The FICTION Corner

MARIO went through the cool, dimly lit hall light of the living room in Edna's Amarillo Canyon bungalow and sat down before her baby grand piano in the work-room where the stacks of trees outside lay in thick, green dust. He went aside a heap of Edna's penciled manuscript, smiling a little superciliously for her censorious efforts invariably amused him, and lit his thin, nervous fingers round the keys.

Edna's melody seethed away any inner disturbance. But this afternoon, his talk with Hammond at the studio lingered unpleasantly. He found himself playing the elusive, fragmentary tune that had been in his mind for some days. He had thought it might be pointed up, eyes were mysteriously enigmatic, her full lips parted. At that moment Mario decided again that she was lovely—lovely enough to excite romance, to thrill and inspire him. He wondered, abstractly, while he lit a cigarette, why he wasn't in love with her. Perhaps it was that strange superiority he felt—the constant knowledge that he had come to Hollywood from the concert stage, that the music he wrote was good, so much better than the banal, tinkering tunes Edna laboriously earned out. It was true she had earned a great deal of money and fame of a sort from the full length cartoon comedy she had set to music. But he reminded himself, like Hammond weren't contracting for her to write ar-

JOAN DAVIS

JOAN DAVIS was the most excited member of the audience at the Laguna beach playhouse on the opening night of "Junior Miss." Her husband, Beverly, was appearing with the rest of the cast of the radio show in the stage play of the same name. Though

Joan had taught Beverly the special camera camera technique, all had never realized how perfectly Beverly had picked up all mama's gestures and tricks. Said Joan to the editor of the first act, "I'll sue that kid!"

WISE GUIDE
You guessed it, this is about those characters with crew cuts at one end and argyle socks (the ones you knit for them) on the other—boys. Everybody knows that their latest fashion favorite is the collarless cardigan sports jacket, a la Sinatra, but only our hi style cartoonist found out about their latest fads—and only you would be interested in them.

The things he said I can't forget, I'll cut him dead—with no regret. I can't forgive our bitter brawl, I've got a friendship ring and wrist sentimental inscription. Looks as if he's been influenced by your silk scarves.

"Very wrong!" He was trembling. "The 'No Song Is Lost' business. Through him, his mind had been fused. Only one thing had any clarity, any vision. 'Why, Edna,' he heard himself adding in a strange voice.

After completing his first western, "Black Velvet," Howard Duff hung up his spurs in preparation for his next film, an untitled documentary picture about an instrumental gang of thieves, his film in little more than a year.

"Test, Don't Guess" Before Liming Soil, Agronomists Advise

CHICAGO—"Test, don't guess" when you plan to lime your soil, advises the Middle West Soil Improvement Committee in a statement made public here today.

"Liming is the keystone of any well-planned soil building program," the statement points out. "Lime increases the efficiency of fertilizers. It sweetens acid soils and makes possible the growth of soil-building deep-rooted legumes."

"But be sure your soil needs lime before you apply it, and find out how much it needs. The safest course is to have your soil tested for lime needs. County agricultural agents, vocational agricultural teachers or

Build Up Your Soil

FOUR-LEAF PHOSPHATE

You can build the organic matter and nitrogen, as well as the phosphorus of your soil... by applying FOUR-LEAF Powdered Rock Phosphate and growing legume in your rotation. Legumes feed hungrily on powdered rock phosphate, grow luxuriantly, leave roots and residues rich in nitrogen from the tree air! Phosphated legumes and following crops grow increased residues to build the organic matter of the soil—make it easier to work and increase its water holding capacity. This is the effective, inexpensive way to bigger crops and richer pastures.

Mr. Shevnan says: The Zoetie Shield is a tremendous improvement over all former methods, effecting immediate results. It will not only hold the rupture perfectly no matter the size or location but it will increase the circulation, strengthen the weakened parts, and thereby close the opening in ten days on the average case, regardless of heavy lifting, straining or any absolutely no poisons or medical treatments.

Mr. Shevnan will be glad to demonstrate without charge, 8500 N. Arden Ave., Chicago, 45. Large incisional hernia or rupture following surgical operation especially solicited.

Fertilizers Are More Efficient on Limed Soils

members of the agronomy staffs of state colleges and experiment stations are glad to co-operate in making such tests.

