THE FIRST SCRIPTURE selection presents as dramatic a scene as can be found in all literature. David, deep-dyed in iniquity because of his sin with Bathsheba and the murder of her husband by having him sent into the forefront of the hottest battle where he was speedily slain, was rescued by the fearless puppet Nathan. To David the prophet related the story of the ewe lamb and her poor owner.

WHOOPIING COUGH

Whooping cough is "up" in Kentucky this year. During the first half of 1952, nearly twice as many cases were reported to the State Department of Health as were reported in the same period of 1951.

Reason for the upsurge, from 782 to 1407, is attributed by health officials to neglect in having children properly immunized. According to Lead Mezera, M. D., Director of the Division of Maternal and Child Health, it is important that children be immunized against whooping cough at 3 months of age or earlier. It is most unwise to wait until a child has been exposed before having him inoculated, Dr. Mezera pointed out, as it takes several months for immunity to develop.

Many physicians, Dr. Mezera said, give three injections of triple antigen which immunizes against whooping cough, diphtheria and tetanus. It is safest, he points out, to have your child receive a "booster shot" every one and a half or two years through six years of age.

In 1920, statistics show that 300 of every 100,000 infants under one year died of whooping cough. In 1951, largely because of more wide-spread immunization, the State Department of Health recorded only 12 deaths from whooping cough. Immunization will help make sure that your child is not among those who die of whooping cough in 1952.

up rubbish outdoors, too.

2. Don't smoke in bed or barns. Keep matches covered in metal containers.

3. Have competent electricians install electrical wiring. Improvised wiring leads to short circuits and short circuits lead to fires.

4. To guard against flying sparks, fire resistant roofing is essential. Check regularly. Use asphalt shingles, slate, metal, asbestos, or a similar material that will not act as tinder for sparks from chimneys, trash fires and brush fires.

5. Store gasoline and kerosene away from main buildings preferably underground. Use cleaning fluids that won't explode.

6. Have lightning rod systems properly installed and keep them repaired.

7. Keep heating plants and chimneys clean. Clean lamps and lanterns regularly on all stoves in brooder houses.

8. Cure hay properly. Damp hay starts fires by spontaneous ignition.

9. Do a good maintenance job on machinery. One spark from a tractor exhaust is enough to start a blaze in hay or straw.

SURPRISES AT COVE SCHOOL

We finished our first month's tests on Friday evening about two o'clock. Our teacher said we would finish the day by telling stories or singing songs. At two-thirty Mrs. Mamie Robinson stepped in the door, carrying a big basket of cookies and a kettle of ice cubes. Mrs. Rena Jordan had gotten Mrs. Robinson to make the cookies as a surprise for the school. We ate cookies, drank ice cold cola aid, and chewed bubble gum. Mrs. Mamie sang a song for us then we all sang a few songs. We blew bubbles out of our bubble gum.

Sept. 17 was our teacher's birthday. The school children walked in the school house door at eight o'clock Monday morning carrying a big cake with lighted candles on it, singing Happy Birthday. Each of them was carrying a big armful of goldenrods and ma-

Heavy-Duty Roads Like Romans' Via

THE POUNDING destruction of a heavy traffic on modern highways has caused the revival of some of the basic engineering principles used 2,000 years ago in construction of the famous roads of ancient Rome.

Most renowned road in the Roman system, which at its peak totaled some 50,000 miles, was the 42-mile Via Appia (Appian Way), leading from Rome southeastward to Brundisium (modern Brindisi) and its port of Hydruntum (Ortono), in the heel of the Italian boot.

A recent survey by American engineers showed that the Appian Way is in better condition than many modern highways and streets. In other parts of the ancient Roman empire traces of the basic engineering principles of Britain's Scottish border to Egypt and Syria.

The Roman roads owed much of their longevity and quality to careful, painstaking construction and to the engineering principle of building extremely deep, heavy foundations. Some of the roads are more than 40 inches from their base of large, hand-laid and fitted stones to the top of the pavement.

Breakup of thin pavements under heavy traffic led engineers back to the Roman theory. But now great machines do everything from basic excavation to final finishing. In Roman times the work was done by hand labor and military labor. Foundation and surface paving blocks were laboriously fitted together.

