Good morning Constable. I want you to stand on your head and I want you to stand on your feet, that you are a hard man to beat.
 I wish to express my gratitude to the people of the third district for your support and confidence in re-electing me. Those who didn't support me, I wish to say that I am your friend just the same and hope you are the same with me.
 Thank You,

US MAIL

... pays the entire monthly operating cost of my electric refrigerator-freezer!

"In the time it takes me to walk two blocks delivering mail I earn enough to keep Reddy Kilowatt operating our refrigerator-freezer a whole week," says mailman Gene Ping of Somerset, Ky. "When you figure what everything else costs these days, I don't think you can beat a bargain like electricity."

Mrs. Ping says "I don't see how we could possibly get along without an electric refrigerator-freezer. Teaching school, I have very little time to shop so I do it on a weekly basis since my refrigerator-freezer enables me to do quantity buying resulting in saving not only of cost but of time. As Gene says, electricity costs so little for so much convenience and time saving."

TO THE CITIZENS OF ROCKCASTLE COUNTY

I want to thank all of you for your continued confidence and support which you have again given me in my race for State Representative of Rockcastle County. I am most thankful to God and to you for this. I will say to you I will never betray the trust you have placed in me. I will continue to do what ever I can for our people and county. Let us all now unite for victory in November. For I have no malice nor hatred in my heart toward anyone. If elected to the Legislature, I will do and work for the things I have stated, and for all things that are good for our people, county and state. I am thanking you again for your loyal support which I do appreciate.

Your friend,

June Designated Dairy Month; Cummins, Carter Nominated

Plans are being made by the Rockcastle County Dairy Committee for two big events in observance of June Dairy Month.

A special field day is being planned for June 23. Farms to be visited are John Houston's, just off the old Mt. Vernon-Broadhead Road, and Lew Hunt's, off US 150.

Warren Thompson, agronomy specialist at the University of Kentucky, and Edward C. Troutman, extension specialist in dairying, will participate in the field day.

The other event planned by the committee is the selection of dairy princess for Rockcastle. This will be the first year a dairy princess has been selected.

A special committee worked with Eddie Newell, representative of the American Dairy Association, in making plans for the princess contest. Rules for the princess contest and application blanks are available at the County Agent's office.

Industry Brochure Presented County

A brochure on industrial sites in Mt. Vernon, was recently received by the local Rockcastle County Development Association.

Information contained in the brochure was compiled by members of the Rockcastle County Development Association and published by the Industrial Development Department of Kentucky Utilities Co.

H. W. Niemeier, KU district manager, explained that the booklet is to provide essential information about industrial sites to industries interested in a plant location.

Included in the booklet are a map of the area showing available industrial sites, copies of options on the sites and pertinent data on the sites and community.

Mr. Niemeier pointed out the increased competition involved in industrial development and emphasized the need for optimum sites to meet the community in a competitive position in its efforts to attract new industry.

He said, most industries have only a limited time to see a state and waste it in towns not having sites available at a fixed price. The Kentucky Chamber of Commerce Industrial Team has found communities in a position to offer sites at fixed prices. A complete information concerning the sites and town, have less trouble attracting new industry.

Letters from Mayor Carl Brown, County Judge Money E. Cummins and Rockcastle County Development Association Chairman R. H. Hamm, are part of the brochure.

These letters express the community's interest in new industry and explain the support an industry can expect. The various utilities stating the availability of existing facilities and the cost of new facilities to the industrial site.

Copies of the brochure have also been given to the State Department of Commerce, the Kentucky Department of Economic Development, railroads, and other agencies having an active industrial development department.

Amateur Contest Scheduled

Members of the Advisory Board of the Rockcastle County Farm-Service Mt. Vernon, and the Farm Home Advisory Council voted at their annual Meeting Planning Conference held recently to hold a Amateur Contest this year as one of the highlights of their local Southern States annual membership meeting to be held at 7:30 p. m., August 8 at the Renfro Valley Barn.

