Miss Ruby Huff was the guest of Miss Minnie Ballinger Sunday afternoon. County Agents Notes

The introduction of "virus-free" plants a few years ago is considered the greatest single advance in strawberry production within the last century. Increased yields, in areas of virus infection, have ranged from 200 to 100 percent from the use of "virus-free" plants. Much like the improvement that has been made in the tobacco program, a farmer can set one acre and get the same production that he got off of two acres before. This makes his total expenses much less even though the plants will cost him more. Continued improvement is sure to come from the plant breeding programs now going on. The Kentucky program is attempting to go one step further than "virus-freeness" in keeping the spread of root-knot nematode to a minimum. Setting virus-free fields in 1957 for production in 1958-59 and 60 looks like a sound adventure. And it is much more sound if the best plants available are used. Send for Seedlings Now For Kentucky Retesting Slightly more than 8,000,000 seedlings are available now for Kentucky farmers for retesting. The program was started by James Newman, Kentucky Agricultural Extension Service forester. This is slightly higher than for 1956. Newman says: however, estimated demand for this year is 9,500,000 seedlings. Newman noted some types of seedlings are in short supply. They are white pine and short-leaf pine; Scotch pine for Christmas tree plantings are scarce. All trees are priced at $7 per thousand except Scotch pine, $10 a thousand. Places orders early. Newman advises; requests are approved in the order received by district foresters. See county agents, district foresters, or Soil Conservation Service technicians for proper type of seedlings. The minimum order is 100 trees, and seedlings bought must be used for reforestation or erosion control, none being allowed for shade or ornamental purposes. Newman said shipments will start about Feb. 1 and conclude about April 1. Most trees are shipped to a central point in the county, although a few are sent parcel post on special request. It takes about 1,000 trees per acre when the seedlings are planted at 8-foot spacings. Newman noted financial assistance may be possible by application through the ASC office. Likewise, some of the trees probably will be distributed through the conservation reserve of the Soil Bank.

State Foundation Program Boosts Local High School

NEW INSTRUMENTS at the Mt. Vernon school include a slide projector. High school girls using the slide and microscope in a science class are Lilya Parsons, Thelma Payne, Elizabeth Payne and Barbara Pinnas.

By Ray McClure From The Lexington Leader

Some schools need more space. Some need more money. Some need more teachers. But Mt. Vernon Independent Grade and High School oddly enough, doesn't need anything particularly.

Like most schools, Mt. Vernon could use a few things, but it can get along nicely with what it has on hand today.

For one thing, the school could use another gymnasium, but the one it has had since the school was constructed in the latter '80s still serves the purpose with a little improving. Anyway, the state has a gymnasium on the school's property, but so even a new gymnasium will be available before very long.

The reason for the excellent physical and financial outlook of the small Rockcastle County school, is the state's Minimum Foundation Program—a program that has boosted education all stock over the state.

This year, the state allowed Mt. Vernon $74,000, some $34,000 over the previous year. With the added over 7 MVEIS officials immediately hired more teachers which means fewer pupils in classes, gave a 30 per cent salary increase to personnel; constructed a new industrial arts building; formed a physical education department; and a music department.

In order to get an increase in money from the state, the school had to show that it had done the best before the horse. If the school was to get all the funds the state allows on a unit basis, the school had to participate 100 per cent in the Foundation Program. Mt. Vernon did not participate 100 per cent last year, because it needed physical education and industrial arts classes.

Anticipating what the school could get in dollars by initiating these classes, Superintendent Clyde Laville and the board hired Johnny Machal of Mt. Vernon for physical education, and Larry Travis of Versailles for industrial arts. The state that recognized the departments and the school received the increase.

New Arts Building The new industrial arts building, which the school has now opened, was constructed with $20,000 in state money, which will be redeemed through money from the capital outlay fund allowed under the Foundation Program.

The money Mt. Vernon, and any other school, gets from capital outlay is figured on a unit basis. The state pays $400 for each educational unit. Mt. Vernon has 23.9 educational units, meaning the state pays the school $9,560 for new construction or improvements.

