Special Jury Gives Five Years To Arie Blackburn

Court Session Will End After Friday

A special jury in circuit court here Wednesday gave Arie Blackburn a verdict of 10 years in the state reformatory for the killing of James Smith of Lexington on December 5, 1949. The jury had to be selected from thirty men, the entire list of three members of the original jury qualifying. The verdict was returned on a charge of voluntary manslaughter. A special jury in circuit court here Tuesday received a 15-year sentence but appealed his case to the higher court. A reversal in the latter case brought for retrial with the lesser sentence being decided upon yesterday.

The time Blackburn has spent in the reformatory as a result of the first sentence will be credited to his 10-year sentence.

McDaniel Draws 5 Years
 Other cases disposed of this week are those of Daniel McDaniel, Livingston, who was found guilty of the charge of shooting and wounding his sister, William H. Robinson and her husband at their home at Livingston on July 18. The woman's arm had to be amputated as a result of the shooting. The jury gave McDaniel three years for the shooting of his sister and two for shooting Mr. Robinson.

C. W. Cromer, charged with assault on William Milburn Jr., was found not guilty.

Jess Vaughn, charged with driving while intoxicated, was fined $100 and costs. Eddie B. Rice, possession of liquor, was given 30 days and $50 fine.

The jury retired dismissed the jury until Friday of this week, after which time the session will end.

Many Attempt To Get Pay Fraudulently

A total of 278 cases of individuals claiming unemployment insurance payments while working has been uncovered by members of the Department of Economic Security's Division of Unemployment Insurance staff of investigators during the seven-month period ended July 31, it was reported today by O. B. Hannah, division director.

The investigators found that in the cases the individuals were attempting to receive benefits fraudulently. In the remaining 80 cases the individuals were absolved of any intentional wrongdoing although overpaid by the agency due to their failure to properly report their earnings and employment as required by law.

Prosecution proceedings for false claiming were brought against 11 of the number whose offenses were considered flagrant enough to warrant such action, of which 70 have already been disposed of by the courts. Only one of the claimants was acquitted. The remaining 41 cases, together with 22 others from last year, are still pending in the courts.

Although 87 violators escaped court action because their offenses were less serious, all 87 together with those prosecuted received administrative penalties disqualifying them from further benefits of their claims. In addition all of the offenders were ordered to make full restitution to the division of the benefits illegally collected.

In addition to bringing to light cases of false claiming, while receiving benefits, the division's field investigators discovered a considerable number of individuals who, although committing no fraudulent acts, were receiving undeserved benefits because of their failure to completely meet all of the eligibility requirements of the law.

These cases, Hannah explained, consisted mainly of individuals who either were physically unable to work, lacked transportation to work, or who were unwilling or unable to accept employment for various reasons, such as domestic responsibilities, family obligations and the like.

James A. Rouse Dies At Copper Creek

School Cannery Having Busy Season

The Mt. Vernon School Cannery is having a very busy season this year, according to a report from Mrs. Margaret DeBenedictis, cannery supervisor. She, with the help of Mrs. Audrey Smith, home-canning teacher, and Mr. Wayne Stewart, teacher, are producing about 100,000 cans of tomatoes daily. For one canning unit this is unprecedented output.

Judge Sandusky Thanks Friends

I am indeed grateful to my many loyal friends for their support in the recent primary election. I harbor no malice toward any one who voted against me. It was the candidate of our choice is one of the few few privileges we have left and no one should throw it away by not voting. I exercise that privilege according to their best judgment. I also want to thank the Signal for their courteous and helpful publications. As stated to Judge Tartar in my letter of congratulations, I wish for him successful administration.

Eugene Clark Thanks Rockcastle Voters

I wish to express my sincere thanks to the voters of Rockcastle county for the fine support given me in my race for State Senator. I will do my best to serve my district and your county in a worthy manner.

Mail Box Restored At Depot Here

After being out of service since May 17, the U. S. mail box was restored to its place at the L & N depot here last Friday. The absence of the mail box proved to be a great inconvenience to the citizens, especially the business men of this community.

At least two petitions signed by local users, were sent to Washington to the Congressmen Golden and others to urge their influence toward having it restored as a matter of fact came to the attention of the postmaster general and it was explained that the mail clerks on passenger trains had complained that they were not given enough time to take the mail from the box before the trains pulled out.

