Henry Cox Expected To Resign Water Job

Henry Cox, superintendent of the Mt. Vernon Water Works, is expected to hand his resignation to the City Council when it meets tonight.

Mr. Cox, who has been associated with the Water Department for many years, is expected to tell the council he will find it difficult in the future to work for the Water Department in its best interests.

The superintendent probably will inform the council that he is resigning as superintendent until Sept. 30, and then as an employee at the water plant until Nov. 30.

Mr. Cox has not officially given reasons for his resignation. He has not elaborated on what the "best interests" are of the Water Department.

The council could appoint a successor at the meeting. One who has been mentioned prominently for the post in the last few days. Mr. Cox has been with the Water Works for 22 years. He spent some time in the Army during World War II.

Boy, 14, Sentenced To KV After Robbery, Shooting

A 14-year-old Broadhead boy was sentenced to the Kentucky Village Monday after he was arrested and charged with robbing a Mt. Vernon woman of $345, knocking her down, shooting under her feet, and later escaping on a bicycle.

Arrested Sunday at the home of a sister at Gum Sulphur was Ronnie Leace. Treated at Rockcastle County Baptist Hospital for bruises was Mrs. Nancy Prewitt, 80, of High Street, Mt. Vernon.

According to State Trooper Willis Martin, Mrs. Prewitt reported the five-foot, 70-pound boy came through the underbrush at the rear of her home and into the yard. He began talking to her dog.

The youth talked about the dog a few minutes then disappeared around the side of the house. Mrs. Prewitt started to go inside. As she reached the steps, the boy reappeared, carrying a .28 rifle. Mrs. Prewitt told Trooper Martin the boy told her to go into the house, that he was going to rob her. They went inside and the boy began searching the room. Under a pillow Mrs. Prewitt said he found $345. He then shot three times under her feet, she said, and knocked her down with the butt of the rifle. He ran out of the house screaming "Get out, get out, get out."

Trooper Martin said police searched the neighborhood and found an envelope containing $35. The remainder of the money was not found.

As police related, the youth made his way through the woods to Buckeye School and shot into the door. He then returned to Mt. Vernon, stole a bicycle at the home of Ernest Stanley, and rode six miles to Broadhead where Broadhead police, unaware of his escapades, took him home. He was arrested by Trooper Martin and Broadhead Policeman Grant Pritchard Sunday afternoon.

The youth, reportedly an "A" student when he was in school, had been released to an uncle at Mt. Vernon following a breaking and entering charge at Broadhead several weeks ago.

Health Department Officer Gives Court Verbal Lashing

Dr. M. A. Shepherd, Rockcastle County Health Officer, Wednesday accused the Rockcastle Fiscal Court of denying the people of the county the privilege of trading dimes for dollars.

Dr. Shepherd issued the statement to the Signal following a Fiscal Court meeting Tuesday at which time the court let die from lack of a motion a resolution which would have put to a vote of the people in the November election the decision whether to establish a public health taxing district for the purpose of maintaining and operating one of the Rockcastle County Health Department.

Dr. Shepherd did not mince words in his criticism of the court's "no decision." He appeared shaken by the outcome of the proceedings.

This means, Dr. Shepherd said, the loss of an opportunity to bring a great deal of money into the community as well as the loss of many health services this money would provide.

In March, the Rockcastle County Board of Health at its regular meeting, passed a resolution to request the Rockcastle Fiscal Court in accordance with Public Health Statute 212.720 to place on the November 1962 election a tax not to exceed 10 cents per $100 property valuation to pay for many services rendered, and to be rendered, by the county.

MAKE YOUR VOICE HEARD

An editorial in this week's Courier-Journal points out something we have known for a long time.
The editorial relates that Associated Press Correspondent Neil Gilbride from Washington notes that because of work on control of Kentucky's rivers, the state's future is bright. The last paragraph of the editorial is especially noteworthy.

"Control of the Tennessee, the Lower Cumberland, the Green and Barren and Nolichucky rivers is having a growing impact on Western and West Central Kentucky. But the Upper Cumberland, the Big Sandy, the Kentucky and Laurel rivers and their tributaries still spread devastating floods on the chronically depressed areas of Eastern Kentucky that can least afford the economic loss. This section of the state especially needs river development to provide an outlet for coal and timber and to create new recreational opportunities for communities that must increasingly depend on tourist and vacation business. Work done on our rivers has been a sound investment. But the work is by no means done yet, and in some areas it is barely begun."

With the expectation that Congress within a few days will agree on points in Pres. John Kennedy's Public Works Bill releasing 900 million dollars for rehabilitation work, it will behoove every citizen of Rockcastle, Laurel, and Jackson counties to send our Congressman and two Senators a letter pointing out that these counties are under the Area Re-development Program and could well use a dam on the Rockcastle River above Livingston.

We, and our Congressmen, already have heard of the economic merits of a dam at Livingston on the entire area. But it would be well worthwhile to point out again that a dam is eventually planned on the Rockcastle River by the Army Corps of Engineers. Why not now, with the funds that are to become available?
Make your voice heard to your Congressman, if it's only one line. Get us a dam on the Rockcastle River!

FISCAL COURT

Health Department.

Approval of the resolution by the voters would put the county on the State Health Department Foundation Program, which is similar to the Minimum Foundation Program that brings hundreds of thousands of dollars yearly into the county school budget.

By participating in the Foundation Program, the Rockcastle Health Department would receive $36,257 for county appropriation of $4,364. This year's county budget is $18,757, with a local appropriation of $2,775.

