

Friendly NOTE

By Alfred Sparks, Jr.

"Man's inhumanity to man makes countless thousands mourn."

In these troublesome times when directly, or indirectly we have all felt the ravages of war and the suffering it brings, it might be well to count our blessings. There is so much to be thankful for. Blessed is he who is healthy and gazes upon smiling faces. Blessed is he also who can honestly say that he is giving forth his best and sharing his happiness with others. Life is so simple and so beautiful when the proper spirit accompanies life itself. So let's all give forth the good words and a helping hand.

Yes, we plant trees...

Yes, tree planting is part of forestland management—tree farming. When seed sources have been destroyed by fire or clearing, the quickest way to get the land back into timber is to plant trees. Forest industries even use helicopters to scatter seed from the air over some areas that need planting. Most of the time, though, Nature plants her own trees. Tree farmers harvest trees in such a way that new ones spring up in their place. It's all part of woodland management.

In 1952, more than 500,000 acres were planted to forest trees in the United States. Eighty percent of this planting was by private landowners. Forest industries often provide seedlings and lend mechanical planters to small landowners who want to grow trees as a crop.

Crop Pests Can Cost You Money

INSECTS and fungus diseases strike suddenly and without warning. Once they get a head start, the cost of salvaging your crops is far greater than the small cost of preventive dusting. That's why it always pays in the long run to invest a few dollars in adequate protection now... and insure your crop against serious damage this summer. Southern States dusts are made especially to combat the common insects and fungus diseases found throughout the Southern States area. The ingredients used are mixed according to the latest findings and recommendations of State Agricultural Colleges and Experimental Stations, and distributed to patrons fresh for greater strength and killing power.

Stepfather Charged Beating Child To Death

Little Wendy Elaine Baker died from wounds believed inflicted by jealous husband.

Jack Navarre, 21, charged with willful murder of his step-daughter, Wendy Elaine Baker.

Two and one-half year-old Wendy Elaine Baker is believed to have been the victim of a brutal beating by her stepfather. The child died at the Berea College hospital where the attending physician diagnosed the case as one of unusual interest and believed that the child died from other than natural causes. Bruises were found on the body that were indicative of severe physical treatment. Both large toe nails were pulled off. There were black and blue marks over the face. A deep bruise under the chin and a hole in the abdomen. An autopsy later revealed that the stomach was ruptured and peritonitis had set in and caused the death of the child.

to how the two large toe nails happened to be missing. Later in the morning the child and in a rather elusive manner threw off the questions as though he did not know what had happened. When questioned as to what caused the death of the child he said that the girl "fell off" the steps at her home. However, the evidence revealed that those steps at the home were not high enough to injure any child falling from them. They are only about four feet high.

Janet Lee Frith, senior of the Brodhead High School receiving the "No Tardy, No Absent" Award from Principal D. A. Robbins. Miss Frith was never absent nor tardy in her eight years of work at the Brodhead School. Miss Frith has an older sister who made the same record.

then rushed out the kitchen door and fled into the nearby hills. On Monday morning of this week the mother and neighbors took the child to the Berea College hospital where it died at about 11 o'clock Tuesday morning. Coronor Jack Turpin of Madison County stated that the child had been beaten severely.

An investigation at the home by county officers and the Commonwealth's attorney revealed no iron pipe but a mallet handle was found behind the stove. Also four pairs of overalls that the little girl had worn were found with possible blood stains on them. The clothes had been freshly washed and were still wet. A pair of pliers appeared at the jail Thursday morning and are kept as possible evidence.

Navarre's examining trial was set for Saturday afternoon at 2 P. M. in the office of County Judge Walter Sowder. When asked whether he wanted to employ an attorney Navarre replied that he would first like to consult with his stepfather Billy Morris of Orlando.

The Navarres have one child of their own, a boy about four months old.

Funeral of the child was held today Thursday at the home of her grandmother, Mrs. Everette of Berea.

