Babson's Authentic Report

Rising Stock Prices
BABSON PARK, Mass., Feb. 16. Last year was a nightmare for most owners of stocks. After an initial spurt in the opening weeks of 1966, stock prices tumbled off and alternately sagged and plunged downward. Even the traditional "year end" rally failed to show up between Christmas and New Year's. Deep indeed was the gloom as 1967 began.

Bulls Take Command
 But hardly had the President delivered his State-of-the-Union Message before the bulls began to charge. The bears almost out of the ball park. Then they went on a rampage such as has been seen only a few times in stock market history. In the short space of a few weeks, investor attitude pivoted from despair

"first" for business volume, production, and profits. Inflation was gaining ground at the most rapid rate since the Korean War. And after all, weren't stocks supposed to go up and "protect" their owners against the inroads of soaring prices?

Some said the stock slump of 1966 was warning of a bluer-than-blue recession to come. Others felt that speculation for the rise had just gone too far and was bringing on its own corrective reaction. Now, however, through judicious use of hand-sight, the consensus seems to be that extreme tightness in money and credit almost choked the bulls to death. With the best-quality bonds in the world selling to yield over 6 per cent, who would take a "chance on high flyers" yielding 2 per cent or less? Many could not get loans to buy stocks, and many did not want to pay 8 1/2 or 7 per cent to carry issues yielding little or nothing.

A large crowd attended Sunday School on the opening of the Seven Seals of Revelation.

Has the Book of Revelation always been a puzzle to you? If so, would you be willing to devote a few hours of your time only, to a better and truly a word given explanation.

One of the greatest evangelists of our day will be speaking by way of tape recordings. There will be eight messages, each message is between two and three hours long and not of all boreness. If you are interested in hearing them, please drop a card to P. O. Box 217, Livingston, Ky. or call 453-2141.

If enough interest is shown, a designated place will be announced in this paper following this announcement.

To clear up a few questions that may arise in your mind, I want to make four statements:

1. First, I am not a preacher nor even a leader of the people. Only a member in the body of Christ.
2. There will be no pull made for any church of any kind.
3. There will be no solicitations made for money, or selling of any merchandise.
4. I have no selfish gain or interest, other than a better understanding of the word myself.

Friends, we have arrived at the crossroads of time, a better understanding is needful to all of us. Please consider this: Jesus said in John 6:37, All that the father giveth me shall come; and him that cometh to me, I will in no wise cast out.

Friend, Where do you stand? These messages are non-denominational. Everyone is invited -- Let us hear from you!!

PERFECT SCORE. - A very unusual and highly distinctive honor came to Brodhead High School and to two senior boys, Charles Colson and Michael Hoskins, recently, when both boys received a perfect score on the United States Airman Qualification Examination. The exam was administered to the senior class by Sgt. Gene Basham, local representative of the Air Force, who is shown congratulating the boys on their excellent achievement.

Two Brodhead Seniors Attain Perfect Score

Charles Colson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Clay Colson of Brodhead, and Michael Hoskins, son of Navy Lieutenant and Mrs. Mattison H. Hoskins, have achieved a perfect score on the United States Airman Qualification Examination.

According to Sgt. Gene Basham of the Air Force, this is an achievement of very great merit. Sgt. Basham, who handles an eight county area including the boys and Brodhead High School, that in the three years that he has been administering the test, only four other youths have accomplished this. Also, so far this year, these have been the only perfect scores to be attained in the State of Kentucky.

The test covered several different areas of knowledge. Some of the fields covered are: Mechanical Aptitude; General Aptitude; Administrative Aptitude; and Electronic Aptitude Index.

The subtests consist of a battery of ten factors—arithmetic reasoning, word knowledge, mechanical principles, general mechanics, shop practices, hidden figures, electrical information, pattern comprehension, and data interpretation.

Charles, who has always been an honor student, has recently been accepted as a student at Berea College. He has three brothers: Bill, a graduate of Centre College who is presently teaching science in Jefferson County, Rob, who will be graduated this spring from West Point Military Academy, and David, Michael, who is living with his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Hoskins, while his father completes an interim tour of duty in Washington, D. C. before moving his family to Japan, has attended high school in Florida and California. He has a Congressional appointment to Annapolis Naval Academy and is presently awaiting word of acceptance. He has also been accepted at Georgia Institute of Technology.

Michael has two brothers, Stanley, in 10th grade, and Brian in the 7th, and one sister, Karen in the 4th grade.

ford, local administrator for the Farmers Home Administration.

The purpose of the meeting was to discuss the possibility of the Recreation Center's borrowing funds from the Farmers Home Administration to finance the cost of the planned recreational facilities.

The group was informed by Mr. Winn, according to Carl Clontz, attorney for the project, that loans were available for this type of project at an interest rate of 5 per cent, and that if the project was approved, the loan could be for the total cost of the land and recreational facilities.

Mr. Winn also told the group that in order for him to take an application for such a loan, the Directors would have to submit a preliminary plan of the proposed facilities to the City at a cost estimate for the project. The Directors decided to secure the preliminary cost estimate as soon as possible so that a loan application could be made.

In other business before the Board, it was decided to increase the membership from 150 to 200 since the original memberships had all been sold and there were several persons on a waiting list already.

The original 150 memberships were sold during an "open" three days without an application membership drive.

The directors felt that the additional memberships could be sold within the next few days. They do not plan to increase the membership past the 200 now authorized.

