Electric cooking is flamelessly clean, automatic, fast and cool
 Not only is cooking fast and easy with an electric range (automatic controls, even self-adjusting surface units if you wish) — but there's less cleaning in the kitchen. Electricity simply can't make dirt to soil walls and curtains. It's cool cooking, too, with contact heat that cooks the food not the cook — makes it pleasant to work in your kitchen.
 No wonder the best for cooking — an electric range — is a real step up to the joy of total electric living. Buy one from your dealer soon. We'll help pay for any additional wiring needed.

FREE with your new electric range
 UP TO $35 ON YOUR WIRING BILL IF YOU BUY AN ELECTRIC RANGE NOW! If you change from 2-wire to 3-wire, 100-ampere service, and install an electric range, we'll pay $35 on your wiring bill. If you have 3-wire service and install an electric range, we'll pay $15 toward additional wiring needed. Offer good to November 30, 1965 so see your KU manager for eligibility.

On Education

REPRINTED FROM
The Kenton Valley
Bugle
By:
JOHN LAIR

I never thought I'd live to see the day that I would have anything to say against every boy and girl entering college. But now I am beginning to wonder. I am still in favor—very much so—of every boy and girl getting a good education but I am not now so certain that in college is the place to get it.

With the greatest percentage of all high school graduates actually going to college our institutions of higher learning are becoming so crowded that no student can be given any attention to make them successful in their chosen field. And there is something else a glimmer of light in the field. Many young people go all the way through the college course and graduate with a piece of paper that tells of their life's work will be.

Some students—the real students with serious intent to learn something—will get an education under most any college but the ones that hear about the ones that make the front pages of our newspapers, seem to be in a hurry to get into college. They hear about how to stage riots and demonstrations and the mistaken idea that in college they can hear about the ones that make the front pages of our newspapers, seem to be in a hurry to get into college. They hear about how to stage riots and demonstrations and the mistaken idea that in college they can hear about the ones that make the front pages of our newspapers, seem to be in a hurry to get into college.

graduated knocked at for a job, but not any more. Hardly a practical business man. The idea that four years of indolent and easy living did not do any good in a young man to fill a job that called for energy and ability. On the other hand, if a young man comes out with a degree in engineering or some other useful art or profession he can be mapped out for a good job the day after he graduates. In fact, I have known many young fellows in recent years who a year before they finished such a course had a contract to go to work for a certain firm.

The point I am trying to get at is this. We should charge our present school system that puts all emphasis on a full college course at random to a system where at all the funs and feathers and all the deers and all the boys who want to make engineering his life's work or the man who wants to be a mechanic or a merchant or a farmer or what you will is allowed to concentrate his full attention during the preparatory years to the thing he is actually going to do in life and any boy old enough and smart enough to go to college should be old enough and smart enough to have some pretty clear idea of what is going to do with his life. Too many boys drift through college expecting something wonderful to happen to them when they get a diploma and when they happen they wind up doing the things they thought were beneath them and for which they have had no training.

Back in the days when a few students attended in college it was generally those who wanted to become teachers or doctors or lawyers or the ones who went in. Nowadays everybody goes to college, with little regard to a particular future. As a result, it is expected that the boy who should take the average college course are crowded and hampered by many who will profit but little from such a course and who should be studying in a different direction. There is nothing degrading about studying to perfect a trade. E. E. Taylor can't be teachers and doctors and lawyers. Where are the mechanics and tradesmen to come from? From disappointed college graduates who can't get jobs anywhere else or from well run, secure trade schools that are the equals of the colleges in every respect?

I am not certain that all girls should go to college. That may sound strange coming from someone who has put four daughters through good colleges. Ninety percent of the girls who go through college get married before or soon after graduation and while I would in no way begrudge them a full college education I am not so sure that many strange things might do most of them as much good. The biggest thing they get from their college years are the associations and friendships they establish. Maybe it's a cold blooded outlook but wouldn't it be better for all concerned if the time and space they took up acquiring a four year college education had been made available to someone who could have used it to better advantage?

Letter From Minister

Another year has ended for the West Broad Church of God. The pastor and his family would like to take this opportunity to thank all of those who worked so diligently to make this year so prosperous and such a successful year for the work of our Lord and Savior, Jesus Christ.

Our Sunday School has grown and reached many souls under the commendable leadership of our Sunday School Superintendent, Bro. James Kincaid and the Secretary, Bro. James Kincaid. Each Sunday, School teacher also has worked faithfully in prayer and study to instruct the students. The growth of our Sunday School has been an evidence of the approval of God upon your work.

The church council, Brother James Kincaid, Bro. Harry Lee Holland, and Bro. James Kincaid, have worked faithfully with the pastor to promote a church which is enthusiastic and that Paul speaks about in the Bible. Also serving as the trustees are Bro. James Kincaid, Bro. Harry Lee Holland, and Bro. James Kincaid. These men have shown their leadership ability. The new church building now under construction is an enthusiastic testimony to the cause of God.

The men could not have worked so well for the church had it not been for the loyal services of Sister Sally Brummett, who labored on the building. Sister Brummett labored in her kitchen preparing meals for the workers. Her sacrifice for her time and food for this cause is a true characteristic of the true Christian. God bless her church, her fellow man and above all for her God.

