IN LOVING REMEMBRANCE OF OUR MOTHER

It was three months ago today, we laid our darling mother away. We cannot see her here no more, but can meet her on the celestial shore...

Never more can thou return, Thou shalt sleep a peaceful slumber. Till the resurrection morn. Oh dear mother, how we miss thee...

Since thy precious face I cannot see, She her blessed savior loved, And his precious name confessed...

Thou hast gone from us oh mother, Never more can thou return, Thou shalt sleep a peaceful slumber. Till the resurrection morn. Oh dear mother, how we miss thee...

When our days on earth are thru We will live with her for aye. There we'll meet you precious mother, There we'll clasp glad hands...

once more. When we've met to part no never. On that happy golden shore. Sadly missed by J. H. Mink and children. 341-p

By Alfred Sparks, Jr.

"Arise and be not afraid" The words of wisdom that come down to us from the past often bring our mind to bear on our own lives and problems. They help us equip ourselves for what we need to recognize as part of life. There is joy in facing the future and yearning our minds for life's inevitable changes if we only remember to be not afraid. Even adversity is a good teacher, for it is through the successful meeting of problems that we learn how to solve future ones. Responsibility and trouble can be used to bring rewards that lead us to a better understanding of ourselves and the world around us. So let us all recognize that "into each life some rain must fall" and let us not hesitate to meet that rain, face to face, knowing full well we will not be afraid of it, and that ultimately it will be to our advantage to have gotten drenched by the sorrows of life. To encourage the sun is bound to shine on us again.

Relief for Kentucky's Coal Industry

LEXINGTON, Ky., May 11—The coal industry, victim of an acute economic straits, is pleading with the federal government to help cure its ills by adopting a policy to encourage the use of coal.

The industry says it must sell $2,000,000 more coal each year to survive. It has a long list of ways it explained that it would like to prevent the loss of jobs in America's best industries.

Details of the industry's troubles and proposals for their solution were explained here today by representatives from West Virginia, Kentucky, Pennsylvania, Ohio, and New York and Washington.

When coal mines close, they pointed out, there is a corresponding reduction in other parts of the American economy, for coal miners do not have jobs can't buy products of other industries.

And the railroads suffer, for coal is their most profitable traffic, the spokesman said. Coal makes possible the steel industry, which in turn supports the oil and gas industries, they said, and it aids in large quantities, and it aids in large quantities, and it aids in large quantities...

Coal is essential during wartime, but when war comes again a reduced coal industry would make it harder for the United States to produce the expanded production of war materials.

Limit imports of foreign residual oil. Residual oil is a "fair basis" with the price of oil and coal. Now gas is so cheap that there is a great demand for it and the supply will be exhausted too soon, the coal spokesman contended. 1. Require use of coal, where it is available, in government buildings and installations here and abroad. For example, the coal people pointed out the steam plant at Oak Ridge, Tenn., right in the heart of the coal country, uses gas as better fuel.

2. Sponsor policies to limit freight rates on coal. Current rates exceed mine prices, and they have been steadily increasing. 3. Re-examine government lending policies to promote the use of coal where feasible. The Federal Housing Administration gives higher values to homes heated by gas and oil than to those heated by coal. In addition, the government lends money in many fields and it makes granting of loans conditional on using coal where feasible.

4. Encourage consolidation of producing companies and selling agencies. 5. Discontinue government subsidies to development of steam plants fueled by atomic pile. "Public utility steam plants generating electricity represent one of the only ways to develop power available to coal. It will be a tragedy if the coal is now depraved of such market as a result of government-sponsored research and development."