Mayor Roy Cummins also took the matter up with L & N officials who replied that they would co-operate in having the box restored as an extra flag stopping of time trains long enough for the clerks to pick up the mail. At any rate the box is back in service and everybody is happy.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS Mucilage Substitute

Quite often when one is in a hurry to mail a letter, there will be a hole in the paper, or the mucilage on its back. In this predicament all necessary is to moisten the mucilage flap on another can is to make two holes in the can instead of one, about an inch apart. The one hole is for the liquid to pour from, the other hole to let the air into the can.

Brodhead Fair Is In Full Swing

The "Little World Fair" is in full swing and as usual every one has that pepped-up feeling that only the Brodhead Fair can give—where friendly people are greeting old friends from north, east and south, and meet with a cheerful hello and a contagious smile.

The floral hall is one of beauty with lovely fancy work of all kinds with lovely fancy work of all kinds, beautiful and fragrant flowers, delicious fruits and vegetables, home-made candies, cakes, pies and culinary art tempting that you will want to hasten to one of the stands where you can purchase some of these good eats.

The livestock and poultry are the finest and the horses are unsurpassed, and Best of Shows is there to furnish amusements of all kinds for young and old—just the old-time Brodhead Fair all the way through.

Roadster Class Tops Opening Night

The roadster class on the opening night proved to be tops with its trim sulks and masted one of the best horse shows at the fair in many years. The fleet professionals hitched to superb drivers in glittering costume give a thrill to fans which only this class of horse show can provide. The more the spectators the better these trim little powerhouses take off and show their opponents their dust, and they do just that.

Only a couple of three-year-olds in this class of roadsters re-established at country fairs. Of course twenty-five or thirty county fairs were held in Kentucky before being staged in real bouts of two-best out of three hotly contested and fought to the finish. These are coming back in earnest and maybe soon the whole track will be opened up for them and instead of a few skirmishes almost none at all. It is just to show that they have it, the whole flock will get into real competition. When that day comes it will be new with its 10-cent rides, nickle ice cream cones, comeback-balls and snake ticklers—then we can say "we've been to the fair."

HOME TOWN NEWS Army to Establish News Center For Releases to Local Papers

The people in the home towns of the nation are going to have more about local soldiers in the army. The army recently announced the establishment of a central news processing center in Kansas City, Mo. The primary purpose of the center will be to obtain recognition in his home town newspapers for each soldier who merits it. The center will provide more news about local men in the army and relieve combat trained soldiers of a big volume of writing and typing.

The army central news processing center will collect home town items through direct contact with army camps and units in the field, prepare them for publication and release them to local newspapers.

STAGE-SCREEN-RADIO. By INEZ GERRARD. ANNA MARIA ALBERGHETTI, the 14-year-old Italian soprano, is in Hollywood for her first starring role; she will play a refugee in "The Goddess" at Paramount. She was so good in "Here Comes the Groom" with Bing Crosby that the studio signed her again. But the picture which will really establish her as a sensation is "The Medium".

ANNE MARIA ALBERGHETTI MADE in Italy, it was directed by Menotti's office of information, which ran so successfully in New York and abroad. It is one of those understated films, perfectly acted and sung, beautifully staged. It stars Marie Powers, as did the original production. And the little Alberghetti is marvelous in it.

There was a good deal of grumbling by jealous competitors when Arthur Godfrey was asked to hobnob with the great on that recent European trip, but his remarks on the European situation, made since his return, have proved how worthy he was of that honor. Godfrey probably has the largest and most devoted audience of any radio or television star in the country.

GRASSROOTS Let's Not Fool Americans With False Propaganda. By Wright A. Patterson. WE MAY NOT resent foreign nations being fed false information by the state department, as Secretary Acheson testified, was the case, when on the witness stand before the senate committee investigating the firing of MacArthur, but we do resent, and quite justifiably, paying taxes to the extent of many millions of dollars to be used by the government in attempting to influence our opinions on Fair Deal socialist projects.

throughout the country in a single package—while they are still fresh. The army's decision to create the agency after a study disclosed that publication of such stories to local newspapers not only served to keep the people in the home towns informed but also had a tremendous effect in gathering information. They want credit for themselves and their units when they feel they deserve it.

