WOMAN'S WORLD

Choose Your Household Linens For Durability, Fit to Needs

By Rita Haley

Is there a greater homemaking thrill than opening the door of a well-appointed linen closet?

Most women will agree that this holds true even though women do not spend their time from doll to ferrisage days spinning and weaving linens for their dowry.

Linens are not always linen in the pure sense of the word, but we have become accustomed to designate them as such, as long as they are woven goods for bedroom, bath, dining room or kitchen.

No wise homemaker will let her linen supply get low for comfort. She should take stock at regular times, and replenish the closet when she can get the best quality and quantity at a reasonably fair price.

The best rule to follow is to get the best quality for the money. Check for wearing qualities, also choose the most suitable linens for your purposes.

You may find it economical to have several different qualities of linens on hand such as inexpensive utility towels for trips and school, a nice quality for family use and some very luxurious sets when you want to put on your best airs.

Quantity depends a great deal on personal considerations. However, as a guide for a family of four with laundry done once a week, you'll need approximately 1 dozen each of bath towels, wash cloths and hand towels; 1 dozen guest towels and 2 or 3 bath mats.

A minimum requirement of all linens that each bed have four sheets, and more is better. Three or four cases per pillow is minimum. Replace a pair of sheets a year for each bed.

Look for Absorbency. Durability in Towels. When you check absorbency in bath towels, check carefully on the loops. They are on both sides of the towel or in ribs or patterns.

Check durability by looking at the underweave of the towel. This is the towel's backbone that will bear the strain to which it is put. The back side should be firm, close and tight, which shows that the loops are held securely.

Hold the towel up to the light. If it does not show slight cloud through even in pinpoints, the quality is poor. Underweave can also be checked in the plain portion near the hem or border where there are no loops.

Compare towels in the hands to compare grades and weights. It's easy to tell the difference between sturdy towels and light towels. Hems should be stitched with small, close, uniform stitches. They should also be backstitched or turned and stitched back across the hem. The hems should be turned up so they won't ravel.

Diagonal Look

Black and white silk rapp are used by Dior in this diagonally designed afternoon dress. At the small, tied collar, mark the button placement by a "blazing" line to the waist and go on with straight line down the skirt. It's worn smartly with a tangerine-colored beret.

Necessity in buying bed linens. They give you real information as to what kind of material is used as well as a clue to its wearing qualities.

Percale is used in many quality sheets. It has a smooth feeling, it's firm but not bulky. Women's fine yarn, it has a high thread count. Usually percale sheeting comes in two types: utility or combed and extra.

Muslin is used for utility sheeting. It is woven of heavy, carded yarn with a thread count of 140 or 112, or square (warp) threads should equal the crosswise (woof) threads in number, quality must be firm or best wearing quality as this means the material is well balanced.

Always check for a label telling torn size. This means that the material used for the sheet was torn from the length of the cloth before hemming. When torn is along the length, it means the sheet will have straight hems. If cloth is cut, the hem will probably not be straight after laundering.

Check the hems on sheets, just as you do on towels. This should follow the direction of a single stitching thread at the fold or at the line of stitching.

Stitching should be neat and even, about 14 stitches to the inch. Ends of hems should be fastened securely and selvages must be firm or best wearing. Best selvages are used on best sheets, and these have extra yard to give extra strength.

Household Menu by Lynn Chambers

Smart Menu Plans Call for Tempting, Attractive Salads. Many homemakers find that their families like certain main dishes served time after time, as long as they're not repeated too frequently to become tiresome.

- LYNN CHAMBERS' MENU: Pot Roast Crowned Green Noodles, Carrots, Green Beans, Fruit Ring Salad, Browned Chicken, Beverage Recipe Given.

- 1 package lemon-flavored gelatin
1 1/2 cups hot water
2 cups fruit syrup, drained from peaches and pineapple
Canned peach halves, drained
Canned pineapple slices, drained
Canned hard sweet cherries, drained
Salad greens
Dissolve gelatin in hot water. Add fruit syrup and chili mixture until slightly thickened.

- Buffet Fruit Platter (Serves 6): Canned peach halves, drained
Canned fruit cocktail, drained
Canned pineapple slices, drained
Cottage cheese
Bananas
Salad greens

- Frozen Fruit Salad (Serves 8): 1 No. 4 size can fruit cocktail
1 teaspoon unflavored gelatin
2 tablespoons lemon juice
1 ounce package cream cheese
1 cup mayonnaise
Dash salt

- Drain fruit cocktail. Seta gelatin in lemon juice, then dissolve over hot water. Blend cream cheese with mayonnaise and salt. Stir in gelatin. Whip cream until stiff, add salt and fruit cocktail.