It would probably cost more than $200,000 a mile to reproduce the hand-built Roman road today. The extremely deep, heavy foundations of the Roman roads are returning to use, but other features would rule the ancient highways out for modern traffic. Because they were used largely by foot soldiers and comparatively slow moving wagons and chariots, some grades were extremely steep—much too steep for easy negotiation by modern wheeled vehicles.

THRIFTIEST distance between two points...

is by all odds the uncongested steel highway of your American railroad.

You, yourself, may never send or receive railroad freight—but nevertheless almost everything you eat, wear and use moves long distances on these steel rails. That holds true, too, for the raw materials and fuels that are needed to make the goods you use every day.

This vital rail service hauls more tons of freight, more miles than all other forms of transportation combined—and does it at an average charge lower than that of any other form of general transportation!

It makes a lot of thrifty sense, therefore, to ship freight by rail. And the more use that is made of these steel highways—maintained and built with the railroads' own money—the less will be the wear and tear on public highways, the less you as a taxpayer will have to pay for building and maintaining them.

To The Voters Of Rockcastle County

On November 4 of this year the voters of Rockcastle County will be afforded an unusual privilege and opportunity—that of voting in favor of the HOSPITAL BOND ISSUE. Surely every citizen in our county is familiar with our great need for a hospital. Each of us must realize our need for doctors as well. If we had the hospital it would be far easier for us to attract young physicians to our community. Our nearest hospital is 18 miles away and certainly at this distance our people cannot be so efficiently served as by a hospital in our own county. Not only would a hospital serve to attract physicians and to make hospitalization more convenient but likely would help us in securing a most need factory for our county.

By voting "YES" for the HOSPITAL BOND ISSUE in November you will make it possible for our county to issue bonds to the extent of $100,000. The anticipated yearly revenue will be $15000 with a guaranteed interest rate of two and three-fourths per cent. These bonds would be retired in ten years, though, callable and could be paid off sooner. At the end of ten years on the anticipated revenue today we will have in the Bond Fund approximately a $35,000 surplus over the principal and interest has been paid.

This hospital (see drawing of architect above) will be an 18 bed hospital with an operating room, operating room, doctors office, x-ray room, nurses stations and all other necessary facilities. It will be one of the most modern and complete small hospitals in Kentucky. The construction of this hospital will be fire proof and will be built according to state specifications and approval. According to sponsoring clubs and organizations a reliable architect has made a statement to them that this hospital can be built for approximately $75,000 which will leave $25,000 for hospital equipment. This hospital would be operated by a Board of Trustees consisting of 9, 11 or 13 members who would be appointed by the fiscal court. These trustees, according to a statement from members of the fiscal court, would be some of the best business men in the county.

The hospital would cost each tax payer in Rockcastle County 20c on each $100 valuation or $2.00 per $1000 assessed valuation. There is at present a 20c per hundred dollar road issue which is to be paid out this year and if the voters of Rockcastle County want a hospital this 20c road bond issue or equivalent can be re-voted this fall. Then our taxes will not be any higher next year than last year on the same assessed valuation.

Lives of our friends and loved ones may be determined by how you vote on the HOSPITAL BOND ISSUE. It takes only five or ten minutes in receiving hospital care could mean life or death for you or another.

The following organizations have wholeheartedly endorsed approval of the Bond Issue for a Rockcastle County Hospital: The Rockcastle Chamber of Commerce, The Rockcastle Medical Association, The Rockcastle County Farm Bureau, the Livingston Lions Club, the Brothard Lions Club, the Mt. Vernon Womens Club, The Executive Board of the Rockcastle

Missionary Baptist Association in cooperation with the Rockcastle County Fiscal Court.

For the progress and well being of our county won't you lend your full support to the securing of a hospital for our county.

Sincerely yours,
THE ROCKCASTLE CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

Unemployment Greatly Reduced in County

Mr. Willis Smith of Corbin, director of the Unemployment Insurance office made a statement yesterday morning at the headquarters here in Mt. Vernon, that unemployment is decreasing in Rockcastle County. At present only about 60 persons are receiving unemployment insurance benefits. Meetings of the claimants were formerly held in the court house and sometimes the auditorium was filled with persons making their unemployment insurance claims before the board.

Yesterday when the Board met at the Public Assistance office a comparatively small number of individuals were present. This is apparently an indication that employment is better than it has been for some time. Some of the unemployment was due to the steel strike of last summer. So wide spread was the strike that it affected even the rural county of Rockcastle.