Newspaper editors long have been aware of the demand by their readers for news about local men in the army and have spared no effort in gathering this information. But no newspaper—even with its own reporters working in the field with the troops—is able to give complete coverage without assistance from the army.

The major press associations, which have done a splendid job of keeping the public informed by supplying newspapers with national and state aspects of the army's campaigns and build-up, are unable to move a large volume of priority local news because of lack of wire space. Stories of outstanding heroism and achievement by individual soldiers have received excellent coverage through the press association.

But to a newspaper editor in Helena, Ark., the story of a Helms soldier's promotion to a sergeant or his winning of the Bronze Star medal is of far more importance than a Helms newspaper and its readers than a lengthy story of a Boston or Seattle infantryman who won the Congressional Medal of Honor or of a five-mile advance by an army in the field. However, none of the wire services has the facilities to send to the newspapers complete coverage of the myriad "small" items of this type.

The army has few public information men in units smaller than a division, and even of division level the public information staff is limited. It is the primary job of the small staff at this level to see that major news is covered. Consequently, "little" news items that would be of great importance in towns throughout the nation often are passed up.

Newspapers Can't Go They're So Valuable

Cissy Gregg, who has a daily column in the Courier-Journal, has some ideas about the use of newspapers not only for the purpose for which they were intended but afterwards. She says:

"Once in a while the thought crosses some minds that the popularity of news is on the wane, that other mediums will eventually take its place. But such an idea has as many holes in it as does a sieve.

"Why what would the home be without newspapers? It is not only what you read in them that makes them so valuable, but what is done with them after they are read. You can't wrap up the garbage in a newspaper program you can't line dresser drawers with a TV program, or wrap young tree trunks with either of them.

And without the old newspapers how would we conceal the old pair of shoes that is making a trip to be burnished? So it still remains a fact that we couldn't live without newspapers.

"Instead of their uses being frozen food packages, cleaning ice cream freezers, and many uses we had never thought of, but since we have been in the purveyor of news in the old newspapers for many things Cissy never thought of. Once when our supply was exhausted by a good old lady was very much disappointed because it was spring and she wanted to paper her house. Another time a business operator wanted the old papers to make powder cartridges for blasting. We do know there is enough kindling in a Sunday Courier to start a fire in our furnace.

ROCKCASTLE FACTS and STORIES

By RALPH GRIFFIN

Continuing our research into old Mt. Vernon Signal files there comes to light another story which aroused the editorial ire of James Mallet, it is "haunted tree," which stood in the Negro Creek section of Rockcastle.

According to the account, Jim Ross had been shot and killed by Steve Adams shortly after the Civil War and his body had fallen at the base of this tree. A few years later Allen Hagerd had engaged in a gun battle with Bill Powell and Allen died at the foot of our tree.

There were ghostly visitations in the vicinity of this tree over a period of many years, the story continues, and brave men avoided the locality. "It is told by some of the best citizens of the county that on every night of the year, clear or cloudy, light as if distinctly large lantern can be distinctly seen burning clearly and brightly in the branches of the so-called 'haunted tree'.

"The light that objects within a radius of twenty feet can be discerned clearly. The singular appearance and were within a short distance of the locality, the light would be invisible to them and all would be as dark as pitch; to others who were stationed farther away the light would be as distinctly visible as ever. Many other gruesome tales are told of the old tree and a brave man is he who will willingly be caught in its vicinity after dark."

It must have been fun to be a newspaper man back in this age of confusion. If it news was lacking your reporter could just throw his mind out of gear and whomp up a hair-raiser any sort. So long as he placed his locale so far away as the next county, he was pretty sure to get by with anything. To make doubly certain that his story would be believed, he usually took the Kentucky mountains as his setting.

Novelists still follow this rule. Honestly compels us to admit, however, that there was basis for much of our early reputation. The repeated shootings, feuds and killings in Rockcastle and adjoining mountain counties gained for them an unenviable reputation in other parts of the State, and even in far distant points. After the Goebel killing and the subsequent uproar which it created, all over Kentucky a Chicago newspaper printed a satirical account of an imaginary session of our Legislature. Rockcastle received honorable mention. "The Speaker of the House of Representatives mounted the rostrum and called the meeting to order with the butt end of Smith & Wesson's great work on Scientific Ventilation. "The Speaker—Will the coroner please read the minutes of the preceding meeting I mean, the Clerk."