There's no need to lack for salad inspiration when you can use old favorites with new seasonings as in this cottage cheese-peach salad. Grated orange rind and maraschino cherries add both flavor and color for a salad that's pure eating pleasure.

THE BIBLE SPEAKS

By DR. KENNETH L. FOREMAN

SCRIPTURES: Matthew 4:12-20, Mark 1:16-20; Luke 9:11-17; MATTHEW, LECTURE: Matthew 4:12-22.

A 'Yes' to Christ

Lesson for January 13, 1952

JESUS knew some distinguished people. But his first and most intimate friends were not of that kind. Christ had started at the grassroots of humanity. It was not in the top branches, it was a good thing, too.

But in Jesus' first group of companions there was no St. Paul. They were the plainest of plain people. The first of them were fishermen. They were not up to lectures; it was for them to be led.

That is what Christianity is, at its heart: saying 'Yes' to Jesus. When these fishermen said their 'Yes,' it meant three things, and those three are always involved when anyone sincerely begins the Christian life.

Separation. Again, these fishermen's 'Yes' was a separation. They left their nets, their old occupations. We must not read too much into this, as if in order to be a Christian one must leave his old business, whatever it is.

Service. But that is the negative side of it, and that is why it is for that it has been called 'service.' It means separation from all that is out of tune with him; separation from selfishness, from sin, from the things of this world.

Service. But that is the negative side of it, and that is why it is for that it has been called 'service.' It means separation from all that is out of tune with him; separation from selfishness, from sin, from the things of this world.

WE'VE BEEN SLOW—BUT AWAKENING

Some of the boys over there in Korea are believing that we at home here in America are more or less unconcerned with the Korean war and to these boys there's nothing for us to do but plead guilty to their charges. This is a real war—one of the most realistic we have ever fought in our history. It is a mean and treacherous enemy we are dealing with and our soldiers are dying on the field and in the prison camps.

Recruiting officers, patriotic groups and blood center folks complain that it looks as though only those with kindfolks in Korea know there is a war. They accuse us of being callous and grasping—negligent and greedy. And when we stop to think about our national scandals—high government officials on the "take" traitors selling away our precious secrets, quibbling quarreling and slow-downs in production, we begin to suspect they are telling the truth.

However we always muddle through every difficulty somehow and we are becoming conscious of our national shame and there is being felt in more and more of us a sense of disgust and anger. Yes we've been slow but there is awakening and a clamor for action.

ROCKCAST E FACTS and STORIES

By RALPH GRIFFIN

Among recollections of Langdon School days there comes to mind the great spiritual revival which swept the youthful males of Mt. Vernon and surrounding territory during this period. There has never been anything like it since the days of "Raccoon" John Smith. Strange to say, it all centered in and about the local Presbyterian Church.

This church was sponsored and largely operated by Langdon, so all the girls and young women of this school attended services there. They marched down in a group, twice on Sunday and again on Wednesday night. Very few boys and young men were ever in attendance for the morning session, but in the evenings they turned out as one man.

As the girls marched down from their dormitory they passed rows of lads, ranked shoulder and two-deep from Charney's corner to the church-door. Attending teachers were particularly alert as their charges passed thru this danger-zone. Despite the fact it would have taken a large mail sack to have held the letters and notes which surreptitiously changed hands. There was even some parcel post business in the way of small boxes and bags of candy for the girls and knitted socks for the boys. One girl was reputed to have successfully peddled to her beat a five-pound sack of country sausage which she had snatched from the corner of the church-door.

Once the girls were safely seated inside, the church there was an interlude of some ten minutes. Teachers had lectured by hard experience that it took the boys at least that long to huddle under the nearest street lights and hastily give their mail a first reading. If the first song was started earlier it would be continually interrupted, besides woefully short on basses and baritone. Two minutes before the deadline the boys began toe-tapping. In the better educated ones, being able to read more rapidly, naturally came in first. One whole side of the building was reserved for the anticipated influx and it was always filled to overflowing. The back seats filled up first, naturally, some eight or ten crowding into a space intended for six, with only the rigid laws of physics preventing the entire group from seating themselves there.