"Liming is just one member of a soil building team. It has to be supported by others. If crop yields are to be increased, tillage improved and soil structure rebuilt. Other members of the team include: generous use of phosphate and potash fertilizers, deep-rooted legumes regularly in the rotation, and the use of all possible animal manure and crop aftermath."

Soil's "Fuel Tank" Needs Organic Matter, Farmers Are Advised

CHICAGO—Your soil burns up organic matter in producing crops, the same as your car uses up gasoline to keep running, declared the Middle West Soil Improvement Committee in a statement issued here.

"And unless you refill the soil's organic matter 'fuel tank,' the statement says. That means low crop yields per acre, high production costs and a soil that is exhausted.

"Organic matter is burned up through rapid decomposition in promoting crop growth," declares the statement. "To soil is an inexhaustible supply of organic matter. It can be easily drained off by poor management. Too many corn crops in succession will mine out the organic matter on even the best heavy clay and loam soils."

"When your soil loses its organic matter, it loses its ability to produce high yields. The removal of moisture-holding organic matter breaks down soil structure."

"The secret of balancing output and input of organic matter lies in good soil management. That means a rotation buttressed by deep-rooted legumes. You can't get a good stand of legumes with bushy roots simply by seeding sweet clover or alfalfa. You have to lime the soil if tests indicate the need. You have to add plenty of fertilizer carrying phosphorus and potash. Then you will get good growth and the legumes will do their job of repairing soil damage."

Fall Fertilization Ups Alfalfa Yields, Adds to Life Span

CHICAGO—Holding a deep, long-wearing carpet of alfalfa on rolling fields is a matter of liming, keeping the plant's dinner platters well filled with phosphate and potash, and following pasture management methods that prevent premature "burning," declared the Middle West Soil Improvement Committee in a statement issued here.

"Long life for alfalfa stands depends on good nutrition and careful care," says the statement. "When the plants are well fed they are hardier and better able to resist diseases and winter killing."

"Like other deep-rooted legumes, alfalfa takes large helpings of phosphate and potash out of the soil. Agronomists recommend that heavy amounts of fertilizer carrying these nutrients be applied at the time of seeding the stand. The alfalfa can be prolonged and yields increased by top-dressing with phosphate and potash in the fall. The committee cautions that 'not to gamble' on the life-span of their alfalfa stands."

"Keep them thick and vigorous," it says. "Then they will run down when you least expect it."

"Go easy on grazing until stands are well established. Follow a rotation plan so cows will not graze one field to another, before the pasture is grazed down."

Bushel Boosting Soil Management Methods Cut Production Costs, Raise Profit Margin

CHICAGO—Higher production costs now biting deeper into farm profits, emphasize the need for farmers to get their land in shape to produce more bushels at lower unit costs per acre, declared the Middle West Soil Improvement Committee in a statement issued here.

"Cost of production has caught up with farm prices and any downward trend will hit farm prices first," the statement says. "The committee declares that 'greater crop-producing efficiency' is the answer to lower farm prices and soaring production costs."

"The factor that governs profits is the margin between what you get for your crops and what it costs you to produce them," the statement says.

"You can widen that margin and increase your profits by good soil management practices."

There's no "Secret Grip" in this great fraternity

ANY freight car—of any railroad—anywhere in America—can be coupled up with any other freight car.

This simple fact makes it possible to combine in a single freight train many cars loaded at many different points, moving toward many different destinations.

This in turn makes possible the low-cost continent-wide mass transportation which only railroads provide. And on mass transportation depends the mass production which our nation must have to keep well fed, well clothed, well housed,—sound and strong.

These rugged railroad couplers, whose "universal grip" often holds together more than 8,000 tons of loaded freight cars, are the product of never-ending research and tests. Begun sixty years ago by the Master Car Builders, this work is now carried on by the railroads through the Association of American Railroads, the mutual agency for the betterment of all railroading.

This is just one example of how railroads, which cooperate with one another for business, also work together to improve such standardized and interchangeable parts as wheels, axles, trucks, brakes, draft gear, and safety devices. Such cooperation between railroads helps provide America with the most economical, the most efficient, and the safest mass transportation system in the world.