State officials are very happy with the Mt. Vernon school. Laville said a state official remarked that Mt. Vernon is (Continued on page 4)

There are a number of types and degrees of courage, but courage intensified by hope or, if you prefer—faith, has greater depth and a spiritual uplift and a shade less tortuous, in any great emergency to depend on raw courage alone can be an unnecessarily bitter and exhausting experience. How much better it would be to have the comforting reinforcement of sincere and heart felt faith.

"HOPE IS THE BETTER HALF OF COURAGE." Now and then in our lives we face circumstances where courage is a welcome ally. It may be in the making of a big decision, in the need to struggle back from the effects of a great misfortune. Whatever the circumstance, courage plays a major role in our ability to eventually and successfully see any crisis

Plowing, Clean Cultivating Can Destroy Johnson Grass

Summer plowing of Johnson grass stubble, followed by clean cultivation of the infested fields at 2-week intervals, was quite effective in destroying root-stocks, the below-ground part which makes the plant live from year to year.

That's the report of Joe F. Freeman, UK Agricultural Experiment Station weed control specialist, who tried several methods of cultivation in a 1955 test.

Freeman noted he was able to reduce root-stock presence enough to grow corn successfully the following year (1956). But pointed out that he did not completely eradicate the pest. Johnson grass seed stayed in the ground and germinated the next year. He also noted that the 1955 summer was dry, which made cultivation more effective. In wet summers, it would not be nearly so effective.

Freeman said he got 100-percent control of root-stocks with the four following treatments:

- 1) Letting the Johnson grass get 2 feet high before breaking the land and starting the clean cultivation every two weeks; barley was planted on the plot in the fall.

- 2) Removing Johnson grass at the late bloom stage ahead of plowing, then clean-cultivating every two weeks, and planting barley in the fall.
- 3) Removing the top growth of Johnson grass twice, each time as it reached "boot stage," then plowing, clean-cultivating every two weeks, and planting barley in the fall.
- 4) Removing top growth twice, plowing and clean-cultivating only once, then planting alfalfa in August.

For the clean-cultivating, Freeman used a field cultivator with overlapping flat sweeps. On untreated "check" plots (not plowed or cultivated at all) the root-stocks averaged 4.5 tons per acre in weight.

However, Johnson grass seed lying dormant in the soil on the test plots in 1955, germinated in 1956, Freeman said. These new plants began to grow root-stocks within 6 to 8 weeks after they appeared. At the end of the 1956 summer, the land again was lightly infested with Johnson grass.

Clipping Johnson grass, Freeman continued, to stimulate grazing, seemed to reduce the root-stock yields on some of the untreated plots to about 2.5 tons per acre, a significantly lower figure than the tonnage on the untreated plots.

WE GIVE UP This issue of the Signal gives us, to speak to modern journalism, that it, objectively has finally won out. For the first time since the first issue of the Signal, we are going to eliminate the mention of WE from the news columns.

We'll miss the effect all these years. Such expressions as "We're sorry to hear—" and "We extend our sympathy—" will be gone from the front page, county correspondents news, and other places. We have a reason. We can get us into many unfortunate situations. It is an opinion word, and the public knows so. WE should never be used unless accompanied by the writer's name over an article. Only a few weeks these days use the word and they are fast disappearing. As the Signal nears the 3,000 circulation mark, we are inclined to try to be more consistent, precise and careful. We believe we should operate under a closer publication policy—a policy that has as its goal, to report as much news as possible as soon as possible after it happens; and to gain the respect and approval of our subscribers. We know you'll understand.

