inevitable; where human beings face a wailing wall; where the only excuse for life is life.

Here is our own country we buy our newspaper, glance hurriedly at the headlines, and cast it aside with a grunt. This is the loudest demand granted. Nothing there? Look again more closely. Between every line there is another line—always the same. This is America, this is America. When we shrug and grunt we deny it is. When we write to intimate that we who write the truth we deny it is. This is the point where we are ripe for other ways of life—ways much less livable.

The editorials of Journalism do not change radically. Reporting the news is nearly the same as it has always been. The editorials are the same lines. This is a great asset to the writer. Look at the balance he can bring about; the simple movement of truth; the simple way in which he can explain the changes in the world scene.

Literature changes. Ideas and types of writing come and go. Some think it has reached the turning point in America, or better still, the place where it should be turned. So they take out the knife and whet it on the

Local School Has Record Enrollment

Schools throughout the nation opened Monday and from early enrollment figures, most students entered schools than ever before.

Mt. Vernon Grade and High School opened with a registration of 700.00 students. Clyde Linville, school superintendent said this was an all time high for the school.

The morning assembly was attended by both students and parents. The program consisted of a musical introduction by the school band, Miss Myrtle Bryant spoke on attendance and Mr. Linville on the progress of registration. He also introduced Mrs. Neural Miracle County School Superintendent.

STATE FAIR BARS GAMBLERS

Professional gamblers on the way will not be in evidence when the Kentucky State Fair opens in Louisville on Sunday. Fair Manager J. O. Matlick issued the statement after Bill-board, a theatrical trade magazine printed and advertisement which stated two bingo counter-men were wanted on the midway.

Fair officials previously had announced a "purity" decision for midway gambling. As an experiment this year, they decided local luncheon clubs will operate the gambling devices with all profits going to charity.

This marked the first time in the fair's history that wheels of chance and other catch-coin devices have been operated by other than professionals.

After being trained at Camp Roberts, California, he left for Pacific duty on December 5, 1941, just a few days before the attack on Pearl Harbor. He served his country nobly as Staff Sergeant with the 34th Infantry Division. He was killed in action on November 20, 1944, on Leyte Island. The Purple Heart and the Silver Star were awarded to Sgt. Hansel.

Louis is survived by his wife, Daisy Hansel and one son, Russell. Also surviving him are his mother, Mrs. Nannie Hansel Four sisters and two brothers. Two brothers, one sister, his father and a son have preceded him to the grave.

City Of Mt. Vernon Wins Telephone Suit

In the case of Frank Dees vs. The City of Mt. Vernon, Judge R. C. Tartar, in this term of Circuit Court, held that the City of Mt. Vernon had the right to supervise the erection of poles at public erection on certain streets within the city.

On Wednesday, September 24, 1948, the plaintiff argued that the city could not interfere with the erection of these poles since it tended to prohibit the normal action of the company.

Milton Luker of London, lawyer for the city recited statutes concerning the cities rights, and asked that the court sustain the demur. Judge Tartar then ruled on the case in favor of the city.

QUAIL SEASON WILL OPEN NOVEMBER 20

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

U. S.-Russia Events Reach Climax; Moscow Parley Continues Uneasily; Soviets Sever Consular Relations

By Bill Schoengett, WNU Staff Writer

EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.

Discussion

THE AX WAS THERE

RUSSIANS:

Climatic

Virtually every avenue of public thought in the U. S. was teeming with Russians, shadows of Russians and a few Red conspirators.

There was a feeling, however, that the international "common" had reached its climax and was ready to start subsiding.

It is all much longer. Nevertheless, events having to do with Russia remained for the time being at least, reasonably climatic.

The Moscow talks were ready either to pay off or break down. Russia had broken off consular relations with the U. S., Mrs. Oksana Kasenkina, the mother of the Russian schoolteacher, had told the story of how she had been strong-armed.

In the Kremlin, where the three western ambassadors were trying to pound out some kind of tentative basis for negotiations with the Soviet Union, the Russians were playing their familiar game of hit-and-run.