SOIL CONSERVATION NEWS

COMING: TWO-EAR CORN
 One good ear per stalk has been a traditional goal in the Corn Belt, but in many plant breeding circles, that yield symbol has lost some of its luster. There's evidence that new 2-ear hybrids may produce more corn with less risk.
 Mass production of Corn Belt hybrids sporting a harvestable spare ear is not yet here; however, some inbred 2-ear lines are off the "drawing board."
 Actually, the one-ear plant was tailored that way before the plant when hand husking and corn shows made large single ears be what's needed is a more weather-tolerant plant that can stand on an extra outlet for energy if some.

 Some "poplite" Southern corn varieties can do just that. For the past ten years or so, breeders have been working to adapt Northern corn to include some of this adaptability to varying conditions.

By 1961 the researchers had accumulated enough inbred lines to begin performance testing. Now, however, a special promise in hybrid varieties whose parent inbred lines had 2-ear potential.
 W. A. Russell, Iowa State University agronomist, is one of the researchers around the country working with "multi-ear" varieties. As a scientist, he isn't trying to prove a point. But the theory he is testing involves this practical goal: boost yields by eliminating barren stalks. Regarding that, his outlook is optimistic.

"In the corn plant before silking, the tassel has priority over the ear shoot for plant nutrients," explains Russell, "but there is also competition among potential ears on the stalk, and the top ear has precedence in this competition."
 In a way, it's like twin calves busting for a share of milk. The problem is to develop a variety in which the second ear will hold its own in this seasonal contest for survival of the fittest.

The success of that extra ear is governed not only by population, but also by weather. The few days just before silking are critical. Under ideal conditions, both ears will silk.
 "My personal opinion is that the multi-ear varieties are at about the development stage that hybrids were 25 years ago," says Russell. "However, our latest results show that some two-ear types produce more grain than conventional mono-earred corn, even at population levels of 20,000 to 24,000 plants per acre."

Notice that he said more grain, not more ears. At high populations, current "2-ear" varieties are not likely to produce many second ears. However, they have fewer barren stalks in dry weather.
 A significant point to keep in mind, is that in out tests most of the harvestable second ear came from plants having average to below-average plant population.

Here are some of his results: At the 8,000-plant-per-acre level, 98.3 percent of the plants produced second ears at 16,000 population, only 9.5 percent of the plants boasted a second ear. But in the low test areas in seasons of extreme stress, there were almost no barren stalks among the 2-ear varieties.

Admittedly, twin-ear corn won't double a man's yield automatically at this stage of development—but perhaps it has that potential as a promise for the future.
 The exciting characteristic of 2-ear corn is flexibility—that is, dependable yield in a wide range of weather conditions.
 The multi-in-weather adaptability gives the 2-ear types a big insurance edge. Available moisture levels can change drastically between planting and silking. So at an average (say 18,000) plant population, new varieties could fall down on barren stalks in a dry year, and present you with twins in an ideal season. The same insurance factor holds in the case of thin strands due to insects, or misclassification

Steve Bullens of Rockcastle Co. has been appointed Forest Guard for Rockcastle County by the Kentucky Division of Forestry. Mr. Bullens replaces C. G. Stewart of Wildlife, who retired after several years as a Forest Ranger in Rockcastle. Steve, a farmer, is president of the Rockcastle County Farm Bureau, and is married and has two children.

 The 2-ear inbred lines have a lot to offer—adaptability, extra vigor, consistent yield increase. But their main advantage, at the moment, is greater resistance to barrenness under moisture stress. They expect to release one of the inbred lines this year and hope to develop, gradually, better-performing varieties in the years ahead.
 The research continues; but researchers have already given farmers another handhold on the yield ladder.

Cultural Aid
 In its first four months of active programming, the Kentucky Arts Commission, established as a permanent agency in 1966, has reached 36 communities in 34 counties. The Commission has aided 11 organizations in presenting 41 performances for the cultural enrichment of non-urban communities.

SAVE YOUR POPLAR TREES

Your small six to ten inch Poplar trees will grow one inch per year in good soil. In just five years a nine inch Poplar pole will be fourteen inch long. A nine inch log 12 feet long has 19 feet log measure. This same log five years later will measure 75 feet. A small tree containing three 9 inch logs at todays pulpwood prices will bring you $182.00. This same tree will bring you $180.00 in just five years. Take an acre of young Poplars which normally will have a hundred trees. Cut them into pulpwood today and you will receive $182.00. Let these young Poplars grow five years and they will bring you $180.00. We recommend that you cut your fourteen inch and up Poplars and fit the small trees you make at the rate of over 800% interest each five years. We need good logs now and suggest that you cut your larger trees which are mature. This enables small trees to grow faster. We need good Oak, Maple, Basswood, Ash, as well as Poplar. We do not want low grade logs. Donald Binder Lumber Company, Highway 80, London

FT. EUSTIS, VA. (AHTNC) - Private Donald W. Alexander, 19, son of Mr. and Mrs. DeBert A. Alexander, Route 2, Box 100, Mount Vernon, Ky., completed a seaman's course at the Army Transportation School, Ft. Eustis, Va., Feb. 1.

During the six-weeks course, he was trained in the operation, maintenance and repair of harbor ships and landing craft. He is better instructed in the performance of miscellaneous deck duties aboard ship. Expansion in this program is due to the need for such craft crews in Vietnam. Most of the school's instructors are Vietnam veterans.
