Two Mt. Vernon youths learned Wednesday the meaning of the phrase "hot seat", and the seat was provided by a fire, the fire chief, the police chief and the county judge.

Lawrence Bales, 15, and Dannie Hanzel, 16, were in their "tree house" about 49 feet up in a sycamore tree, at the foot of Newcomb Avenue.

Somewhat a match got into the house, and somehow leaves on the floor caught fire. Instead of descending the tree, the youths climbed higher into the tree with the fire close on their ankles.

When firemen arrived, the tree and house were blazing, and a third youngster, Buddy Hanzel, was throwing rocks at the fire from the ground and yelling.

The boys were soaked with water, along with the tree, and were thrown to them. They descended the tree, waiting arms of Fire Chief John Cox, Police Chief Waldo Wilson and County Judge Walter Sowder.

They were reprimanded and sent home possibly to face another hot seat.

CASE BUILDS UP FOR FLUORIDATION

(In order to keep the public informed on issues of the day, particularly issues that have arisen locally, we re-print the following editorial from the Lexington Herald.)

A study by Louisville health officials shows a drop of 33.9 per cent in the average of decayed, missing or filled teeth of elementary school pupils who have been drinking fluoridated water for the past six years. Fluoridation of Louisville's water supply in 1951 thus may have already "saved" 274,850 teeth for the city's 115,000 elementary school children.

One of the major blessings of this age has been the discovery that a deficiency in fluorides in drinking water is the biggest cause of tooth decay, and tooth decay may rank second only to the common cold as the most universal disease suffered by mankind. A few communities have naturally fluoridated water, but most do not. Water from rivers and lakes usually is deficient in fluorides.

Dr. Louis I. Dublin, long associated with the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. as head of its statistical branch, recently completed a year's study on effects of water fluoridation. He found that adults aged 40 to 44 who have spent their lives in areas with naturally fluoridated water spend only three times as much on dental treatment as those who do not. In non-fluoridated communities, the average is 14. He found that tooth decay among children has declined 54 to 60 per cent in communities where artificial fluoridation has been practiced for 10 years or longer. Fluoridation does not benefit adults. It does its work while crowns of teeth are being formed, which takes place by the time a child is about eight years old.

The Louisville story is about the same as that of any city that has practiced fluoridation for the same length of time. Lexington's water has been fluoridated since April 26, 1954, and it is too soon to get much of a picture of results. However, it can be assumed, on the basis of the experience of other communities, that Lexington children's tooth troubles will have been reduced by nearly 60 per cent by 1964.

Unfortunately, only several hundred communities in the United States have fluoridated water. Kentucky has only 25. The scientific case for fluoridated water apparently is "water-tight," as Dr. Dublin points out, but still there are many who hold misgivings, mostly unfounded as far as scientific evidence seems to show. Most of the opposition is of about the same nature as that which confronted vaccination for smallpox and other diseases and for water chlorination when these disease-prevention steps were first introduced.

General acceptance of fluoridation no doubt will come with time. Its benefits seem so great, however, that this acceptance should be speeded up and encouraged wherever possible.

(Fluoridation of the Mt. Vernon water supply was an issue here about a year ago. The Mt. Vernon City Council tabled a motion to add fluoride to the city water until a later date.)

File Your Reports County Officials Told

State Auditor Mary Louise Fugate has issued a memorandum to county judges and one to county sheriffs and a third to all county officials explaining various items required to be reported. Each month you should pay into the county treasury the cost so collected with an itemized account and report the amount to the fiscal court, the Auditor explained.

County officials were told to make an accounting of their fees collected and disbursements at the close of the calendar year. "We are anxious to aid you in your report," Miss Fugate continued, "but we do not have enough auditors available to check up on you. It is your responsibility to file your reports." Officials responsible for having financial statements published and filed with this office must do so within 10 days after the close of the fiscal year.

Waterfowl Season

Kentucky's 70-day waterfowl season will open on Nov. 7 and continue through Jan. 15, the Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources Commission ruled yesterday. Shooting hours will be from one-half hour before sunrise until sunset, with the limit of ducks will be four a day with a possession limit of eight after two or more days of hunting. No wood ducks may be killed. The bag and possession limit for geese is five which may not include more than two Canadian or Canada subspecies.

The dove hunting season will open on Sept. 1 and continue through Oct. 31, with hunting permitted from noon until sunset. The bag and possession limit has been increased to ten. According to the federal regulations under which doves are hunted, these birds may not be taken by the aid of salt or shrike or unhooked corn, wheat or other grain, or other feed used to lure such birds on or over the area which is hunted, or are attempting to take them.

One important change in the regulations from last year is that which bars shooting over fields which have recently been planted. Shooting is permitted over fields in which grain has been harvested in normal agricultural practices, but the birds may not be shot over fields which have been planted to small grains or other grains.

In proclaiming October as Parent-Teacher Membership Enrollment Month in Kentucky, Waterfield said:

"The Kentucky Congress of Parents and Teachers is an organization dedicated to the welfare of children and youth of our State and has as its goal the mental and spiritual development of our children and the affording of every education advantage to them."

The lieutenant governor urged "all persons interested in providing for our school children the benefits that are attainable through the objectives of the Parent-Teacher organization to enroll" in the PTA.

"The organization, Waterfield said, has endeavored to interpret to the general public the problems confronting our Kentucky schools and has accomplished much toward giving the children of our Commonwealth many advantages so earnestly desired by her citizens."

