WEED CONTROL FOR PEPPERS

Cultivation - Pepper plants are slow to shed out weeds, and weed control is a major job in pepper production. Besides a good job of cultivating, most growers have to hoe fields when a herbicide is not used.

Cultivation should begin as soon as plants straighten up after setting. Soil should be gradually be thrown around the plants to cover weeds and provide support for the plants during the bearing. Frequent, shallow cultivation should be continued as long as possible without damage to the very brittle plants. Hoeing should be done when weeds, that have escaped cultivation, are still small. When hoeing is necessary, any delay is costly.

Herbicide - Diphemidant (Enide, Dymid) is an excellent herbicide for safe use in pepper production. However, two or three shallow cultivations still should be made to cover early sprouting weed seed, and to move the soil up around the plants for support. Diphemidant may be sprayed on in a 12-inch band directly over the plants at the time of the last cultivation, or later before weeds show.

Apply 4 to 6 pounds per acre on actual land covered. This is the most economical method. It will cost only about $55 per acre to apply the herbicide in 12-inch bands over the rows, compared to about $25 to cover the entire area (rows and middles). Cultivation should take care of the middles.

Most germinating weed seeds will be killed by the herbicide, the exceptions being morning-glory, nut-grass, jimson weeds, ragweed.

The treated soil may be shallow cultivated without decreasing the effectiveness of the herbicide.

Only one application of diphemidant is necessary. The length of the effectiveness of the chemical is such that extra deep plowing is recommended in preparing land for a winter, cover crop after peppers.

TIMELY TIPS FOR PICKLE GROWERS

Are you interested in saving work in your pickle patch? If so, check to see if you are using some of these work-saving and yield-boosting practices:

A. Rowing
Turning back into the row all the vines that have started across the middle is called rowing or training. Training or gathering the vines into narrow rows helps speed up picking. Trained vines are easier to pick, dust, nitrate and cultivate.

1. Start Early. Start training vines as soon as they begin to run.

2. Keep your vines rowed. Once vines are rowed in the row they will do a lot of their own "training." Help them stay together by further rowing.

3. Row and pick at the same time. With the new, easy-picking method, the picker tops the vines over to get at the pickles. After picking, vines are flopped back to their original position. This helps keep vines together, too.

B. Sidespraying
Pickles come from female blossoms. New blossoms appear when new leaves are formed. To keep new leaves coming, plants need a steady supply of nitrogen.

1. Sidedress 100 pounds of ammonium nitrate per acre just after the first or second picking.

2. Broadcast or drill nitrogen in the middle between the rows.

C. Dusting

Pickle insects and leaf diseases can rob growers of most of their profits!

1. Use 5% Sevin until blooms appear, then change to special pickle dust.
2. Cover the whole plant - upper side of the leaf, as well as the underneath.
3. Start dusting as soon as the young plants break through the ground.
4. Use a crank duster.
5. Dust every week.

Check yourself on these work-saving, money-making practices. Vine training can cut picking work in half. Dusting keeps vines healthy. Sidespraying increases yields. Good luck for a high yield.

EARLY SUMMER "UNDERFEEDING" CAN CAUSE PRODUCTION SLUMPS

The "summer slump" in milk production often is caused by sudden changes in feeding patterns and improper use of pastures, says Dr. Darwin B. Braund, U.K. Cooperative Extension Service dairyman.

"Some dairymen decrease grain intake for cows as they go to pasture," he says, "some stop high energy rations, and reduce it with high-fiber low-energy rations, and other producers eliminate grain entirely."

Cows so treated can lose body weight, and production will decline. This is called the "summer slump."

Pasture-feeding adjustments can be made to keep production at good levels, he says.

1. Rotate pastures, use it for hay or silage if pasture becomes too tall.

2. Feed as few pounds of grain as necessary to balance the cow's nutrient requirements; fewer pounds of high energy feeds are needed as cows go on pasture in spring and early summer.
3. Don't force high-producing cows to use body reserves early in the lactation period; this results in eventual milk production drops.
4. Reduce grain sharply in later months of the milking period, and feed some new crop hay or silage to pastured cows. Adjust grain levels upward as pasture quality drops later in the summer.