6. Establish regular channels of communication between the government and the industry at cabinet level. The oil industry and the State Department have worked together for many years, coal industry spokesmen said. Members of the committee that met with Sen. Cooper to talk to the Interior Department were Eugene F. Cooper of Lexington, president of the Kentucky Coal Corporation and president of the National Coal Association, Inc.; Dewey Daniel, Hazard, president of the South-East Kentucky Coal Company; Paul H. Hays, president of the West Kentucky Coal Company; Rolla D. Cooney, president of the West Virginia Coal Corporation and president of the Coal Exporters Association of the United States; W. B. Jackson, Greensburg, Pa., vice president of the Jamison Coal and Coke Company; Joseph E. Moody, Washington, president of the Southern Coal and Coke Association; Fred Polster, Indiana, Pa., president of the Coal Corporation and vice president of the Pittsburgh Coal Corporation; John R. South, New York City, president of the South

12. Re-examine government lending policies to promote the use of coal where feasible. The Federal Housing Administration gives higher values to homes heated by gas and oil than to those heated by coal. In addition, the government lends money in many fields and it makes granting of loans conditional on using coal where feasible.

40 years to make the team...

Mighty Casey swung a bat made of straight-grained, well-seasoned wood. So do today's big leaguers. It takes 40 years to grow ash or hickory trees that produce wood of baseball-bat quality. While it takes less time to grow pulpwood and some other products, tree crops do take years instead of months to mature. That's why tree farmers plan years ahead to assure a continuous supply of logs. They raise trees as crops.

A True Farm is private forest land growing repeated timber crops for use who are vitally interested in the conservation of the natural resources of Rockcastle County.

Navarre Waives Examining Trial, Held To Grand Jury

Packed courtroom listens in suspense to five witnesses in the examining trial before county judge Walter Sowder.

A packed courtroom of eager spectators, anxious to hear every word from the lips of the five witnesses in the examining trial of Jack Navarre, were kept in suspense during the hour long testimony before Judge Walter Sowder last Saturday afternoon. An added suspense came when the county attorney Clarence Carter appeared in the courtroom and announced that the walls and ceiling below in his office were "popping an cracking" due to the heavy weight on the courtroom floor.

When the trial was over Judge Sowder said that "this is one of the most serious crimes ever countered by this court. Only two persons had custody of the child. There is no doubt the child was beaten to death."

After the trial the judge gave an order to the sheriff to deliver Navarre to the jail of the south of Pulaski County where he is now being held until he will appear before the grand jury in the third week out bond.

The witnesses called were Billy McFargue, who undertakes from Mount Vernon, Jack Turpin, coroner of Madison County, Dr. Eugene Parr of Berea who performed the autopsy, Mrs. Doris Navarre, mother of the dead child and Mrs. Rose Eversole, mother of Jack Turpin.

Long before the judge took his seat the courtroom was packed to capacity. Every aisle was filled and the crowd overflowed into the hallway and down the steps and onto every window sill. People came from everywhere to witness the trial. In the midst of the trial the report came in that the floor was weakening and it was then that the sheriff cleared the aisle and kept persons from crowding in. Whether there was real danger of the floor giving way was not doubted by the county officials who believed the strain was too heavy for the old courthouse. At several places small cracks appeared in the walls and ceilings. Many went out very reluctantly but there was no disturbance nor did anyone sense any panic.

The first witness to be called to stand was Billy McFargue who prepared the body of the dead child for burial. Upon questioned as to describe the condition of the child's body Mr. McFargue stated that the cheeks were blue, there were skin abrasions at several places, small gash on the left side near the collar bone. This gash was about one-half inch wide and 1 1/4 inch long. There was another bruise under the chin. There were some holes in the face as though made by a sharp instrument. There was a hole in the right temple of the child's head. The two large toenails were gone and looked as though they were pulled out. There was also a bruise on the abdomen about 3 x 3 1/4 inches in size.

Were these things pronounced? Asked the attorney. "Yes, very obvious," said the witness. The defending attorney, J. B. Bowman then asked the witness about the pliers which were delivered to the jailer. The witness said that Mrs. Rose Eversole's home and delivered them to the jailer. It was at this point that Mr. Clarence Carter entered the room and announced that there was danger of the floor giving way because of the heavy weight on it.