(Continued from page 7) Signs are always getting people mixed up. Some years ago when I was in the commercial printing business, a bright-eyed young man hustled into the shop one day and said he would like to have the job. "What job?" I asked in surprise. "Why," he said, pointing to the front window, "that job." Sure enough, painted in big letters on the window were the words JOB PRINTING.

SOIL CONSERVATION NEWS

The "New Look" for farms will be demonstrated to a large group of Kentuckians here, October 1 when the Soil Conservation Caravan comes to Lincoln County. The 12 trucks on this caravan, 12 miles from Stanford, had been selected for the demonstration. Soil conservation practices that will be established include terracing, diversions, fencing, pond construction, tree planting, stream bank protection, and other soil conservation practices.

Mr. J. W. Sargent, Assistant Regional Conservationist, will speak at noon. Others will appear on the program.

Mr. L. M. Lackey, of the Soil Conservation Service, says the demonstration will be one of the largest ever held in Lincoln County and that they are expecting from 2000 to 3000 people. Besides the demonstration to be held here, 11 others are scheduled for the state within a 90-day period.

Equipment which will be used will be carried from farm to farm in a Caravan of twelve large trucks. Twelve wheel-tracked tractors, two motor-graders will be supplemented by additional equipment provided by local dealers, to total 20 to 30 tractors and equipment present on each farm.

The equipment in the Caravan is being provided by machinery branch houses in Kentucky and adjoining states. Water Resources and agricultural classes, and volunteer neighboring farmers will supply the manpower to establish the soil conservation program. Seed, fertilizer, lime and other materials will be provided by Mr. Withers.

Lim complete fertilizer, and superphosphate will be applied to the land. Except for a few practices which had to be started in advance of the event, everything included in the soil conservation plan will be carried out on the day of the demonstration.

The Caravan is being sponsored by the Kentucky Association of Conservation District Supervisors, the Soil Conservation Service, the State Division of Soil and Water Resources and other agricultural organizations. The Supervisors of the District Brodhead Soil Conservation District urge Rockcastle farmers to attend and see how to apply complete soil and water conservation program to a farm.

FALL'S 1ST WEEK HARMED CROPS IN KENTUCKY

Autumn's first week brought below-normal temperatures to Kentucky and hurt crops, the weekly report of Assistant Meteorologist F. J. Ungermann said yesterday. Although the temperatures ranged up to 92 readings down to 40 degrees were reported. The corn crop is about harvested, except for the late planting which has now matured. The late corn is good, but not as good as the early crop. Tobacco practically is all cut and most of it is hauled, and the dry, cool winds aided curing. The report said gardens fared mostly. The drought has hurt pastures and some other crops. The first measurable rain since September 6 began falling here, the report was issued. The rain was light, but more of it in prospect. It will assist the fall planting of rice, barley, wheat and wheat, Jungermann said.

FOREST FIRE PREVENTION

The leaves on the ground in the woods are dry and easy to burn. More leaves drop off the trees every day. NOW is the time to be CAREFUL WITH FIRE IN THE WOODS.

One small forest fire has already been reported in Jackson County—a 6-acre fire in McCreary County. Our woods in these eastern Kentucky counties will burn, if fire is started, from now until the new growth starts next May, except when wet or damp with rain, snow or dew. The amount of damage, waste and destruction caused by forest fires in the nearby counties staggers the imagination. Many tons of these woods fires may not be felt for years or even decades.

Fires killing young trees, robbing the soil of organic matter and causing both not and other defects in saw logs, plus poor cutting practices have reduced productivity to about 25% of what it should be of many thousands of acres. Nearly all of these fires will be prevented if all of us are careful with fire in the woods.

Supervisor Borden reports that on or near the 433,000 acres of Cumberland National Forest there have been 41 fires in 1948. Many of these occurred in the spring months of April and May. This record being only about 1 fire per 10,000 acres. Spring fires used to be more numerous and many of them were started by fires getting away from farmers when burning tobacco beds, new grounds or sedge fields. During the last few years the farmers have done a fine job of keeping this type of fire out of the woods but a new main cause of fires has shown up in the fall of the year. This is the hunter-caused fire.

The hunter-caused fire often starts from illegal smoking squirrels out of hollow trees, or it may start from the hunter carelessly dropping his match or lit cigarette or pipe heel, or from his warming fire. Many of these hunter fires occur soon after a rain or snow storm. The hunter forgets that the warm sun beating down on the leaves underfoot will dry them in a few hours, particularly in the south. All hunters should be cautioned that the woods will burn on any sunny day when the ground is not kept free of snow. A burned forest is a poor place to hunt squirrels.

