Body Found Buried Near Livingston Identified

Woman's husband arrested after returning to Michigan with fifteen-year-old bride.

Police in Detroit, Mich., are holding a questioning a man believed to be responsible for the death of the woman, whose decomposed body was found August 21 near Livingston.

The body has been tentatively identified as that of the man's wife, Mrs. Verlie Aubine Morse, 48. Identification was made by means of a lock of hair and articles of clothing held at the House Funeral Home in Livingston.

The husband, Claude W. Morse, aroused suspicion when he returned to Detroit with a 15-year-old bride, Eudena Foster. He said he was with the girl while visiting relatives in Tennessee.

When questioned on the whereabouts of the first Mrs. Morse, the 44-year-old carpenter admitted that his first wife was dead, but denied killing her. He told police she was with him at his car while they were on their way to Indiana, and that he "didn't have put the body in a coffin."

The body was found in a wooded land between Livingston and London, about 40 or 50 feet from the road on the banks of Parker's Creek in Laurel County. A log had been rolled over the body, along with branches and leaves. Laurel County officers reported.

Morse first told officers he put his wife's body in the trunk of the car. When he was questioned when he lifted her body in the car, he said, and he left her in the front seat for a while. Then, after changing his bloody clothes, he transferred the body to the trunk.

On further questioning Morse told police he also had dropped a body in an abandoned well near Houshale. He said that he and police there began a search for the body.

Identification of the body found near here was made by a brother of Mrs. Morse, Roy Ausburn of LaFollette, Tenn., and a nephew, Lee Padgett of Michigan, who made a trip to London in company with LaFollette Police Chief, Willie Chapman. Ausburn had received two letters from Morse, in which he expressed fear that he would be tried for murder. In the first letter, Morse stated that Mrs. Morse had left home "and would not return."

The couple had been married 23 years. Positive identification of the body as that of Mrs. Morse was made late this week after further investigation. The body was exhumed Wednesday and Laurel County Coroner Ed Bryant of London later reported that Mrs. Morse died of strangulation.

Officers investigating the case reported that Mrs. Morse probably was killed in her home. It was reconvinced that she was strangled with a nylon stocking, officers said.

First Graders "Honor" Parents Joining P. T. A.

Parents of the first graders in the Mt. Vernon School might be surprised if they could see the children, though, it's a very interesting game.

The first graders whose parents have joined the Parent-Teachers Association, have drawn pictures of their mothers and fathers to be displayed on the walls of the school room. It's all being done to promote membership in the P. T. A.

As soon as a child's mother or father joins the P. T. A., the parent's picture is added to the first grade collection. The pictures are framed in a big cardboard shoe, like the nursery rhyme "The Old Woman Who Lived In A Shoe."

The children are quite proud of their record, as the pictures of 30 parents now are seen peering out of the big shoe, and more are being added each week. All parents not now members of the P. T. A. are urged to join as soon as possible so their pictures, too, can be added to the gallery.

About the best news that I have heard for some time was the report that a new telephone system was to be built in Rockcastle County to replace the present antiquated and inadequate one. This should be cause for rejoicing to everyone in the county. For ever so many years we have been struggling to make improvements in our communications system without avail. Hundreds of businessmen and farmers a long time ago subscribed for a telephone system expressing their desire to become members of the new Co-op so that they may have a telephone in their homes...

CROSSWORD PUZZLE

Now that we have the assurance of a new telephone system can readily see how extremely useful a new telephone system will be. Likewise it will be a help to induce new industries to come into this community. An adequate communications system is clearly one of the essential requisites to any progressive community.

The McCarty "Senate" recommended by Peter McCarty Committee appears to me rather one-sided, and even useless. Those who followed the first investigation and saw the procedure by television or who heard the trial over the radio seemed to have been impressed quite contrary to that which we are to believe from the report just now issued. Whatever the senate will do on November 8 will be a matter of little consequence except to fetter its own power and efficacy.

I just read the book entitled "A Man Called Peter" and I wish that that book could be placed into the hands of every minister and everyone who anticipates to do pastoral work. The book is the story of a man Marshall, who for a short time was the chaplain of the United States Senate, and became so well known for his boldness that senators scrambled to be there on time to hear him, a matter quite unusual. He was a personal friend of Senator Arthur Vandenberg who called him "Domitie," a colloquial and endearing expression. Sometimes he called him just "Peter."

GENUINE CHINGILLAS

Some months back I wrote about the evils of gossip, and the good advice of our mother when she said "If you can't say anything nice about somebody, don't say anything at all." I have since come across a wonderful nursery rhyme, quoted by William Edward Norris Thirby Hall, which is equally appropriate for adults as for children. IS BARNYARD MANURE OLD FASHIONED?