The second witness to call was Jack Turpin, coroner of Madison County, who testified that he saw the dead child at about 11:30 A. M. on S. T. at the Berea College Hospital and that he ordered an autopsy made of the corpse. He described some of the wounds on the child's cheek, both the right and the left, and said that there were multiple lacerations on the membrane of the child's mouth. The stomach of the child was greatly extended. When asked about the findings the witness stated that there was a split in the wall of the stomach about 1 1/2 x 3 inches in size. A substance like a milky fluid was found. The abdomen was discolored and the bruises were "very visible". The witness gave the coroner a list of 14 items, 13 1/4 in. slightly infected. The two large toe nails were gone but no infection had started in the abdomen was discolored and when opened a great rush of air came from it. It was a case of acute peritonitis. There was a rather large bruise on the abdomen and a rupture in the wall of the stomach. When the witness was asked what caused that ruptured wall he stated that a violent blow could have made it.

"The child was very ill when I first saw it." The toe nails were probably pulled off two days ago. The lungs of the child were congested. Pneumonia had set in.

The fourth witness was the mother of the dead child, Mrs. Doris Navarre. She is now 17 years of age and she was married to Jack Navarre on Oct. 17, 1953 and that she was the mother of Wanda Elaine Baker and also stated that the child was born out of wedlock on May 4, 1952, and that the father was Floyd Baker, present address unknown. Her second child was born Feb. 22, 1954, whose father is Jack Navarre. At this time she lived with her mother Mrs. Rosie Eversole at Orlando, and later moved to the double house over the Bill Allen home.

The witness admitted that the couple had several fights and that the trouble was over the "child", and that he was "jealous", and that "I think more of her than of him".

The packed courtroom during the examining trial of Jack Navarre last Saturday afternoon before Judge Walter Sowder. A few minutes after this picture was taken the report was given that the floor of the courtroom is about to fall in. The sheriff ordered the aisle cleared and there was no evidence of any panic.

Hospital Approved Tentatively

The State Hospital Advisory Board gave tentative approval to three new hospitals and one of those included is that for Rockcastle County. The other two hospitals on the tentative list are a new hospital for Ohio County at Hartford with 30 beds costing approximately 450,000; a new Estill County Hospital at Irvine with 22 beds, costing $360,000. The one for Rockcastle County is to have 22 beds and will cost $360,000. The county would receive federal aid to one-half the cost while the balance will have to be made up by the county.

A bond issue has already been passed by this county to provide the necessary funds for the site and the building.

Rev. Hall is a veteran of 40 years behind the pulpit and by much prayer from those who love the Lord we are looking forward to one of the best revivals this church has ever had. Pray much, bring the whole family and help us to make this one of the best pre-pentecost revivals the church has ever known. The church where you are only a stranger once.

Surplus Food Distributed On Three Days

County judge Walter Sowder did a lot of sweating for the poor people of this county last Tuesday. It wasn't so hot on Wednesday or Thursday, but on that first day the judge had his hands full. He personally supervised the distribution of the food. He cut the hunks of cheese into thirds or quarters and it took no little effort to divide that cheese for over three hundred families. That is the number that were served on the first day. The judge said he never worked so hard on an eight-hour stretch. His shirt was soaked with perspiration and his brow had beads of sweat.

Helping him were his son, Chas. Sowder and David Stallsworth. In the office of the county clerk he never worked so hard on an eight-hour stretch. His shirt was soaked with perspiration and his brow had beads of sweat.

Spending A Day Underground With the Miners

Coal mining in the Brush Creek section doing very well.

ADAMS TRANSFERRED

I spent a day underground under the earth where it was such dark and cool, where I crawled on my hands and knees in order to reach the very end of a main shaft. I went there at the invitation of Mr. James Childs, one of the operators of the Brush Creek mine.

The trip from my office to the mine was made in a coal truck over Brush Creek road and thence to Orlando over the highway which at one time was the bed of a creek. The coal truck was Mr. Jim O'Mara who is a truck driver, delivers coal from the mine to many customers and incidentally is a son-in-law of the elder C. H. Childs, owner of the mine.