Will Thompson, John Lair and Jesse Fain were usually among the first of the faithful to get seated. Gradually the others filtered in: Charles L. Davis, Lloyd and Omer Chestnut, Bentley Sparks, Hiatt Crawford, John Landrum, Dick Mullins, Homer Proctor, Logan Bryant, Robert Fish, Audrey Martin, Dave and Ben Craig, Everett Mullins, Ben Fishback, Charley Thompson and goodness knows how many more.

Lewis Miller had another prominent being illiterate, always finished their letters last and had to sit upon the very front seat. We had another excuse over and beyond our illiteracy, neither of our current heart-throbs could write very well.

One thing, and one only, might be said for these boys; they were a well-behaved bunch, not to say devout. They were being closely observed by at least a dozen teachers, every one of whom was reputed to have eyes in the back of her head in addition to a pair of unusually good ones in front. Then there was the pastor, Rev. George Watson. Bro. Watson, as we knew him, may or may not have had training under the ministry; at least he was Scotch and had an eagle eye which was the equal of Dick Lloyd.

He was a good scout and a great favorite of the community youth, but he suffered from no hallucinations. He knew, or strongly suspected, that all those sanctimonious-looking young squirts were not in earnest. The back seats were of hearing him preach. We always felt that one of us had only to make one false move to get the bum's rush. This suspicion was always sufficient for the preservation of almost perfect order; at least they wouldn't throw a fellow out for sneaking an occasional glance across the aisles.

In opportune time comes there a letter from Lloyd Livsey, now farming near Crawfordsville, Indiana, on Route 7, in case old friends want to write him. Lloyd was a merchant in Illinois for many years, has two children and two grandchildren. One son is a Captain in the Air Force, has flown over a good portion of Europe and Asia, is now located in Korea.

Lloyd says that he enjoys remembering his school days in the little Free School and the "College." He recalls that Miss Ida M. Taylor was the principal who dragged him over the coals for making eyes at the girls. Welcome to the fraternity, Lloyd.

COUNTY AGENTS' NOTES

By Robert F. Spence

Farm and Home Convention Kentucky's 40th annual Farm and Home Convention will be held at the University of Kentucky January 29 to February 1. This is one of the biggest and most important events of the year for Kentucky farm men and women, as well as business and professional people. It is here at this convention that we have an opportunity to hear the biggest farm and home problems discussed and plans outlined for the future needs of the farm and home people. We will also see all up to date inventions and improvements made in farm machinery with various equipment in operation, including many demonstrations of the year for Kentucky farm and value of making improvements on the farm.

The latest developments in crops and soils will be brought out in demonstrations and exhibits. The farmers will have an opportunity to see tobacco growing with black shank and also to hear experts and tobacco specialists on the control of tobacco black shank.

Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Mullins of Livingston visited Mr. and Mrs. Mose Mullins during the New Years holidays.

On the first day, January 29, Allen Kline, president of American Farm Bureau Federation, will speak in a combined meeting of both men and women. Farmers can't afford to miss hearing Mr. Kline on the problem facing agriculture at present and in the future.

Exhibits and demonstrations especially interesting to farmers will be: Farm Equipment, Use of Insecticides and Weed Killers, Control of Plant and Animal Diseases and Parasites and Curing Meats, Fruits and Vegetables. Make plans now to attend one or more days of this convention which is set up purposely at the University for farm men and women.

It is hoped that we will have a good delegation from the county to attend.

ADDITIONAL ORLANDO MISS Wanda Cameron was in Mt. Vernon Sunday.

EASIER on YOU... EASIER on Your SPREADER... EASIER on Your TRACTOR-

JOHN DEERE No. 25 LOADER

You'll load more manure with less work... less wear and tear on your spreader and tractor with a John Deere No. 25 Loader.

The John Deere takes "live power" directly from the flywheel—eliminates a lot of shifting while digging into the pile. By means of a single pedal you raise or lower the big-capacity bucket. Exclusive bucket shaker insures faster unloading.

Parallel arm construction permits digging into the pile at any height... provides a low, easy drop into the spreader. Weight is distributed well to the rear of the tractor for easier steering, better traction, less strain on the front tires.

See us about more of the many fine features of the No. 25 loader.

OPERATION UNITY
Unity Must Be Top Consideration In Alliance of Western Nations

By Farham F. Dodge
(Editor's note: This is one of a series of articles appearing in the Signal as a New Yorker Union issue on a 11,000 mile flight through Europe and the Near East...)

The program on which the United States is embarked in Europe must succeed, for there is no acceptable alternative for our country. If you are in a boat in a strong current, you must pull your own oars.