Lawful Tests Road Bond Issue

A lawsuit to test legality of Kentucky's $150,000,000 road-bond issue is pending in Franklin Circuit Court. Kentucky voters approved the bond issue at last year's election by a margin of 8 to 1. The 1956 General Assembly has authorized submitting the proposal for a vote of the people. The suit is the one by which the bond issue's constitutionality is to be tested ultimately by the Court of Appeals. Kentucky's highest tribunal. The legal test is being made before the bond issue is offered for sale. Under the legislative act, bonds would be sold in blocks of not less than $50,000 each as needed. Money from the issue would be used to match federal aid in the expanded roadbuilding program planned by Gov. A. B. Chandler. Money from the issue would be used to match future federal aid.

agencies and organizations not actively participating in the project will be briefed and asked to support it.

The program is to develop natural and human resources of the state. Emphasis is on educational, social and industrial progress. Mike Duff, coordinator for Kentucky Agricultural Extension Service special programs, said: "We want to tell people what progress we've already made in these various areas; and we want to tap the resources of agencies and organizations not originally included in the project."

Going Concern

A "GOING CONCERN" is one that is not in a liquidating position. It is one that is still in business. It is one that is still in a liquidating position. It is one that is still in business. It is one that is still in a liquidating position. It is one that is still in business.

Dr. Foreman for the Union, St. Paul had a concern for Gentiles, mothers have been in the red. Now the church, if it is the true Body of Christ, ought to share his concerns. We know what it was that concerned him—people, the "multitudes," the masses as we now speak of them. The church ought to have—and the church does care for its needs and conditions of men. A church without the human, human concerns which Jesus had, is not what Christ intended.

Furthermore, the church, as far as it is a Christian, ought to be a going concern, not only a thing, but one—not only a praying one either. Plenty of churches are "in" to "save" things on earth. The preacher preaches about "lost" people but nobody gets out to hunt for them—perhaps the preacher himself. The members talk to one another about the dreadful state of the world, but they do not discuss about it. Missionaries! What's that? The fact that their denomination is actually going into the red of the earth, and begs them for help, does not get through to their minds. Maybe the preacher's fault again? They have a concern for the lost state of the world, but it isn't a going concern; it's a talking concern, a talking concern, nothing alive. Is the church concerned about its red? Is there any concern at all? Longer because it isn't a going concern—it has no red, neither, and it never goes anywhere.

No Mission, No Church. The first Christian church was the twelve apostles, and it was a going concern. Jesus did not plan for any of them to remain behind. The discipline he gave them are not now followed by many members of a society that has much success. Circumstances also Christian strategy. But all I suppose these sects can do is offered out to be when Jesus said: "He who comes to me and who believes in me shall never be hungry or thirsty, nor will he ever go out or come out." He who comes to me and who believes in me shall never be hungry or thirsty, nor will he ever go out or come out. He who comes to me and who believes in me shall never be hungry or thirsty, nor will he ever go out or come out.

But their name is gone without a trace. It is in effect to the closest friends. You have been with me enough. You have heard all you need to have learned all you need to learn—for now. Go out now and change people, change the world, in my name! If they had refused, if Jesus could have found no one willing to go, there never would have been a Christian church. And if the church, which is to be missionary today, it will become a shell, a relic, a spirituality without life or usefulness.

"I Wouldn't Be Here If..." Not everybody can become a foreign missionary. Indeed the Twelve were sent out first to a region smaller than Wisconsin. But there are various ways in which the church can go out and send out. There is a man who has found his life's chief work and interest in developing the moral and spiritual atmosphere of the schools in his state. He said not long ago to a group of religious workers: "I wouldn't be here if my church didn't send me." What he did do is outside the church he works through public agencies of the State. But his inspiration comes from his church, and his church would not have inspired him and sent him if it had not had that kind of a church. When the church as an organization cannot go its members, stirred and supported by the Spirit of God, to live the life everywhere, in the name of Jesus.

REFRIGERATED BLANKET FOR USE IN HEART SURGERY is demonstrated by 27-year-old Harold Leachard, an ardent booster for the 1957 Heart Foundation. This blanket's use enables the heart to pump less rapidly, thus slowing circulation and enabling the surgeon to work in a relatively dry field after the heart is removed. This is one of the techniques in heart surgery which has benefited from research sponsored by the Heart Fund.