At a point on the highway about a mile from Brush Creek we made a sharp turn to the right and another sharp turn to the left and we were in a forest land a deep gulley between the trees. The trees were Great Big trees stood there.

Up and up we went, juggling along until we reached the tip of the mine on top of the hill. Then we made a sharp turn to the right and another sharp turn and finally reached the opening of the mine. Here we met Mr. C. H. Childs and James Vanzant, repairing a huge chain saw used in cutting underground. The electric train, a few minutes the electric train came out of the mine, pulling a car of coal. These were the cars loaded on a loading elevator and from there a truck took the coal to the tipple.

In a few minutes we were ready to go underground. I got on one of those flat cars. A small blanket was spread on the floor so I wouldn't get my newly pressed pants too dirty, but I should have known better. Well, didn't dare to sit down but had to be on my hands and knees, and keep my head way down so I wouldn't hurt the roof of the shaft! Finally we reached the end of the tunnel and there had to step off the trolley car and crawl back in to the mine, over cutting bars and conveyors belts until we were right smack against a solid wall of black gold. Here I took the first shot. Then we awaited a few minutes and off went one blast of dynamite and then another and another. It wasn't so bad, just a little shaky at first. I knew beforehand that there was going to be some blasting. So I was expecting it. These blasts loosened a block of coal that had been undercut and thereby broke the vein of coal away from the sandstone ceiling. Immediately following this blast came the miners and shovelled the loosened coal into moving conveyors which carried the coal to the trolley cars. This system eliminates all the digging and heavy lifting that used to be in vogue before mines were fully mechanized.

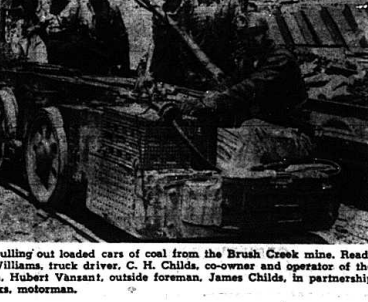

The coal vein is approximately 33 inches in depth sometimes it varies a little. The (Continued on page four)

I Would Rather Have A Rose

I would rather have a rose,
From the garden of a friend

Than to have the choicest flowers,
When my stay on earth must end.
I would rather have a pleasant word,
In kindness said to me,
Than flattery when my heart is still,
And life has ceased to be,
I would rather have a loving smile,
From friends I know are true,
Than tears shed around my bier.
When this world I bid adieu,

RAMBLINGS

A visit to a coal mine is an experience that one will not likely forget. I am going to have a lot of respect for the man who wears that little light on his cap and whose cheeks and nose and hands are covered with dust. His clothes are spotted and are grimy with dust. But the man who is used to the life in the bowels of the earth makes nothing of it. He even likes it. He develops many years of his life to it and probably would rather do that kind of work than any other work in the open field or in a hot, suffocating shop.

Here in an industry, right in the midst that is driving and free from the terrible depression that has hit the Eastern Kentucky coal mine. A light that tells something of the coal miners' troubles is told in this week's issue. It is worth reading and perhaps some of you can find a way out of our economic trouble in the coal industry.

The surplus food distributed this week to needy families in this county is giving some physical relief to a large number who deserve to be helped with this government food. This is food gathered over a period of years by the Federal Government for the purpose of upholding prices of certain commodities. Now it being distributed by welfare agencies in many parts of the country, especially in the mountain area of Eastern Kentucky where hundreds of families are the victims of the sick coal industry.

It would not be out of reason to make a careful case study of each person who received this food in Rockcastle County and make certain that all such cases were deserving of government help.

They were none the worse for the delay. They are expected to return from their trip today and be home for graduation exercises Friday evening.

Crash Kills Reynolds

An auto-truck crash at Tyner resulted in the death of Walker R. Reynolds, 77, member of the State Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Committee and long-time agricultural worker.

Reynolds was named last July 1 to the State committee, which administers price-support and conservation programs. He was Jackson County judge when appointed to the office.

A resident of Tyner, Reynolds served three years as County agricultural agent in Jackson.