During the spring of 1947 there were only 8 fires on Rockcastle District which covers the 47,000 acres of Cumberland National Forest in Jackson, Hart, Estill, Lee and Owsley Counties, but in the fall of 1947 there were 12 fires in this district which covers the same area. Hunters let's make a better record, this fall. If the farmers can keep fire out of the woods so can the hunters. Everybody loses when the forest burns.

Indian Troops Invade Hyderabad, Endanger Country's Shaky Peace; Russia Confuses Crisis in Berlin

By Bill Schoengett, WNU Staff Writer

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When articles are printed in these columns, they are those of writers who are not necessarily of this newspaper.)

INVASION: Hyderabad

Events in India were a far cry from the days when Mahatma Gandhi's philosophy of passive diplomacy prevailed among the affairs of that subcontinent.

Indian troops, strongly supported by armored units, had invaded the princely state of Hyderabad (see page 1) and refused to join with the other Indian dominions even though Hyderabad's population is predominantly Hindu.

WHAT WAS THE whole story. The Nizam and his small, compact Muslim court would not agree to follow the Indian princely states in accordance to the dominion of India which was established last year.

The Nizam, often called the richest man in the world and the only surviving heir of the great Mogul empire, wanted to rule an independent Hyderabad.

Whether he could have succeeded in doing that, even if the dominion government had not opened hostilities against him, is questionable. Hyderabad is completely landlocked and has no access to the sea except by courtesy of the states surrounding it. All of its imports and exports, therefore, must pass through India.

WHILE HYDERABAD might profess its independence as a state, chances are that the economic and political conditions of that independence never could be achieved.

Can India's invasion of Hyderabad be justified? Not too easily, if at all. It was not a matter of sending a police force into the state to quell internal disorders. It was, apparently, a deliberate act of aggression and as such should be regarded as a security council for judgment.

From a practical standpoint there was not only no need for the invasion but there is an actual danger.

Involved. There are no linguistic or racial differences between Hyderabad's Hindus and the Hindus of adjacent states. The boundaries of Hyderabad are similar to India's, not dependent upon the geography of the vicinity.

INDIA MIGHT have refrained from pushing the issue for a year or two, pending a peaceful settlement.

The potential danger lies in two phases of the situation:

1. THE HYDERABAD war might prove to be the factor that will precipitate violent relations between Hindu and Muslim peoples, whose more or less peaceful relations now are strained and tenuous.

2. IT IS A BLOW to the British Commonwealth, to which both India and Pakistan still belong. With the Russians acting the way they are, any disturbance of the delicate balance of power that still prevails in the East could bring still another catastrophe down upon the world.

RUSSIANS: Fantastic

Not even the most starry-eyed Polyans could deny that the U. S. Soviet fracas over Berlin was downright fantastic and getting more so every day.

The whole thing simply had stopped making sense even to many of the diplomats who were embroiled in the situation.

WHAT CHANCE was there for any semblance of peace when, even while western diplomats in Moscow attempted to work out a formula with Soviet Foreign Minister Molotov, the Russians were inciting riots, kidnapping westerner school policemen and firing on American planes engaged in the air?

One complication was being piled on top of another, with the ensuing result that any possibility of a peace-

THICKER THAN FLIES

Russia Is Well Supplied With Manpower

Russia and the Soviet satellites are apparently well supplied with manpower for military purposes, according to official estimates in Washington.

In Soviet Russia alone there are estimated to be 4,121,000 soldiers in 74 divisions. Estimates indicate the existence of 174 divisions of Russian ground force and security troops, employ-

BIG FOUR: Or Little 14?

The U. S. government's spectacle against the "big four" meat packing companies—Swift, Armour, Cudahy and Wilson—promised to be one of the biggest anti-trust actions since President Theodore Roosevelt said something about carrying a big stick.

Called by the justice department in federal court in Chicago, the suits ask that the four companies be broken up into 14 separate firms. Specifically, the U. S. wants Swift and Armour to be carved into five separate companies each and Wilson and Cudahy each to be split into two.