Many modern farmers who don't have any to spread may think manure is old-fashioned. But it is not. It is the best fertilizer of good stable manure can work wonders. There are many farmers who never used any other type of fertilizer. But they, as well as the many younger farmers are finding that manure alone is not enough. One big problem is getting really high quality manure on the fields. Much of it throughout the country is wasted by leaching. When left to heat in piles, the ammonia escapes. In the best possible condition, it is an unbalanced fertilizer. In poor condition, it does little more than add organic matter. It seemed to work better for our ancestors because the newer soils they farmed didn't need as much fertilization. They were often satisfied with less quality and quantity growth than the present generation. We know today that superphosphate must be added for best results. This helps to balance the NPK ratio. When added in the barn superphosphate conserves nitrogen. Many farmers also spread pulverized limestone in the dairy barns. This helps absorb the liquids and improves the manure as well as improving the appearance of the barn.

Few farms have enough manure to go around. To stretch the amount, excess bedding is often used. This absorbs all the moisture which contains much of the nitrogen plus other plant nutrients. Best results are obtained by top dressing pastures and meadows. When used in conjunction with limestone and 9-14-14 or 9-20-20, good response is often seen in legumes. The limestone is important in most areas of the country to replace the leached calcium and magnesium. By making the soil less acid, more of the elements in the manure and the soil become available for plant use. Other essential elements in the soil are thought to be unlocked for plant use by some special properties of manure. Make it a point to use manure more wisely this year. When treated and used properly, it isn't out of date.

Donna Lee: Mrs. Hurl will be remembered as the former, Miss Mildred Blanton. Mr. Clarence Brant of Corbin spent the week end with his brother, Mr. Andy Bryant. Mrs. Rebecca Roberts spent the latter part of last week with Mr. and Mrs. Ed Moore of Brodhead. Mr. and Mrs. Jim Rash attended the homecoming at Nigger Creek Sunday. We are glad to know that Mr. Rash is able to be out again. Miss Christine and Lena Blanton spent Sunday afternoon with Miss Mary and Mondell Barnett. THE BIBLE SPEAKS

Man's Eternal 'Why' Lesson for Oct. 3, 1954

DURING the next three months the Sunday school lessons in the "uniform" series dealt with in this column, are drawn from the wisdom and the worship of the ancient Hebrews, as found in those four not too well known books, Job, Proverbs, Psalms and Ecclesiastes. Parts of all but the first of these are known by heart everywhere, but much of them is unfamiliar to Dr. Foreman, during these three months to read these four books from start to finish. An average of two and a half chapters a day would do it. Why not?

More Questions Than Answers It is a sort of well-worn saying of preachers that the Bible has answers to all our questions. But there is one book in the Bible that has more questions than answers. The book of Job. It is one of the greatest books in the world, and it will always appeal to men everywhere because it puts in a powerful way the very questions that the best people ask. Job himself was one of these 'best people'. He is called 'blameless and upright, one who feared God and turned away from evil.' God even speaks of him with some pride. But Job did not have all the answers. He thought he had. He was the questioner. His best friends thought, and do doubt he himself thought, that this suffering was always to him a sign that God is punishing the sufferer. This idea is still a common one. But Job felt there must be something wrong with God. For he was a man of great piety. He would not have wished on his worst enemy. He lost his fortune which was his pride and his workmen, and his family all within a few days and finally he lost his health.

His friends thought that understood that suffering, they thought, was a sure sign of sin. So Job must have been a great sinner. In his intention, at least. But Job was not a sinner. He had never been a great sinner. So he called the great 'WHY?' that men have raised since Job and after him have raised. Why does God let good people suffer? 'But there is no justice' It is not the mere painfulness of the world that weighs on us. It is the sense of the meaning of things. Pain and affliction that is 'coming to' people does not bother our minds much, not even when it hits us ourselves. If you have a toothache and you know it is because you have indulged in too much candy and soft drinks, you may cry about the toothache but you know all the same, that you have nothing to cry about. You know it coming. If a cruel and murderous kidnapper dies in the gas chamber you do not feel greatly upset about it. You may even feel glad that he is going to die. You know him as much as he has hurt others. But if a good friend of yours dies, you feel great distress, because you cannot believe that your friend has earned such a pain. And if you lift your eyes and look out over the world especially if you know something about history, you will see so much frustration of the good, so much prospering of evil down through the centuries, that you wonder sometimes how men can believe there is a God.

'But I Cannot See' If the world is the evidence as slight concern, which as we are by nature, we do wake up when trouble walks through our own doors. There must have been a good many people in trouble whom Job had known, but it took his own affliction to jolt him awake. We gather from his friends' remarks that he could speak cheerfully to those in distress, but when his own trouble hit, he was a different man. Just when he needed most to talk with God, God did not seem to be anywhere near. The world is full of people who feel that the good man, the believer in God, can sometimes be more puzzled by it than any one else. Because the believer feels that the world ought not to be like this, he is all the more distressed by what he sees. The better he is, the more he believes in God, the more he is distressed by it. It was Job who asked the terrible questions, not his weakly pious friends. Yet 'Job did not' fold his hands and acquiesce.'