Mrs. Navarre was released from jail after the special inquiry was held, while her husband was held in jail here in Mt. Vernon.

Salute to Home Demonstration Week by Dupont

Last week was Home Demonstration Week. Many of you saw the window exhibits in the Kentucky Utilities windows in Mt. Vernon by the Mt. Vernon and United Neighbors Clubs.

The Quail Club had an exhibit in a Brodhead store window. Below is an interesting article released by the Extension Division, Dupont Company, Wilmington, Delaware.

"Home Demonstration Work has helped millions of women, particularly in rural areas, lead a richer, fuller life as was told in communities all over the nation by radio, TV, window displays, programs and feature stories. Few who have not had a part in this program will realize what tremendous strides it has taken in comparatively short time.

It was in 1913 that the germ of an idea began. It was then that the Secretary of Agriculture wrote a number of rural wives asking how the Department of Agriculture could best serve them. Back came the answers, all expressing the same problems: isolation, lack of social and educational opportunities, and loneliness. Help us, they said, to organize together clubs of information and cooperation.

Shortly after that, in 1914, the Smith-Lever Act became a law and with it came the establishment of the Extension Service and the home demonstration program with which the land Grant Colleges, the U. S. Department of Agriculture, and local county governments cooperate.

It was not long before rural women gathered together, and with the help of a trained home economist, discussed their problems and planned a program to meet their needs. There will be many who will recall today how loneliness vanished as they met together and exchanged ideas with other women, and there will be many who will laugh a bit, contrasting yesterday's problems of canning by the hot water bath method to those of today's food freezer. There will be those who will recall plowing through sticky mud roads behind old dobbin to go to the county seat to represent the women of their community at a county program planning meeting. They will contrast that with their recent trip by plane across the sea to meet with rural women from all over the world to discuss international problems.

There are many who will recall a much loved person, their home demonstration agent, who braved storms and rocky roads in her "tin lizzie" to bring them the latest homemaking practices. A new way to make a spring bonnet or a time saver such as a fireless cooker.

To 3,700 county home demonstration agents and specialists in home economics at the state colleges, together with the U. S. Department of Agriculture, cooperate to bring every phase of homemaking to 3 million women in 47,000 communities.

Has the home demonstration program met the needs of farm women? The best answer is from the farm homemaker herself. "Times have been when a farm woman was picked out in a crowd by her tired haggard look, her red calloused hands, her poorly fitting clothes, and her timid manner.

But that is not true today. Our farm women are as well dressed and groomed, can preside over a meeting with as much poise and parliamentary precision as their city neighbors. We still make our clothes, but we have learned how. They say, "Our farm homes are as modern as you will find in the city. Our children are better fed because of the food lessons in our club. We know how to balance a meal with the right foods for muscles, teeth and bones."

We could quote many other farm women, but they would all express the same sentiment that through the home demonstration program, they have kept a pace with the latest developments in rural and family life.

We who are in the business of research for "Better Things for Better Living" have a deep appreciation for the vital contribution the home demonstration program is making in bringing the latest developments in research to the American home.

RAMBLINGS

The recent decision of a two- and one-half year-old girl, supposedly at the hand of her step father, has greatly shocked this community. If it can be proven that such violence, as evidence so far seems to indicate, then no punishment could be severe enough for the person guilty of the crime. The law has to take its course and determine what punitive measures can be taken, but no legal steps will be able to erase the blotch of moral perversion.

The recent decision of the Supreme Court of the United States to make segregation unlawful will have its varied effect in many states. In the South the decision will be fought with a great deal of vigor and delaying tactics. In the North the problem is not acute. As a matter of fact many universities will gladly comply with the decision, as for instance the schools of this state. The Day Law now becomes obsolete and every public and graduate school supported by government funds, must admit negroes. There is little argument against the decision, which was long in coming. For fifty years it has been a battle. We might as well take the decision in good grace and gradually work out the problems that surely are not unsurmountable.