TOM CLARK, attorney general, said in a statement: "The four defendants named in the complaint are charged with suppressing competition in the sale of meat and meat products." The Sherman anti-trust law "is being invoked in the action."

Clark detected what he termed "another in a series of cases instituted by the department of justice in furtherance of a program to free the production and sale of food and food products from monopolistic restraints."

THE PACKERS had another story to tell, however, with "playing politics" as one of their key phrases.

Said John Holmes, president of Swift and company: "It is significant that the charges appear at the beginning of this fall's political campaign. Apparently an attempt is being made to shift responsibility for inflationary price trends."

"No one can control either livestock prices or meat prices," Holmes fumed.

INFRA-RED: Frost Killer

The day-or-night-of-the-old-fashioned smog as the main buffer between plants and killing frost may be nearing an end.

Science has taken over to come through a new kind of development which was sponsored by the American Iron and Steel Institute.

THE CONTRAPTION, known as the Plymouth infra-red lamp, is a fair way to affect materially the nation's agricultural system, the industry thinks.

Reporting on the new device, the institute pointed out that while farmers will find the lamp invaluable in saving crops during the first touches of frost, the growing season actually may be extended six techniques for its use are developed.

Dr. Arthur W. Farrell of Michigan State college and one of the most responsible for development of the infra-red machine, cited an example: "On September 2, 1946, to take one example, I would have a two-hour killing frost. The next frost did not occur until October 1."

When the farmer and melon growers were able to protect their crops for about two hours on the morning of September 2, they would have had four more weeks of very favorable growing weather. As it was, they lost everything.

"THE FROST dispeller, made up of steel and a little ingenuity, will put an end to some of nature's nonsense."

The lamp is composed of a circular steel coil and an electrical cone-shaped steps, with an open burner within the framework. When the burner is put into action, the steel coil until it becomes cherry red. At this point, infra-red rays are thrown off spreading over the area to be warmed, even entering the ground in their intensity.

Headliners

IN PASADENA . . . Michael Beal, 33 (above) received a 30-day suspended sentence for being drunk and disturbing the peace after he had propelled his wheelchair up and down sidewalks at a furious rate of speed during an inebriated spree at all corners.

IN GREAT FALLS, Mont. . . . A member of the Cascade county Democratic party was indicted for criminal objection when Ray Wise, a Republican, submitted his resignation after being elected Democratic precinct commissioner.

BLIMP: Biggest Yet

Smallest blimp the U. S. navy ever ordered and the first to be constructed since the war soon will be under construction at the Goodyear Aircraft Corp. plant in Akron, Ohio. The U. S. Navy bureau of aeronautics has announced.

Vacation Wonderful

GAITHERSBURG, MD.—Well, I had a swell vacation—at least I did the pig got loose.

Before I got started I had studied road maps and dreamed up all sorts of tours. I figured on going out to see my daughter-in-law and my wife's sister in New Mexico. I bothered Karl Dinkel about the best way to reach his hideaway in Ontario. He and I corresponded with Sumner Welles about a trip up to Bar Harbor.

But in the end I decided, with real foreboding, that I ought to go to Berlin this winter. I ought to take a look at things beforehand. The Russians only want to let Maryland and me and went through the red tape of an American military government permit to visit Germany.

When the sailing date was set, however, I just didn't get on the ship. I just stayed right at home and enjoyed the breeze of the Maryland shore.

That's what I did during all of my vacation—just enjoyed my home and let General Clay worry about the Russians. I only went to the District of Columbia and one trip into the neighboring state of Delaware.

Staying right at home proved to be wonderful—that is, until the pigs got loose. Here are some of the things I did:

Filed the silo my son-in-law, who used to be a diligent abolitionist, who was by my side during the war, and I got a stroke of work during the rest of the year, carefully watching the ink just before filling time.

Went to Church. What with getting up at 6 a. m. Sundays to prepare for the church service, I don't go to church as often as I should. Especially enjoy the sermon by the Rev. Dr. Hines of Austin, Tex., who preached at Bethany Beach, Del.

My Delaware neighbors tell about getting stuck in the mud outside the church when several people brought plans to get it out, one man rode in on a horse and another doesn't do it, I'll go inside and get the pulpit. . . . "Huh," cautioned another, "That's the way to get stuck."

"Yes," was the reply, "and I'm the bishop."