Clay and Owsley counties and for 27 years was Jackson County agent.

He once was supervisor in 19 counties for the Extension Service of the University of Kentucky, later was special agent for the service, and served a year on the State Board of Agriculture.

Survivors include three daughters, Mrs. Nannie Hayes, Madison, Ind., Mrs. H. L. Hignite, Paint Lick, and Mrs. Homer Hamlin, McKee, and six sons, Coleman and D. A. Reynolds, London; Donald Reynolds, Tyner; R. S. Reynolds, Somerset; Lester Reynolds, Chicago, and Capt. W. R. Reynolds, Jr., Honolulu.

County officials said the accident occurred about 8 A. M. The truck driver escaped injury.

night by the screams of Wendy and that she saw her husband standing beside the bed with a pair of pliers pulling off the two toenails from Wendy's feet.

There was other trouble over the child, and when the mother threatened to take her away Navarre was quoted as saying "I'd rather see her dead than have my mother have her." The witness claimed that he "beat her and beat the child." He hit her with all his might right on the stomach.

When asked what he used to hit the child she stated that it "looked like an iron pipe about 2 feet long," and that he "knocked her breath out."

"What happened then," asked the attorney?

"He went out of the house," All this happened the latter part of the week, and it was not until Monday May 17 that the child was taken to the Hospital. The child died next day on Tuesday forenoon.

The defendant's attorney then questioned Mrs. Navarre and wanted to know whether any other doctor had examined the child. The witness stated that Dr. J. F. Pennington examined the child's mouth and stated that the child had a cold and that it had the thrush in its mouth. The attorney also wanted to know why she did not report to the law soner. She stated that she was "afraid of my husband" and that he threatened that she had "better not get a warrant." At this point the witness broke down and wept. She stated that "I loved my child dearly." "My husband" she said "bought her candy, but never bought her a dress or shoes."

The last witness was Mrs. Rosie Eversole, the mother of Doris. She told the court of her visit to the jail in the morning of Wednesday May 19th and how she "put my arms around" and that she told her to "tell the truth even if it puts the world afire."

In the previous testimony Navarre had stated that the child injured itself when she fell from the steps at the house. This the mother denied.

After the examining trial Navarre waived his own examination and he was taken to Pulaski County in custody of that jail where he will wait for his appearance before the grand jury which will meet in July. He was not allowed any bond.

MINING STORY

Coal breaks lose in big hauls, evidence of a very good grade of coal. Most of the coal is sold locally by trucks. The Kentucky Utilities purchases all the slack that the mine produces. This is hauled to Tyrone where the K. U. has a huge generating plant.

The mine produces from 100 to 200 tons of coal a day. Electricity for the mine is produced from a large 130 H. P. Diesel engine. This engine produces enough electricity to furnish all the power for the innumerable motors such as the locomotive, the conveyor belts, the chain cutting machine, the ventilating fan and loading tippie at the mine.

HEALTH LETTER

"Early immunization is one of the most important things parents can do for their children, but unless booster shots are continued at regular intervals parents may face the danger of communicable diseases at a later date," Walker Owens, M. D., Health Department, stated.

Immunization for diphtheria, whooping cough and tetanus (triple antigen) may be given at the same time. The best age for triple antigen is during infancy, from two to six months. A booster to continue protection should also be given every one to two years.

"Many people do not understand that a booster shot is not the original dosage, but a necessary, follow-up dosage later to insure a permanent resistance against these communicable diseases and tetanus," Dr. Owens added.

Immunization against typhoid fever should also be given by the time the infant is six months old, and then followed up by a booster each year. A smallpox vaccination should be given to children under one year of age, and then at six and twelve years of age. "For that matter," Dr. Owens said, "a smallpox vaccination should be obtained every five to seven years."

"Communicable diseases are an ever-present threat," Dr. Owens stressed, "and parents must be vigilant and not backslide in their efforts to protect our young Kentuckians. The best advice is to not delay but see your family physician or local health department today."