The contest—which is being sponsored by Southern States Cooperative in cooperation with the Ted Mack Original Amateur Hour Television Show—offers an opportunity to the winning act at the local meeting to compete for an expense-free, three-day trip to New York, plus a $100.00 cash award. While in New York, the act will also appear on the Ted Mack Original Amateur Television Show.

The contest is open only to amateurs who are 12 years of age or over on July 17, 1961. They must be members of the immediate families of a farmer or a Southern States patron. Neither professional entertainers, employees of Southern States Cooperative or its retail outlets and members of their families, are eligible for the contest.

Talent acts desiring to enter the contest should contact John Houston, Broadhead, chairman of the local Talent Round-up Committee or agency manager Wayne Stewart. Other members of the committee are: Joe Clark, Renfro Valley; James Coomer, Broadhead; and Lee Durham and Russell Parsons, both of Mt. Vernon. All committee members have extra contest entry blanks.

Answering phones or doing other kinds of work during the auction are, from left, Mrs. Joyce Henderson, Mrs. Barbara Owens, Alvin Adams, Mrs. Nell Wanda Travis, Mrs. Pat Hammons, Mrs. Ann Farris and Mrs. Sue Burdette. In three nights the auction raised $814.76. Two nights remain. Ronnie Sutton of Broadhead, paid $5.50 for the privilege of throwing out the first ball in the opening softball game.

Republican nominees were chosen for all Rockcastle County offices in the Tuesday primary election, that saw a total of 4341 Republican votes cast.

For the most part, the nominees were not opposed in the final election in November. Only six will have opponents.

Money Ed Cummins, county judge, defeated D. E. Saylor for the nomination for representative of the 79th District, 1959 votes to 1850. He will be opposed this Fall by John Houston, of Broadhead.

Mr. Houston is one of the most active agricultural leaders in Kentucky. He is currently president of the Farm Bureau; vice president of the Rockcastle Chamber of Commerce; soil conservation supervisor; vice president of the Rockcastle Livestock Improvement Association; director of the Rockcastle County Artificial Breeders' Cooperative; chairman of the Southern States Advisory Board; and a member of the Rockcastle Development Association.

(Because of a lack of space, the Memorial Day Honorees and the length of time needed to set-up a precinct-by-precinct tally, the complete chart of the election will be published in a later issue.)

In the county judge race, Chas. E. also will be opposed in November.

In the county court clerk race, incumbent Clarence Carter led the ticket, defeating nearest rival, Conard Parrett, 2594 votes to 782. Mr. Carter will have no opposition in November.

Incumbent District Attorney James W. Lambert defeated Amy S. F. Bowman, 2503-1337. Mr. Lambert will be opposed in November.

Battle At Wildcat Mountain Stopped Southern Offensive--

BY: RAY MCCLURE

For much of the material used in this story, I am indebted to James Henderson, Hamilton, Ohio, for loaning me "A History of the First Kentucky Cavalry" by Eastham Tarrant; also, letters of Confederate and Union officers compiled from War Department files in a book, "War of the Rebellion," Series 1, Vol. 4, as well as many other sources, and a map of the area drawn by Glenn Fisher, of Mt. Vernon. As a note of interest, Mr. Henderson's grandfather, A. J. Henderson, Company F, First Kentucky Cavalry, Casey County, fought at Wildcat Mountain, near Livingston. He survived the war and spent the remaining 30 years of his life at Broadhead. Making this trip to Wildcat Mountain for pictures and a tour of the battlefield were: Opp Bussell Jr., Billy Gregory, Henry Hines, all of Mt. Vernon, and Leo Hopkins, formerly of Mt. Vernon, and now a teacher in the Lexington school system)

UNION POINT

-- The General Sent The Private For A Look At Distant Livingston --

On a night in October, when the moon is full, and the mists swirl over the Rockcastle Hills, they say a visitor can look toward Hoosier Knob on Wildcat Mountain and see a solitary sentinel, standing in a blue uniform, and leaning on his rifle.

They also say, if you listen closely, you can hear the low cannon-rumbles bouncing along the gloomy, forbidding cliffs. It is General Zollicoffer still fighting the battle for the South that he lost on the spot 100 years ago this year.