It was with these, and other equally important considerations, that General D. Eisenhower in his Supreme Headquarters, Allied Powers in Europe near Paris, France, called for the formation of a 24-day inspection trip of the major Western European countries allied with the United States against Soviet aggression.

In this same initial briefing, the supreme allied commander authorized another direct quotation, which was repeated with equal emphasis again as we talked with the military officials, and with the military and civilian leaders of France, Italy, Turkey, Greece, Yugoslavia, Western Germany, and the Netherlands.

General Eisenhower said: "The free world vastly outnumber the Iron Curtain countries in total resources. The essential task of the United States is to achieve unity by a dagger in the back, the only way in which we shall obtain unity is to divide the Iron Curtain countries to realize that its enlightened self-interest is best served by clinging together in this association."

As this "enlightened" unity is achieved, the "enlightened" unity is in an attempt to get some kind of answer to this vital international question: How can we best achieve unity? Here are some of the essential impressions created as a result of our observations.

Deployed Around U.S.S.R.
The United States and its Western allies are very definitely deployed in a political and economic sense in a limited military aggregation around the Russian perimeter from Norway on one flank through Turkey on the other.

The battle lines for defensive military tactics are drawn. Our strategy for the future is to be a limited military aggression has been charted. Maps showing the deployment of the enemy forces have been completed and these maps show the enemy organization. What forces we have in readiness are placed where it is believed they would do the most good around "the zone just to tomorrow."

There is no feeling of false optimism or of bluff. Our leaders admit that we would be in serious trouble if the Soviet forces were to move tomorrow. But we are in better shape today than we were six months of a year ago.

If we aren't strong enough to hold the Russians back, why haven't they moved?
One military leader put it this way: "We think Russia knows that if this thing breaks, it will be a different fight. Russia might win this."

GRASSROOTS
Nostalgic Recollections of Old Rural General Stores

By Wright A. Patterson
YESTERDAY I visited a store, as I do whenever opportunity offers, that carried me back to boyhood days in an Iowa village, in every detail it was the old type general store in which I spent my pennies in those long ago boyhood days. And the store, I recall, was a storekeeper, not a merchant, was prepared to supply every human need from the cradle to the grave.

Somewhere in their stock, they did not always know just where, were diapers, soothing syrup, paregoric, colic "cure", and there were big crates of tin trundle beds. On one shelf were "patent medicines," guaranteed to cure every ailment in the fish is in a shed at the back was kerosene, axle grease and paints for some or many uses. In this stock were coffins in which the people of the community would be buried. Veritably every human need from the cradle to the grave.

THE FICTION CORNER

SAM'S pride, his independent nature and almost belligerent disposition were his assets. Every one who saw him was responsible for his success as a real estate agent. He always said what he thought, regardless of the consequences.

3-Minute Fiction

And now he'd fallen in love with Audrey Gardner. Audrey was a mama's girl. She depended on her mother for everything. It was always, "Yes, mama." "Of course, mother, dear." "Well, if you think it's best, mama."

HE wanted Audrey. That's why he had realized and supposed. Secretly he was disgusted with himself for doing so.

After the wedding they went to live in a cottage close by where Audrey's mother lived. Audrey's mother came over every day. She made suggestions; she issued commands. She dining room should be painted in blue, the living room furniture was atrocious, the bedrooms were cold and barren. Everything should be changed. It was.

Sam ground his teeth and said nothing. And when he tried to sell a building lot to a bridal couple they weren't very impressed. They grunted and he stalled and said: "I'll, well, I'll talk it over."

Sam was wild. He'd never let a prospect walk out on him like that. It happened a second time and five miles out of Los Angeles, and removed to his restaurant grounds for the edification of his patrons. The general store was the only business still operating in that ghost town, but it was included in the purchase of the new store, was transplanted to the new location. Without him that store would lose much of its interest. You could get a real thrill out of having him sell you things, especially if you are of the older generation that knew general store your home town.

Just what source they have from which to maintain the stock it offers I do not know. The storekeeper has been able to find replacements for all items, though there was no one source from which they came. He had hopes of keeping his stock going indefinitely. It would be a sad blow to that restaurant, and its two to ten thousand daily patrons if he did not succeed. It was the only one of its kind of the thousands that existed a bit more than half a century ago.

It will not be, but it would seem a just retribution if Mack Arthur were privileged to tell President Truman to move out of the White House. Indirectly he might do that by active support of the Republican presidential candidate. His influence could be responsible for many votes.

To prohibit the supplying of information to the people is the act of a dictator.