No More Corn

Decided not to plant any more corn. Having sat on the banks of the Potomac and watched thousands of acres topsoil wash down from the cornfields of Maryland and Virginia, I finally decided to do my part by planting no more corn.

Despite strip-farming and contour-plowing, both of which we practice religiously, any cornfield, unless on level ground, is bound to wash away—our topsoil.

So, from now on, we are filling in the fields with alfalfa. The farmers of Iowa, where the ground is flat, can supply the nation with corn.

Disappearing Specialist—the country doctor. Young Dr. Garrett Hume got out of the army and decided he wanted to help people who were short of where doctors were scarce. He hung out his shingle at Georgetown, Del., and has been answering calls on an 18-hour basis since that day.

So, in an age when more doctors gravitate to the city and special-ize in the hospital, Dr. Garrett Hume, who stay out where distances are long, where fees are low and where people need them most.

Pigs Get Loose

Most of the above were enjoyed during the first part of my vacation. The only one that might be considered against the background, that was a nation which had been virtually at peace for 23 years and during all that time had heard nothing but epithets against her, that she had cultivated the habit of slapping back twice as hard whenever she heard anything she thought was criticism against her.

Russia's Background Forms Her Attitude

I saw him again with a small group after his return and he reminded me of a student who must be considered against the background, that was a nation which had been virtually at peace for 23 years and during all that time had heard nothing but epithets against her, that she had cultivated the habit of slapping back twice as hard whenever she heard anything she thought was criticism against her.

Thus, a defense psychology was built up, a suspicious attitude toward the whole world, which made the Soviet psychology entirely different from our. Each had much to learn from the other, both must improve, and that, Hull said, would take time.

He felt very much the same way when he concluded his memoirs this year and offered this advice:

"In dealing with the Soviet Union we must never waver in the belief that we are entitled to evidence of weakness, or attempt to insist that, although she is entitled to freedom from intervention by us, she is not to be interfered with by any other nation, her government has no right to force communism on other nations or to molest them. Her domestic affairs in any other way."

Washington Digest Hull Realized the Gravity Of Post-War Readjustment

By BAUKHAUS News Analyst and Commentator.

WASHINGTON.—"I wish," he said, "I wish I could burn this year into your minds and memories for the next 50 years at least—that the human race this year is confronted with the gravest crisis in all its experience, and that we who are here on the scene of action, at this critical time, have the responsibility of saying what way the world is going for 50 years to come."

Those words I recorded in 1945 as the war in Europe was drawing to a close. They were spoken by a man now retired from public life who is living to see his significance growing each day—Cordell Hull who on October 2 reached his 77th year.

He spoke that sentence at an off-the-record press conference in his office in the old State, War and Navy building and the fire of conviction in his voice created such an impression that we asked him to quote him directly that one sentence. For that reason I have been able to reproduce it literally.

Since that day in 1945 we have seen Roosevelt die, Secretary Hull retire, peace come in Europe; the United Nations founded and then all unprepared for the new and terrible force released which brought the sudden cessation of hostilities in the Far East.

We too, few of us realized it) a tiny cloud no bigger than a man's hand, take shape on the horizon of world relations.

Roosevelt died, Secretary Hull retired, peace came in Europe; the United Nations founded and then all unprepared for the new and terrible force released which brought the sudden cessation of hostilities in the Far East.

It was the John Foster Dulles, that a tiny cloud no bigger than a man's hand, take shape on the horizon of world relations.

Roosevelt died, Secretary Hull retired, peace came in Europe; the United Nations founded and then all unprepared for the new and terrible force released which brought the sudden cessation of hostilities in the Far East.

Cordell Hull realized the necessity of making certain relations with the United States and Russia. Against the advice of his physicians and the wishes of his wife to leave, he was devoted, he flew to Moscow to talk to the one man upon whom he had the respect peace seemed to depend.

I had the great privilege of talking with Secretary Hull on the eve of his departure for Moscow. When I was shown his office, he was sitting at the great desk in the room from whose windows have looked so many of the great statesmen to have shaped America's spokesman to the world.

The office of the secretary of state has been removed from the old building to the new White House, which with its high ceilings, its gloomy marble corridors, wide stairways and its fireplaces, which was filled with certain odor of sanctity, slightly tinged with a touch of obsolescence which spoke of days and eras that were gone forever.