U. S. Ambassador Walter Bedell Smith, British Representative Frank Roberts and French Ambassador Yves Chateaubriand had been talking through a series of meetings with the implacable V. M. Molotov, Soviet foreign minister.

Molotov, as usual, was hard-tough, adamant in his adherence to current Soviet policy, on the Berlin and Germany problems. No progress was made; the three western representatives were disgraced, although they kept to their posts.

Then came a break, or so it appeared. Premier Stalin would meet again with the three envoys. In the ensuing discussions with Stalin hopes again were rising, but western powers might succeed in at least partially lifting the Berlin blockade and perhaps effect an area agreement that would permit a subsequent top-level meeting to iron out some of the major East-West differences.

But there were some who still could see the ax on the peace table. Somehow, there was a familiar pattern behind these negotiations that went something like this:

After Molotov had subjected his fellow conferees to hour after hour of his case-hardened refusals to come to terms, attempting by various tactics to wear his diplomatic opponents down, the scene was set for Stalin's return.

Stalin came on with his air of geniality and good will, apparently not willing but eager to reach common ground. His attitude was so manifestly different from Molotov's that hopes again soared.

Kasenkina, the U. S. state department pointed out as it ordered him out of the country.

It was a sensational turn of events. In a note to the Soviet embassy the state department asserted that Lomakin had, in effect, misled his own government with regard to the Kasenkina case so that the protests which the Soviets made to the U. S. were "based on misinformation."

In addition, the note charged that the "Soviet government had hindered the investigation of the competent police officials by refusing to allow them to interview Mrs. Kasenkina" while she was under control of the Soviet consul.

Then, even as Lomakin was packing his bags and preparing to leave the country, Russia's counter sharply by formally severing consular relations with the U. S. and repeating its accusations of bad faith.

That seemed to prove that Lomakin's actions in the Kasenkina affair were not to much the evasion of his individual initiative as they were a direct reflection of Kremlin policy.

However, no one was worrying too much about the breaking off of consular relations. The move did not mean that diplomatic relations had severed.

Soviet consular activities in the U. S. were limited to arranging for the release of the "rescue" fund of the two nations. Since there is practically no trade or travel exchange taking place, the presence or absence of a consulate wouldn't make too much difference.

To Escape Living bleak and ashen-faced in her hospital bed in New York, Mrs. Oksana Kasenkina finally got around to telling the story of why she had fled from the red spy window of the Soviet consulate.

"I jumped to escape, not to kill myself," she said.

She said that her "rescue" from the Tolstoy foundation's Reed fund was not a "rescue but an arrest," engineered by the Russian consul-general.

She did not want to go back to Russia. Although she loves her people, she states that "I don't agree with the policies of Josef Stalin. I cannot agree with the regime in the Soviet."

VIEWPOINTS: Religious It couldn't be called schismatic; it was, possibly, democratic.

In such a way delegates to the assembly of the World Council of Churches might have assessed the first two addresses which officially opened the historic sessions in Amsterdam.

John Foster Dulles, U. S. lay leader in many religious activities and internationalist-minded statesman, said that the "idea that business will be good."

INSTALLMENTS: Regulated Just exactly what effect the newly imposed restrictions on credit buying would have on the hog-wild inflation that has been devastating the nation's moral fiber was not quite clear.

Acting under authorization of the 80th congress, the government put the brakes on installment buying and extended the ceiling on its new regulations to $5,000 to control credit buying of expensive new automobiles. This new order goes into effect September 30.

From that day forward the law will require that the buyer of a new car pay one-third down in cash and the rest in installments. If he fails to pay off the balance in installments of not less than $70 a month.

Other hard goods—stoves, refrigerators, washing machines and related household articles—call for a 20 per cent down payment with the balance to be liquidated in not more than 18 months.

Now, three years after World War II, the western man hasn't yet recovered and is losing more and more the last remnants of his world leadership.