Mr. Smith stated that his office in Corbin placed about 700 men in jobs during the month of September alone. His office covers seven counties.

The average pay of unemployment insurance in the state of Kentucky according to recent reports, "is about $19.50 per week. In Rockcastle County the pay ranges all the way from $8.00 to $28 per week.

Mr. Smith and his assistant from Barbourville were wearing those funny squashed little stiff hats with the word, "Nibroc". That is Corbin, spelled backwards. The idea was to publicize the celebration at Corbin of Sept. 24, 25, and 26.

Purgation Board Scanning Voters' List

The Rockcastle County Purgation Board met this week to check over the entire list of voters of this county to see if there are any names that should be eliminated for some reason or other. Some voters have moved away and others no longer on the eligible voters list. Others have died and their names have never been removed. While still others have not voted for two consecutive years and are therefore ineligible to have their registration challenged.

The Purgation Board began work last Monday and by Wednesday morning at least 619 names had been listed whose right to vote will be challenged. Postal cards are being sent to all those persons whose the board feel they should be challenged. These persons who are being notified and who think that they are entitled to vote may appear before the Purgation Board within five days after they have received the notification and show cause why they should not be removed for the registration book. If the Board decides that the voter has a case an appointment will be made for the voter to appear before the county judge and the Purgation Board. The judge will have the final say in the decision.

The appointed committee by the state of Kentucky and it is to complete its work before the coming election. There is no expense involved for any voter who desires to appeal his case. No attorney is necessary. The Board wants to make it clear that it desires to treat all voters with fairness and will give every case careful consideration.

The members of the Purgation Board are: J. C. Quinn, chrm., Brodhead Saylor and Howard Linville.

Livingston Man Is Victim Of Pistol Shots Sat. Nite

Issac Young and his wife from Harlan are in jail here accused of killing Lee Russell

Lee Russell 37, was killed almost instantly last Saturday night at about 11 o'clock when he was shot with a pistol presumably in the hands of Isaac Young 63 of Harlan, Kentucky, that night they went to the Yngste home took up quarters there while the Yngste family Mrs. Yngste in north end of Livingston, on U. The story is—and it agrees fairly well from both sides—that Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Young had come from Harlan to Livingston in a truck driven by preacher-father Lively and family. When they arrived at Livingston they expected, to take back with them a pig that

The Youngs had left at a neighbor. However Mrs. Young stated that the feet shot was too high so they didn't take it. Not wanting to go back to Harlan that night they went to the Yngste home took up quarters there while the Yngste family Mrs. Yngste in north end of Livingston, on U. S. 25.

The Yngste family returned from the show they found the beds occupied—all of them were in the house including the Lively family, five in number. Mr. and Mrs. Young and preacher-father Lively and family. When Lee Russell, the son of Livingston they expected, to take back with them a pig that

Country Editors at Renfro Valley Oct. 3, 4 and 5

Invitations have been sent to all the oldest newspapers in the U. S. to be guests of Renfro

One of the most unique celebrations ever to take place in this county will be when the editors of the oldest newspapers in the United States will be the guests of John Lair at Renfro Valley on Friday, Saturday and Sunday, Oct. 3, 4, and 5. At least 150 of these editors are expected to be present and enjoy the hospitality of Renfro. They will be coming from all parts of the United States. One editor from the state of Kansas has already written in and told some of his story. It is quite an exciting one. Some of the old newspapers have been in the family for many generations, being an institution in themselves.

Elaborate plans are under way at present to give these editors some grand entertainment. What these plans are is still a deep secret, but from rumors and little eaves dropping they are grandiose.

Signs of Times By a Witness of Jehovah. Jesus Christ the Son of God gave the signs for the sorrow that afflict the world today.

From Miss Pearl Minear, Harwood, Texas: I remember the back my father used to drive. He burned candles for lights. They were enclosed in glass to protect the glass from the wind. They were used on bluffs.

From Mrs. Rose Banner, Griffith, Ind.: I remember when my brother swallowed a two-cent piece. So we fed him mashed potatoes every time he was hungry.

From Amelia Doctor, Denver: I remember when women wore long, heavy black veils and some of close relatives, and the men wore a black crepe band on their hats and coat sleeves. Black clothes were worn for a whole year after the death of a member of the family.