The additional money would go for the addition of two public health nurses, a full-time sanitarian, a health educator, a nutritionist, a health building, a health center, furnishing supplies for a home care nursing program for persons suffering from chronic illness, and a hearing and sight conservation program.

"In short," Dr. Shepherd declared, "every dollar raised by this tax would be matched by $10 from the State Health Department. This is a good return for any investment."
The refusal of the county to allow the people of the county to vote on this measure came as a shock to me," Dr. Shepherd said, "I felt the county judge thought opposing any new tax, was not afraid to let it come to a vote. Apparently, he was afraid."

Judge C. C. Carter at the Fiscal Court meeting asked County Court Clerk Clarence Carter to read the resolution. Dr. Shepherd reported, "He then asked me what would happen if no one made a motion for the resolution. That if the motion was not made and seconded, then the court would not have to put the resolution on the ballot."

Dr. Shepherd said "Two other magistrates also voiced their opposition to taxes. After the motion was not made, I then consulted Atty James Lambert, attorney for the Board of Health, who looked up and read the statute furnishing supplies for a home care nursing program for persons suffering from chronic illness, and a hearing and sight conservation program."

"The refusal of the county to allow the people of the county to vote on this measure came as a shock to me," Dr. Shepherd said, "I felt the county judge thought opposing any new tax, was not afraid to let it come to a vote. Apparently, he was afraid."

PROTECT SEED TOBACCO FROM BUDWORMS

Farmers growing burley tobacco for seed should protect their crops now from budworm attack, warns Richard Thurston, UK Agricultural Experiment Station entomologist.
Large numbers of budworm eggs are being found on seed heads of tobacco and large numbers of budworm moths are being caught in light traps. This means that heavy populations of budworms may attack tobacco seed heads during the next few weeks, Thurston says.
A weekly spray program should be started immediately to protect seed tobacco from budworms. Any of the following insecticides should give good protection: DDT at the rate of one and a half pound actual material per acre; TDE at one and a half pounds per acre. Direct the insecticidal spray mainly toward the seed head, he recommends.
Burley being grown for seed-not for seed-will not be injured by budworms if it is cut within the next two weeks. Do not apply insecticides to seed tobacco closer than 10 days to harvest, Thurston warns.

ONCE OVER LIGHTLY

AT the risk of getting shot, I am going to confess that one of the things I admire most about women is their great show of self control in regard to family vacations. Asked if everybody had a good time at the beach or the lake or the mountains or wherever they rented a cottage, the average woman will merely turn a little pale, smile weakly and agree to a strained voice that everybody did have a good time.
That is the utmost in self control because what she would really like to do whenever she thinks about the matter is break a chair over her husband's head and start giving her children the facts of life about family vacations.
Why? Well, let's consider some of the things that various members of the family wonder about when it's been decided that they're going to, say, the beach for a vacation:
The father wonders how good the fishing is. The children wonder how good the swimming is. The mother wonders how good the store in the beach cottage is. If things run to form, it'll be half the size of her electric one at home and four times as primitive.
The father wonders if the beach has a boat dock. The children (teen-age girls) wonder if the beach has boys. The mother . . . she wonders if the cottage has enough pots and pans. In the last one, she wound up boiling water in a frying pan.
The father wonders how far it is from the beach to the nearest golf course or bowling alley - in case he gets bored with pulling in those big fish. The children wonder how far it is to the nearest movie - in case those boys they meet on the beach want to take them out. The mother . . . she wonders how far it is to the nearest laundromat - in case she gets tired of doing the laundry by hand. It's a cinch that the cottage won't have a washing machine.
The father wonders if he shouldn't take an outboard motor. The children wonder if they shouldn't take their party dresses. The mother doesn't wonder, she knows that she had better take paper plates, an ironing board, iron, clothes pins, sheets, a new broom, electric fan, extension cord, portable ice box and bug spray.
In short, on the average family vacation of this type, as these boys they meet on the beach for me, I'll catch the next plane for South America.

The father wonders how far it is from the beach to the nearest golf course or bowling alley - in case he gets bored with pulling in those big fish. The children wonder how far it is to the nearest movie - in case those boys they meet on the beach want to take them out. The mother . . . she wonders how far it is to the nearest laundromat - in case she gets tired of doing the laundry by hand. It's a cinch that the cottage won't have a washing machine.
The father wonders if he shouldn't take an outboard motor. The children wonder if they shouldn't take their party dresses. The mother doesn't wonder, she knows that she had better take paper plates, an ironing board, iron, clothes pins, sheets, a new broom, electric fan, extension cord, portable ice box and bug spray.
In short, on the average family vacation of this type, as these boys they meet on the beach for me, I'll catch the next plane for South America.

ONCE OVER LIGHTLY

AT the risk of getting shot, I am going to confess that one of the things I admire most about women is their great show of self control in regard to family vacations. Asked if everybody had a good time at the beach or the lake or the mountains or wherever they rented a cottage, the average woman will merely turn a little pale, smile weakly and agree to a strained voice that everybody did have a good time.
That is the utmost in self control because what she would really like to do whenever she thinks about the matter is break a chair over her husband's head and start giving her children the facts of life about family vacations.
Why? Well, let's consider some of the things that various members of the family wonder about when it's been decided that they're going to, say, the beach for a vacation:
The father wonders how good the fishing is. The children wonder how good the swimming is. The mother wonders how good the store in the beach cottage is. If things run to form, it'll be half the size of her electric one at home and four times as primitive.
The father wonders if the beach has a boat dock. The children (teen-age girls) wonder if the beach has boys. The mother . . . she wonders if the cottage has enough pots and pans. In the last one, she wound up boiling water in a frying pan.