OUTPUT: Upshoat Total national output of goods and services, stimulated by inflationary forces which have been growing ever since early summer, hit a record-breaking rate of 242.4 billion dollars in the second quarter of the fiscal year, the commerce department has reported down payments will encourage people to buy homes they can't afford.

Watch That Credit Prospective home buyers who might plunge beyond their means simply because down payments are lower under the new housing law had been warned by government housing experts to avoid that trap.

FUEL OIL: Plentiful

Last winter's serious fuel shortage for homes and industries probably will not be repeated this year, according to present predictions.

The supply of fuel oil is becoming so plentiful that there apparently is no need for an elaborate distribution system to be set up for the purpose of doling it out.

Stored supplies are 80 per cent ahead of last year at this time and crude runs from distilleries are half a million barrels ahead of a year ago. New refining facilities are largely responsible for eradicating the shortage.

Moreover, all industry officials say, there now is an ample supply of gasoline. Only thing that could put a crimp in that would be a national emergency or a transportation stoppage.

Most of the major cities are well supplied with oil, and while there might be spot shortages in rural communities during the winter they probably would be only of a day or two duration.

"Last winter," said one industry member, "part of the trouble was caused by snow tying up the railroads. That happens and attention is focused on it then there is an oil shortage. It could happen again."

RADAR NET: Inadequate

What with one thing and another, Americans are not to be wondering what would happen if this country suddenly were to be attacked from the sky.

A biggest question in this connection is whether a warning of such an attack would be given in time for the population to evacuate probable centers of attack.

Air force officials say they are doing the best they can with what they have to provide the nation with a radar warning network.

What they have, however, is at best inadequate, they say. The present radar system is not capable of detecting all approaches of foreign planes.

Currently, a committee of leading scientists, headed by Dr. Vannevar Bush, is carrying out a careful study of improvements in radar that could lead to an adequate air warning system.

Political Pounding

Bubbling toothfully with confidence, Herbert Brownell, campaign manager of the Warren-Dewey team, said that "the idea that business will be good."

WASHINGTON.—Today we have two visitors whom I met recently at the Smithsonian institution, Mrs. Neanderthaler (her husband wasn't available) and Mr. Cro-Magnon.

They lived early in the Old Stone Age, and died without leaving any known heirs, assigns or descendants which may be just as well for the rest of us who might have inherited some of their characteristics.

Now Mr. Cro-Magnon was a different proposition. He was a "survivor" and I wish he were a relative because he was really superior to us—better body, better brain.

stone. Certain things must go—the comic books, ideas, and the right to speak. We cannot see that the fault does not lie in the press but in the mistakes we ourselves make—the whole world makes.
Let us not be too hasty until we can substitute democratic thought in the press with something more helpful and free. Do you think we'll ever find it?
Then the press must not be defeated, because it is the bulwark for our freedom and our hope. If it goes we will have to go, and if we go we must not expect to return.
Sincerely,
RM.

For Better Sweet Clover
FOUR LEAF PHOSPHATE
 Give your sweet clover a good big helping of its favorite food—and watch it grow! Feeding intelligently on FOUR-LEAF Powdered Rock Phosphate, the sweet clover takes its nitrogen from the free air. You get a huge increase in sweet clover growth, a richer sweet clover for livestock—and all following crops benefit from the increased soil phosphorus, nitrogen, and organic matter. Grow phosphated sweet clover—for low-cost soil improvement.

MEMO TO PARENTS:
SCHOOL DAYS ARE EYE STRAIN DAYS!

Give him BETTER LIGHT for easier seeing!

NEW books, new clothes and new school supplies are important, but don't forget about BETTER LIGHT for home study!

Homework is hard work for young eyes. BETTER LIGHT is needed to make seeing easier... help prevent eyestrain, fatigue and drowsiness.

Make sure the lamp your child uses for home study contains bulbs totaling at least 100 watts, and that it is well shaded, free from glare and properly placed to provide maximum light at working level.

BETTER LIGHT means BETTER GRADES!