"The Clerk—I regret to state that the gentleman from Breathitt county accidentally shot off two of my fingers as I was holding my hand to give the signal last night. I have been unable to write up the minutes."

"The Speaker—Before taking up the business of the day I must request the gentleman from Rockcastle county to quit firing his gun at the skylight. The gentleman from Rockcastle—I was simply trying to catch the Speaker's eye. I have a bill here, Mr. Speaker, to provide a navy for the State of Kentucky."

"The Speaker—Without objection the bill will be referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs. I believe that is the gentleman from Clay county who is waving a bowie knife at the chair."

"The Gentleman from Clay county—Mr. Speaker, I wish to introduce a bill providing for the equipment of the members of the Kentucky Legislature with armor-plates and the most modern firearms."

"The Chair—The bill of the gentleman from Clay is referred, without objection, to the Committee on Cemeteries and State Defense."

"The Gentleman from Jefferson—Mr. Chairman, I wish to move that the Legislature make an appropriation to provide each member of this body a copy of the Code of Kentucky, also the Code Duello and a pistol."

of the Clay county feud. "The Chair—The gentleman's motion is referred to the Committee on Education. The Sergeant-At-Arms will move the gentleman from Harlan from the hall, so that they can exercise their guns to better advantage on the innocent bystanders."

"There is more of this mythical account of a session which breaks up when all are invited to inspect a building in Nelson county. The conditions hinted at are indeed depicted today, even in Washington, D. C. The editor of the Signal at that time was rather pleased again otherwise at this farcical account of the deliberations of the Legislative body, particularly since most of the gentlemen were Republicans. He re-printed the thing in its entirety."

Your Garden By John S. Gardner

Winter Vegetable Storage, IV. By John S. Gardner, U. S. College of Agriculture and Home Economics

By all odds the best place for storing the "cool" crops in a house cellar, as there the danger of freezing is usually slight. The store room should be one part from where the house heater is put, even though such heaters are usually quite well insulated.

There should be a window to the outside, one with at least two panes. If so an outlet vent can be made by replacing a pane with a sheet of tin in which a stovepipe elbow is set pointing up. A length or two of stovepipe added to make a "stack" will assure draft. A means for closing each pipe should be provided, such as a regular damper.

The other pane is also replaced with a sheet of tin in which is set a stovepipe elbow pointing down and a stack of stovepipe is tacked that reaches to within 6 inches of the floor. A tube of muslin may be used. The area (in square inches) of each stovepipe ideally should be that of the floor in square feet, but that is not critical.

Whenever the air in the storage room becomes musty or moist, both stovepipes are opened, then closed again when the air becomes sweet. In freezing weather, the ventilating may be done about noon, to fill the room with warmer air. Cooling the room, as in early fall or late spring, the vents are opened at night. A thermometer hung at the level of the storage boxes is a great home economics. The temperature should be held at or near 40 degrees. To make sure of interchange of air, the baskets or boxes in which the vegetables are held should be set on bricks or blocking, to provide a few inches of air space between them and the floor.

In such a room, correctly used, potatoes may be held usable for fully a month longer than when temperature and humidity are not maintained.

Hominy Meal Helps Put Profit In Hogs

Starting with feeder shotts weighing an average of 70 pounds, S. N. Brooks of Shultz county in a little over three months sold the herd for a margin of $806.64 over the cost of the pigs and feed.

Feeding hominy meal helped Brooks make money from his hogs, according to figures submitted to the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture and Home Economics. Meal that cost $72 a ton was sold through the hogs for $111.40. The hogs had the run of red clover pasture, had access to clean water and received commercial supplement.

Canning In Oven Called Dangerous

A warning that oven canning is dangerous and should not be done is given by Mrs. Pearl Haak, UK canning expert at the College of Agriculture and Home Economics. Mrs. Haak points out that canning in the oven is unsafe for two reasons. Even though the temperature of the oven is 240 degrees or higher, the temperature of food inside a jar stays at about the boiling point, 212 degrees. It would require several hours of heating of meats and non-acid vegetables at that temperature to kill all bacteria.

Another reason for not using the oven for canning is that jars may explode as steam forms inside them, wrecking the stove and causing other possible damage and injury. All meats and vegetables, except tomatoes, should be canned in a steam pressure canner, the specialist stated.