No church could be complete without its able clerk and the West Broad Church is no exception. Having in the office, Sister Lizzie Burke's services speak well for themselves. The clerk in the church offices is the person filling this position, most not only be a Christian worker of the church, but must work closely with the pastor and all affairs of the church. Not only is Sister Burke served ably in this capacity, but one who has become lower by the church as a dear and close friend.

The young people in the church have certainly launched a desire to serve the Lord. Johnny Burke, is serving as our young leader. His leadership ability and love of God at various times. The youth of today are the leaders of tomorrow and our prayer is that our young people will grow up to be conscientious Christian leaders.

The climax of this glorious year was the homecoming festival Sunday. God blessed us with a very successful day. The ladies of the Ladies Willing Worker Ben went all out in preparing a dinner that was a feast for all.

May we say that these good people of all the members and attendants of the West Broad Church of God has made this year for us one that will be remembered throughout our lives as we work for the cause of our Savior. We don't have to tell you that your treasures are laid up for you in Heaven, but you have other treasures also. Those treasures are in our hearts, the love and the pride we feel for our dear brothers and sisters in the Lord.

Rev. Elijah H. McFarland and family

TWO BREAK-INS

Two broadhead stores were entered Friday night but very little was taken in both break-ins.

Thieves forced a door open and entered Mullins 5 and 10 Store and took about $10 in cash. They also entered Yaden's Department Store by forcing open a door. Nothing was missing. Mr. Yaden reported.

Goose Hunt Season Announced By State

A goose hunting season unchanged from last year and a duck season almost the same, except that only one mallard per day or two in possession, have been granted Kentucky hunters by the Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources and the U. S. Bureau of Sports Fisheries and Wildlife. Minor Clark, commissioner of the Department, announced today.

Forty days of hunting, from sunrise until sunset including the first day, have been granted the duck hunter with a bag limit of four and a possession limit of eight. The season will open on Dec. 1 and continue through Jan. 31. While four ducks may be harvested per day, with a possession limit of eight after two or more days, the daily limit may include not more than one mallard, one pintail, two wood ducks, two canvasbacks, four black ducks or four redheads. The possession limit may not include more than two wood ducks, two canvasbacks, two mallards, two pintails, eight black ducks or eight redheads. Limit on American mergansers is five daily and 10 in possession after two or more days which limits may not include more than one hooded merganser daily. The season opens on Dec. 1 and continues through January 31 with a bag limit of 10 and possession limit of 20.

The goose season begins statewide on Nov. 1 and continues through Jan. 15 with a bag limit of five and a possession limit of five which limits may include in the alternative, not more than two Canada geese or two white fronted geese, or one Canada goose and one white fronted goose.

Proper Harvesting Aids Tobacco Sales

It's hard to cure properly a tobacco crop that has been improperly harvested, says Ira Massey, University of Kentucky Cooperative Extension Service specialist. A good deal of the profit of a crop is tied up with good curing.

There are some reminders: (1) Green, immature tobacco in the barn has much moisture in the leaves. This makes for more difficult curing, encourages houseburn and a consequent loss of profit. (2) Harvest ripe and immature tobacco cut and in the barn is a comforting sight to some growers—but the smart ones will first let the crop mature in the field. (3) The first three to five days, harvested tobacco wills. Then it starts to cure. It dries about 40 to 50 pounds of water for each 100 pounds.

Tobacco Plant Beds Need Fall Treating

Fall-treating tobacco plant beds is like buying good stock in a big concern; you get the dividends later.

So, says Ira Massey, University of Kentucky Cooperative Extension Service tobacco specialist, fall-treating is a must. If done in the way and results will be equally good as if spring-treating was done. These are dividends.

Several factors are involved in fall-treating the crop. One is to pick the proper site. It should have a fertile, well-drained soil and be entirely free from shade. (2) Keep a good water supply close to the bed site if possible but don't pick land that might be overflow territory for a creek. Stay away, too, from the tobacco barn or weeded areas, or areas where tobacco disease have been present.

Flow the site at least two weeks before treating. This eliminates air pockets and brings weed seed to the surface so they can be killed.

If the site is to be burned, only the top needs to be knocked off of the soil that is turned up. If a drench or other chemical is used, a thorough scud bed should be made, free of clods.

Be sure the temperature of the soil is at least 50 degrees Fahrenheit and that the soil is dry enough to work. The materials used for fall treatment are just as effective at this time of year as when used in the spring.

Corn Silage Needed For Local Dairy Cows

Value of corn silage as a ration for dairy cattle has been proven many times, says Dr. John C. Wilk, University of Kentucky Cooperative Extension Service dairyman.

It is high energy, makes a uniform and high quality feed, is well adapted to mechanized handling, and easily fits a seasonal or year-round stored-feed program.

Corn silage, Wilk notes, produces more feed per acre than any other forage crop. Cows produce as much milk when fed corn silage as when only forage as cows that get hay in the ration. Cows on corn silage also consume less forage (dry matter) than when hay is fed, but the higher energy value of good corn silage appears to compensate for the lower dry matter consumption.

And, nearly half the dry-matter weight of good corn silage is shell corn, so the silage actually is a mixture of grain and forage.

Some tips on corn silage: Grow a corn that is high yielding and has a high proportion of grain. Harvest the corn silage at the proper time.

Cut corn when kernel is in the well-dented stage (20 to 30 percent dry matter). This gives up yields of dry matter, more grain in the silage, minimum seepage from the silage and higher dry matter consumption (or more milk).

Corn silage per-acre yields are usually good. A 100-cow yield per acre means about 20 tons of corn silage.