Stored-Corn Loans Available To Growers

Mr. Roy C. Gray, Chairman of the State ASC Committee announced today that 1957 corn loans on body, ears and farm-stored corn and purchase agreements will be available to producers who have stayed with the government's commercial corn counties and to all producers in non-commercial corn counties from the time of harvest until February 28, 1958.

Mr. Gray went on to explain that April 1, 1958 has been set by the Committee as the take-over date for producers to deliver 1957 crop corn that is placed under government loan or purchase agreement to the Government, if they have not paid off their loan by that time.

Mr. Gray also announced to the effect that the average minimum 1957 crop corn loan rate for Kentucky has been set at an average of $1.45 for non-commercial counties and at an average of $1.11 for non-commercial counties.

He said that because the loan rate varies between counties that interested persons should contact their local county ASC officer for the exact loan rate.

Forestry Jobs Available: Replacements Are Few

About 1,200 jobs in forestry work remain vacant this year, says James Newman, Kentucky Agricultural Extension Service forester; young men are not going into the field in such numbers as formerly.

Newman notes that the Kentucky Division of Forestry places an additional 16 graduates. In addition, other state forestry divisions and the U. S. Forest Service have numerous vacancies.

In 1950, forestry school graduates totaled 2,321; in 1955, only 829 young men graduated as foresters.

In addition to state and federal forest service vacancies, industry is picking up foresters first as it can. Industry has an average beginning salary of $4,500 for foresters; federal services are about $4,200 annually, varying in certain areas, for foresters.

Most states are increasing their beginning salaries for foresters to compete with private industry.

Newman noted that the University of Kentucky has a two-year pre-forestry course before students transfer to one of 26 accredited forestry schools in the U. S. Full information on the course and U. S. schools is available from Prof. O. M. Davenport, Forestry Department, University of Kentucky, Lexington.

Last Alfalfa Cutting Due Before It Frosts

The last cutting of alfalfa in Kentucky should be made about six weeks before the normal time of the first killing frost, says Harold Miller, fertility specialist.

This last-cutting time is due to several reasons. One is that alfalfa is cut, it draws on food reserves stored in roots to nourish young shoots, unless the plant can replenish this food before being harvested again or killed by a frost, the plants are weakened and many will be winter-killed.

Miller emphasized that alfalfa cut without injury to the stand, Miller says. In fact, the dead growth should be removed after freezing. This improves quality and reduces disease dangers in the first hay cutting the next spring.

One of the important factors in keeping good stands is maintenance of food reserves in the soil.

Do you have a son or daughter working during the summer vacation, who is likely to earn more than $600 before school starts again?

If so, or if she doesn't have to work before earning that amount for you to retain your child's exemption deduction, the same holds true if you have a non-student working child who will still be under 19 by the end of the tax year.

In either case, regardless of how much the child earns, the parent may claim an exemption, providing he has furnished over half the total cost of his child's support for the year. This rule also applies in the case of legally adopted children.

This is one important thing to keep in mind: A dependent child is also entitled to an exemption deduction for himself on his own separate return. On the other hand, if he is married, and files a joint return with his wife, he cannot claim an exemption.

Wm. M. Gray, District Director of Internal Revenue, told that he had received many letters which have confused many parents in Kentucky.

"We have reports of both parents and employers telling working children they'll have to quit their jobs before they can $600. They can work right up to the reopening of school if they want to," Director Gray said.

"The children, however, may have to pay a small tax. Since many of them are studying our own courses in basic taxation they already know this." By the same token, many parents who work only short terms of employment or for a smaller salary will probably be entitled to refunds during the next filing season.

This information should prove helpful to three parties to summer employment, the student working children they'll have to quit their jobs before they can $600, the parents, and the employer.

THE BIBLE SPEAKS

By Dr. Kenneth J. Foreman

Background Scripture: 1 Corinthians 13
Devotional Reading: 1 Corinthians 13
Ideal and Real

Paul was not the fly-by-night sort of preacher who passes through a town, stirs up a meeting and moves on, so to speak, without looking back. He was not the kind of missionary who preaches to the natives gathered on the river bank, and then goes and cruises on down the river, confident that the gospel has been brought here and no background people. Paul being a statesman as well as a saint, a psychologist as well as a theologian, stayed long.

Called to Be Saints

"There is Quarreling..."

The ink is hardly dry on the new words Paul has drawn to describe his "brothers" in the Corinthian church, when he begins to write in a quite different key. It follows shortly that he says, "There is quarreling among you."

The reader who pushes on through these words and letters to the Corinthians may be shocked by what he sees. These people are unspiritual (3:1). They are babies (3:1). They are babes in Christ among them (3:1). Gross sin goes on among them unrebuked (5:1-2). They have lawsuits against one another (6:1-11). They have been warned against prostitution (6:15, 16). Some of them came drunk to the Lord's Supper (11:21). Paul is afraid that when he next visits them he may find "selfishness, slander, gossip, conceit and envy."

How can he say such things to people who have been "sanctified" and are "called to be saints"? The truth is, Paul sees the Corinthians as he saw all his converts and all his churches, in two lights. He sees the ideal church, what it ought to be and what in the mind of God it already is, or more precisely what it is destined to be.

The Answer

Now the church moves from where it is to where it is to be. But by what power? What is the secret of the church's transformation from its present state to what is destined to become, from the real to the ideal? The answer is—in one word, love. Paul calls him the "power of God" to which it is to be conformed. In other words, as Christ comes to live in the hearts of these Christians, it is to be transformed into the life of Christ. As they face their many problems, they will learn to find the solutions as they learn more and more what the spirit of Christ really is. If Christ lives in his church, the church will not be tempted to confuse what it is with what it ought to be, and will not be tempted to be discouraged.