Today, the offices of the men who direct our foreign affairs are housed in an ultra-modern building, airy and bright, almost modernistic in its design. But I can imagine that history, as the solemnly records each day's agenda of 1948, must smile a bit ironically when he notes the similarity of today's record and that which was the chief concern of Cordell Hull.

When he rose to greet me on the 23rd of October, I had an interview with the courtesy which was a matter of course. He was not acquired by acquaintance, but by the courtesy of diplomatic protocol, his desk was covered with papers. He indicated that he had a few minutes to explain that they all dealt with his forthcoming mission to Moscow.

We talked for a long time and the viewpoint he expressed then concerning our policy toward Russia remained unchanged on his return.

Russia's Background Forms Her Attitude

I saw him again with a small group after his return and he reminded me of a student who must be considered against the background, that was a nation which had been virtually at peace for 23 years and during all that time had heard nothing but epithets against her, that she had cultivated the habit of slapping back twice as hard whenever she heard anything she thought was criticism against her.

Charles E. Hughes—Two-Career Man

To mention the office of secretary of state naturally brings forth the name of another who has held that office and whose death occurred recently—Charles Evans Hughes.

Charles Evans Hughes had a remarkable career. In fact he had two careers, each lasting 43 years. The first as a brilliant and successful lawyer in private practice and the second as a public servant holding among other things of the highest positions in public life in America, secretary of state and chief justice of the United States.

I happened to be present on two occasions within a few hours of each other which might be the high or the low point of any man's career.

With a group of reporters covering his headquarters in New York on election day I had him in good-night, fully believing as was all of us did, that he was the president-elect. I saw him the next morning when he was in the door of his hotel room with a grandchild in his arms to take in the morning paper which recorded the late outcome of the East and West and gave the majority of the electoral votes to Woodrow Wilson.

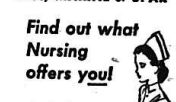

That same night Woodrow Wilson had gone to bed accepting defeat. The only paper supporting him which failed to haul down the flag (sign of Republicanism) from the old New York Evening Post whose special correspondent, David Lawrence, had predicted Wilson's re-election and stuck to it when he was almost alone in his belief.

How much of a disappointment Hughes suffered, it's hard to say. No man was ever more reluctant about accepting the candidacy and the fact that he received such a proportionately large popular vote must have been gratification enough. He looked forward with anticipation and pleasure to his return to the United States and to the fact that the law caused him to accept the judgeship on the world court.

He made a brilliant secretary of state under Harding and continued under President Coolidge. His election as chief justice of the supreme court by President Hoover was perhaps a more fortunate thing in the light of the crisis brought about by the famous "court packing" fight under Roosevelt.

He was one of the few who were elected to his remarkable knowledge of the law but his tremendous capacity for learning and his ability to formulate different points of view among the members without attempting to enforce his own legal views upon the majority.

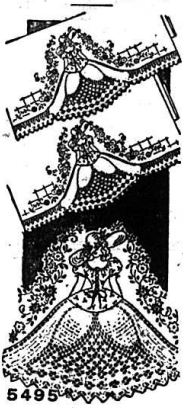

Hughes was a brilliant speaker. He spoke naturally and easily, yet with an excellent choice of words. Although he was extremely dignified in appearance and manner, he was able to convey a warmth of feeling which immediately aroused sympathy and interest in an audience.

Imagination Is Key to Simple But Effective Table Settings

By Etta Haley

"OH, HOW I wish I were artistic and could do interesting things with my table settings." Is a frequent cry heard when women gather.

Well, you can all relax; that is, all of you who don't think you have artistic ability.

Have you a red and white checked cloth? This is very attractive and can be used for a baked bean and cider supper.

What about using a gourd or a hollowed out squash for the centerpiece, with hollersweet or leaves or any array of fall fruit spilling out of it?

It takes but a little imagination, and you can readily see, to make effective table settings.

Informal Settings Are Easily Made

For breakfast, lunch and family dinner or supper you can use all manner of simple fabrics to create

For a party after a football game, serve a hearty supper in the warm glow of an open fire. Set out a long-tapered table in the spirit of the occasion with a forthright Irish linen tablecloth in bright red and white checks.