This is the spot near Livingston, an area now in Laurel County, that prompted Confederate Gen. F. W. Zollicoffer to write: "I reached the enemy's entrenched camp. The country is very poor indeed. The Rockcastle Hills are a natural fortification, almost inaccessible." And Gen. George Thomas, of the United States Volunteers, to later pen: "I cannot remain in this inhospitable place any longer."

This is the Wildcat Mountain where, on October 21, 1861, forces under the command of General Zollicoffer, and forces under the command of Union Gen. Albin Schoepf, clashed in the first battle of the Civil War in Kentucky.

The area of Wildcat Mountain is much the same today as it was 100 years ago when Brig. Gen. W. T. Sherman, commander of the Army of the Cumberland, vowed Confederate troops would not be allowed to cross the Rockcastle River and endanger Camp Dick Robinson and all of Central Kentucky.

"Do everything in your power to keep the enemy from crossing the Rockcastle River," Gen. George Thomas, commander at Camp Dick Robinson, wrote to Col. W. J. Landrum of the First Kentucky Cavalry.

Today it is the same Wildcat Mountain, possessed only by newer briars and tangled weeds. Copperheads and ratters still coil andither in the rotted stumps and piles of rocks. The long trenches studing the ridges are quiet but for the wind that piles them with leaves and then whips the leaves out again, like soldiers charging into battle.

Over on Infantry Ridge, the forest has come back into its own, camouflaging the trenches in green. Two graves yawn that once held fallen Union men.

On around Infantry Ridge toward Livingston towers Hospital Rock, that once served as an aid station for Union wounded. Generations, before and since those days in 1861, have left their name and dates scratched in its sandstone. One inscription, worn by water drops, reads: Roy McCoy, May 1849.

Along the mountain toward Merhons, towers Union Point. From this cliff Union soldiers looked over a radius of 15 miles, across the canyon cut by the water of the Rockcastle River. Four miles in the distance Livingston sits, sleepy and silent. To all, the magnificent scene from Union Point emphasizes the reason the Union was determined that Zollicoffer would not pass beyond the Rockcastle Hills.

It is said that once in anger, Third Infantry Regiment Col. T. T. Garrard orders a grumbling, homesick soldier to Union Point, after the soldier called the area God-forsaken. Garrard is reported to have said: "Take a look boy, and dare to tell me what you see is God-forsaken."

--- This is the landscape yesterday and today; magnificent in its ruggedness; treacherous in its stillness; challenging in its mystery; lonely in its beauty, and much the same as it was when it all began late in September, 1861.

The South and the War

The objectives of the South, Kentucky-wise, during the early days of the Civil War was to scatter Union sympathizers in Kentucky, discourage Union recruiting and firmly establish Kentucky as a Confederate state, eliminating the chance of a flanking military movement by the Union into Virginia when Lee's forces had thundered north.

In September, 1861 the South was in need of a general who was near at hand that would be able to muster a force great enough in number to over-run Eastern and Central Kentucky and join forces with other Southern forces heading into Kentucky from the southwest. It chose F. K. Zollicoffer, then in Tennessee, and Zollicoffer moved his forces relentlessly from Cumberland Ford, through Pineville, Barbourville, and finally, near London where he went into camp with about 5,400 men and six pieces of artillery.

From London Zollicoffer put out feelers, mostly in the form of patrols. As the days passed, he became assured through talks with natives in the area, and an occasional captured Union sympathizer, that the Union Third Regiment Volunteers, under Colonel Garrard, had without question fortified Wildcat Mountain as the point of defense in halting his march into the Bluegrass.

Zollicoffer had made contact with the Laurel Home Guard, and it had scattered. Some of the Guard had gone north to the area of the Big Hill; some had gone to Camp Wildcat, and some had gone home. Now the lay open, he believed, to the Rockcastle River, except for the few hundred Union troops of Garrard. Zollicoffer decided to test the Union defenses only when it was practical.

The decision to defend the Bluegrass at Wildcat Mountain was made by Generals Sherman and Thomas.