From Mary Karch, Lakewick, Ohio: I remember when father used to get the sugar and some hollowed-out spigots. He would put the maple or sugar trees, and he boiled the sap down into a delicious maple syrup. We used the sweetened water to make delicious saffras tea.

From Sam Williams, Fairmont, W. Va.: I remember when palm leaf fans were used to keep the air stirring in churches and at public gatherings.

From Mrs. Fannie Lester, Ringgold, Ia.: I remember when people wanted to paint their faces they went to the rock and got out a red oak bark, mashed it and used it for face rouge. There were no beauty parlors. When mother wanted to dye some cloth, she boiled red oak bark and put copper in it to set it. It made a blue dye.

A SHARE OF GOSSIP

By Le Page Nelson

AFTER 16 years Emily Stark was going to leave her husband. She sat alone in her bedroom waiting for him to come home. Tonight she would tell him. To-night everything would be settled, and tomorrow she would go off with Chester Moore. Idly she thought of Chester. He was pleasant and tall and genial. And rich. Otherwise there was nothing particularly impressive about him. He lacked the fire and drive of John, her husband.

Individually she thought how sick to death she was of men of John's type. Of John. He had been too occupied with his work, with building up his business.

Suddenly her mind leaped to Hal-dee Pearson. Curious, why she should think of Hal-dee. Then the voice went down deep in her heart and told her that Hal-dee was the cause, the real cause, of her unhappiness, separating. If she hadn't seen them together that night at the Flamingo Club, if she had heard no whispered gossip, she and John would have made the first move that would have broken things off. But she was going to tell him tonight. She couldn't stand having him be the first to break the subject.

The telephone on her bedside table shrilly interrupted her thoughts.

"This is the city hospital, Mrs. Stark. Your son Hal-dee has been in an accident. You'd better get down here as quickly as you can."

Emily's heart stopped beating. Then began again, pounding wildly, terror racing through her blood. "Is he—is he?" she couldn't finish the sentence.

The voice came back cool and reassuring. "There's no need for immediate worry, Mrs. Stark. He's being for you and his father."

"Oh!" She dropped the phone, whirled, stopped. John was standing in the doorway. She stared at him with a white face.

"What is it? What's happened?" He took hold of her shoulders and shook her. "It's something happened to Robert?"

"Yes, He's had an accident. He's at the City Hospital."

"Without a word he turned and went out. She caught up a wrap and followed him downstairs. "The car's out front," he told her. He had his hat and coat on, was holding the door. John got behind the wheel. The machine leaped down the drive. He drove fast, but not recklessly. His face was a cold, inscrutable profile. Emily wanted to talk, wanted to say something. "John, is it our fault? We haven't been very good parents. Oh, John, he mustn't die!"

"He won't die," said John. "We won't let him die." She felt closer to him then than she had in years.

A nurse admitted them to the hospital room. Robert was conscious, waiting. His handsome boyish face lighted at sight of them. "Dad! Mother! Gee, thought you'd never come."

Tears came into the boy's eyes. "I'm all right. At first I was glad it happened. I thought, well, if I died, then things wouldn't matter any more." He looked from one to the other of them. "But now—it's different. You're here—together. I'm all right now."

Emily tried hard to swallow the lump that came into her throat and couldn't. So she put her head down on the pillow beside her son's and cried. After a while she stood up. John was waiting for her at the door.

The doctor entered the room. "So—will everything be all right, doctor?"

The doctor went over to the bed and looked at Robert and then came back to the two by the door. "He'll be all right—now. For awhile we were worried. He didn't seem to want to recover."

Outside, John and Emily walked. Emily spoke, nor looked at the other. At the end of the corridor was a small conservatory. It was empty and they entered.

"Emily, I guess we haven't been good parents. I guess things have been happening that we never dreamed about."

"Yes," Emily said. "Yes, John, I—I feel so ashamed and guilty."

"He took her hand and held it awkwardly. "There! Now there's no need to blame yourself. It was as much me, I—I guess I'm to blame for this."

"John! You're no more to blame than I. Even if you and Hal-dee Pearson—"

"She broke off, biting her lip, regretting the impulse that had made her mention Hal-dee's name.

John's eyebrows went up. For a moment the lines about his mouth hardened. Then he smiled. "A man has his pride too, you know. Hal-dee was the best I could do on such short notice."

Emily looked up quickly. "You—"

He nodded. "I couldn't see you getting all the gossip. I figured I deserved a little."