Another easy finish is fringing. You can easily do this in the evening for a set of mats and napkins.

THE MINERS' TAKE-HOME PAY

It is John L. Lewis' obvious intention to make the country believe that the average soft coal miner is getting a pretty raw deal, and that increases in the cost of living have largely offset increases in his pay. In the light of that, it is interesting to examine the official figures.

In 1939, according to the U. S. Bureau of Labor Statistics, coal miners earned, on the average, $23.88 a week. Last year they earned $68.86—an increase of nearly 180 per cent. This wage was higher than that reported for any other major industrial group anywhere in the United States or the world. By way of contrast, the cost of living in 1947 was 60 per cent higher than in 1939, going by the Bureau of Labor Statistics. Thus, increases in earnings have been far more than the advance in the cost of living.

The best barometer of a worker's welfare is his take-home pay, which is the determining factor in his purchasing power. If 1948 dollars are evaluated in terms of their 1939 purchasing power, it is found that during the first three months of this year, coal miners' take-home pay was 75 per cent above the former year. The purchasing power of workers in all manufacturing industry, on the other hand, was up 29 per cent from the 1939 level.

Even this tells only part of the story. Many thousands of miners exceed the weekly average by a wide margin. All miners receive many more direct and indirect benefits than they used to, and the working day has been substantially shortened. The coal miner is a prime example of how much better the worker fares under capitalism than under any other system.

Kentucky On The March
We'll call the guy Duke Hodd. The name is fictitious. Has to be, because there are tens of thousands of Duke Hods in the United States. They are people who drive cars after taking two or more drinks. And you must not overlook the Annie Hodd's women who drive when tipsy.

But let's get back to Duke Hodd. Ordinarily, he is a law-abiding man. Earns a honest living, is well respected by neighbors and friends. The possibility of killing somebody never enters his head.

Duke drives to town with friends—a town where drinks are sold. After shopping for a week's supply of state goods, the men go to a bar and one of them buys a round of drinks.

There are a few minutes of pleasant conversation. The little group is joined by more men and there is a second round. And a third and a fourth. The barkeep sees the men getting woozy, but is there to make money for the proprietor, which may be an individual or a club deeply interested in civic betterment. That he is making possible killers out of the men to whom he is serving too many drinks never occurs to the barkeep.

Well, Duke Hodd and his friends get into the car, with Duke at the steering wheel. Duke sees two or three street lamps where there's only one, but he refuses to admit even to himself that he is too drunk to drive.

Before the Hodd party has gone a mile there is a head-on crash. A child is killed, its mother crippled for a year, the father, as often happens to persons at the steering wheel, suffered bruises and contusions only.

The state highway police were soon at the scene of the accident. They learned readily that Hodd and his friends were intoxicated. The tipsy boys were taken to the police station and booked for drunken driving. Putting a manslaughter charge against them was deferred until the evidence was near dead end.

The father was the only eye witness who could testify for the prosecution. The mother of course, was in a hospital. The father was stunned out of his wits, overwhelmed with grief. So his testimony was a bit jumbled. Hodd and his friends were very good witnesses for themselves, but they said enough to get what might be called an even break with the prosecution. Some of their friends came to their defense with good-character evidence.

Yes, this was a Kentucky case. And under our traffic law the minimum penalty for driving while intoxicated is $102.50.

Duke Hodd paid his fine, 30 per cent of which went to the city prosecutor if the case was tried in police court, or 25 per cent to the county attorney if the case got established during the winter and be ready to start growing in the spring.

The soil should be deep, well-drained and fertile. Trees don't do well in wet soil. If sloping, it may be well to terrace the land.

The square system of planting is usually preferred. Standard distances are: Apples, 35 to 40 feet apart; peaches and plumbs, 20 to 25 feet, and cherries and pears, 25 to 30 feet.

Circular 347, "Planting and Planting an Orchard," can be had for the asking. Call at a county agent's office or write to the college at Lexington.

FALL BEST TIME TO PLANT FRUIT TREES

Fall is generally considered the best time to plant fruit trees in Kentucky, according to the College of Agriculture and Home Economics, University of Kentucky. Trees set in the fall can get established during the winter and be ready to start growing in the spring.

The soil should be deep, well-drained and fertile. Trees don't do well in wet soil. If sloping, it may be well to terrace the land.