With a look at the map it was obvious the straight-line attack into Central Kentucky would be along the state road and over the Rockcastle Hills into Garrard and Madison counties.

The generals were both reasonably sure Zollicoffer would need to take the shortest route, since his supply line would be jeopardized by a longer route, and since his troops were already poised at London.

The most defensible position between Zollicoffer and the Bluegrass along this route were the rugged and desolate Rockcastle Hills. Because of the ruggedness, the generals decided to fortify Wildcat Mountain and its road over the summit. General Thomas dispatched Col. T. T. Garrard and the Third Regiment for outpost duty to Wildcat if and when Zollicoffer chose to make an attempt to cross the Rockcastle River. Later, he sent Col. Frank Wolford for an inspection of Wildcat Mountain defenses. Colonel Wolford returned to his command of the newly recruited First Kentucky Cavalry at Camp Dick with his report early in October.

The situation at Camp Wildcat was summed up by Colonel Garrard on September 29, 1861, in a letter to General Thomas:

"Colonel Wolford came into camp bringing with him the Home Guard (Laurel) under Colonel Brown (G. P. Brown).

The enemy have taken London. The Colonel says they are in large force, and have about 600 cavalry. We might defend this place, and could if they were to come the road, but they can go through the woods with infantry. They could go the Richmond Road until they cross the Rockcastle River several miles, then there is a good road that intersects this road one-and-a-half miles this side of Mt. Vernon.

-- Zollicoffer Struck From The South --

Should they take that road, we would be completely cut off from your camp, there being no road for us to travel with wagons, and none that infantry could, except through the woods. It is 8 miles from the Richmond road and it runs nearly parallel for some 15 or 20 miles, several miles beyond Mt. Vernon.

Hawkins, Burton, Walker and five others are with the rebels; they having been conveyed through the woods or by-ways. They passed the Home Guard under the pretense that they were from Camp Dick Robinson and sent there as spies to report to you. I have no doubt Burton and others were sent by their friends to carry the rebels into Madison County, knowing they were defenseless.

From what I have written, you can see through the scheme (provided I am not mistaken). The last heard of the pickets they were this side of London, about halfway between London and the forks of the Richmond road.

I consulted with Colonel Wolford before writing this. One of Colonel Wolford's men fired on another of his men, wounding the man, and killing one horse and wounding another. The private that shot himself at Camp, which I informed you of, died yesterday, to the bearer of your dispatch informed me.

There is but little water here, not sufficient for horses and men without hauling, which we could do.

General Thomas relayed this letter from Garrard to Pres. Abraham Lincoln through Brig. Gen. Robert Anderson at Louisville. A short time later, General Anderson ordered two regiments to reinforce Camp Wildcat. The regiments were from Indiana and Ohio.

In another dispatch to General Thomas, Colonel Garrard reported that: "The rebels have taken Manchester, pulled down the flag, tore it up, and placed theirs on the same pole."

On the same day General Thomas also posted a dispatch to Col. W. J. Landrum in the area of the Big Hill that set the stage for the defense of the Bluegrass and the battle at Wildcat Mountain:

"The enemy is reported to me as occupying London in force. I therefore wish, and direct, you to obstruct the Richmond Road by cutting trees across it and filling it up with rock from the cliffs, commencing on the Laurel side of the Rockcastle River, and extending as far back as the Natural Bridge, on the Big Hill, and station your men at the most advantageous position and defend the road. Also send men and have the road from Richmond to the Mount Vernon road obstructed so that troops cannot march along it. Do anything in your power to keep the enemy from crossing the Rockcastle River."

The Wait Begins

During the intervening days between September 30 and October 21, both Union and Confederate patrols probed the area between London and the Rockcastle Hills. Every bit of information - even gossip from residents in the vicinity - was weighed and judged. One report to the Union estimated Confederate forces in the area to be 10,000, with 30 pieces of artillery. Colonel Garrard hurriedly dug in for the impending strike that Zollicoffer was expected to make as soon as Zollicoffer secured his position.

Colonel Garrard looked at his own position. Wildcat Mountain had two well defined ridges that formed into a V. (See Map) Along the two ridges Garrard entrenched, in order that the road winding down the mountain between the ridges could be observed.

The best observation point was the summit of the left ridge, known later as Hoosier Knob. From a steep incline it reached upward to a sheer rock cliff. On top of the cliff and below, he dug his trenches and stationed his men. Along the less sloping and less rugged Infantry Ridge he also dug trenches and assigned posts to the remainder of his 975 men. It was October 2.

On that date Colonel Garrard again wrote General Thomas: "Since General Carter arrived (to look over defenses) we have been over a considerable time. The general thinks when the work is completed we will be secure against almost any force. With strangers they could find passways, but persons acquainted with the country could get into our camp many ways. Still, they could not do so if we had a small force at each point. The distance from the Little Rockcastle to the Big Rockcastle is some 3 1/2 miles. A considerable portion of this distance is defended by natural cliffs, so that it relieves us from performing much labor at those places. Ten miles of the road south of our camp is almost a dense thicket on each side of the road, and could be defended on at least we could annoy the enemy with infantry the entire distance, whilst we could be comparatively secure, provided we acted cautiously...." Colonel Brown has now enrolled and in camp some 250 twelve-months' soldiers. He has muskets, but no cartridges boxes, caps, pouches, nor bayonet scabbards, the center of his from you as soon as convenient. Mount Vernon is the post office if sent by mail."

From that date until October 17 Garrard waited for Zollicoffer to make an offensive move. Scouts had informed him earlier that Zollicoffer had gone back to Barbourville, but it was true. Zollicoffer had actually come back to London.

Garrard became anxious. Tension was mounting in his men. On October 17, scouts brought information that seemed to settle the reason for Zollicoffer's wait-and-see attitude. Zollicoffer had apparently gone back for more troops. Colonel Garrard's dispatch to General Thomas was short and had a note of urgency:

"Two Messengers have just arrived from 9 miles beyond London, informing me certainly that Zollicoffer with his forces approaching... I must have aid here tomorrow... Your artillery can reach here before the enemy does."

General Thomas was ready for action when the message came. Recruiting had been going on and the First Kentucky Cavalry had been formed, made up of men from Casey, Lincoln, Garrard, Pulaski, Boyle, Wayne, Marion, Clinton, and a few men from various other counties.

The First Kentucky Cavalry, and its commander, Col. Frank Wolford, was ordered to Camp Wildcat, along with the 14th Ohio, the 32d Indiana; Battery B, First Ohio Artillery.

Early on October 18, Special Order 13, was issued by George E. Frynt, assistant adjutant general.

"Brig. Gen. Albin Schoepf having reported to these headquarters for duty, agreeably to Department Order, No. 58, assigned to the command of the troops now in the Rockcastle Hills. He will proceed at once to that point and make all disposition in his power for the defense of his position against the advancing enemy."

The order sending reinforcements to Colonel Garrard at the Rockcastle Hills came as a surprise to the men of the First Kentucky Cavalry at Camp Dick Robinson. For days rumors had been whispered that Garrard's Seventh was in trouble.

The men of the First Cavalry had also been called together for a briefing by Colonel Wolford. In effect, his speech was: "Men, in a few days we are going to meet the enemy. Right now it appears it's going to be along-side Garrard at Rockcastle Hills. That's down on the Rockcastle River. I want you to meet the enemy with courage when we are called on. Do nothing to discredit the section of your birth. All of you volunteered as soldiers of the United States Army to defend your country. I want good soldiers - soldiers who can look in the barrel of an enemy gun. If there

When Tobacco Insects Attack

- Controls tobacco insects in the plant bed and in the field - hornworms, budworms, flea beetles, June beetle grubs, grasshoppers and Japanese beetle. Combined with parathion controls aphids.
- Outstanding against flea beetles resistant to other insecticides. Controls tough-to-kill hornworms.
- Safer to use than many other insecticides. No special protective clothing needed. Can be used on more than 20 other crops and thereby reduces hazards from drift.
- Long-lasting, powerful action even in the hottest weather.
- You can get SEVIN now in economical spray and dust formulations.