GIANT BARK APHIDS PROBLEM IN STATE

Most aphids are so small they are hard to see, but one species, the giant bark aphid, makes it an easy task. These large insects, the largest of the aphid family, are swarming over many varieties of shade trees now, says Dr. Rudy Scheibner, U.K. Cooperative Extension Service entomologist.

"When they are numerous, they can cause severe injury to twigs and small limbs," says Coptol materials are Lindane or Malathion. Follow label directions carefully for rates, mixing and safety precautions. Check area extension offices in the counties for advice. Dr. Scheibner also said his department has received some complaints on honey swarming around residences.

"Some beekeepers like to use these wild swarms for increases in their own apiaries," Dr. Scheibner says. "If beekeepers who want swarms will give their names to the entomology department at the University, we may be able to seed them along to city folks whose premises are invaded by wild swarms."

His office is the Experiment Station Building, Virginia Avenue and South Lineone Streets, Lexington, Ky., 40506, telephone 258-9000, extension 2735.

KENTUCKY DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE NEWS

J. Robert Miller
Commissioner

The Kentucky Department of Agriculture Diagnostic Laboratory located at Hopkinsville is rapidly approaching completion to render diagnostic service for the livestock industry. It is completely equipped and staffed to perform any of the approved diagnostic laboratory procedures. Because of the highly qualified staff and diagnostic equipment this facility will be an official accredited laboratory whose results will be recognized nationally. Also, in such a facility training of laboratory technicians can be conducted that will be recognized as official.

This laboratory is a section of the Department of Agriculture, Division of Livestock Sanitation. The former State-Federal Brucellosis Laboratory in Hopkinsville has been moved to the new diagnostic laboratory and is now part of that center. Kentucky's livestock industry will benefit in many ways by the routine use of this facility.

Its functions will be to perform diagnostic autopsies of submitted animals; collect required tissues and body fluids to make indicated laboratory tests; render diagnostic services for State-Federal Cooperative Programs; compile and make available diagnostic findings and classification of causative agents to reference laboratories; attend to the health department and related fields of medicine, aid in consultation and epidemiological determinations with the attending veterinarian and livestock owner when requested by the attending veterinarian.

A uniform method of laboratory findings is being developed. All statistics will be placed on rapid data so that they will be readily available to all parties concerned. These statistics and information made available will make it possible for specific treatment to be started that will result in the saving of animals and money that would be lost if treatment was delayed. The statistics made available can be of great economical value to the livestock industry and the Commonwealth of Kentucky in an endeavor to increase profitable gains in livestock growth.

A handbook on the laboratory has been issued by the Division of Livestock Sanitation. This handbook has been supplied to all practicing veterinarians. Persons interested in using the laboratory services should contact their local veterinarian. He will know the correct procedures for having a case diagnosed by the laboratory.

The laboratory is designed for the purpose of diagnostic work only and will not offer treatment or treatment methods. This will be the responsibility of the attending veterinarian. Limited diagnostic work is now being accomplished in this facility. It is anticipated that complete service will be rendered in the near future. Livestock owners, veterinarians and all parties concerned will be routinely informed as additional services become available.

Kentucky's livestock industry is fortunate to have such a modern facility as this laboratory. It is a credit and compliment to those who worked long and hard in making it a reality. I would hope that livestock producers and veterinarians throughout the state will offer their full cooperation in seeing that it provides the fullest measure of service to our progressive livestock industry.

Fort Knox, established in 1794, was named in honor of Henry F. Knox, Revolutionary War general and first Secretary of War. It contains 106,060 acre and the U.S. Gold Repository, a fortified building housing the major portion of the gold reserve of the United States.

Women Rally To Hospital Effort

The past week was a great week for Berea. Significant progress toward completing the campaign organization was noted by John Bill Allen, Campaign General Chairman.

Named to the positions of Associate General Chairman were Miss Leila Flinnery and Miss Phyllis Shumaker. Erth were formerly with Berea College. Offices have been set up for them at Development Headquarters on the second floor of City Hall, and they are rapidly taking over their responsibilities.

Mrs. Edsel Amett and Mrs. Louise Hart have been named as co-chairmen of the Public Relations Division. All of their work will be toward setting up an organization which will spread the word about the hospital needs and the overall plan to as many of our citizens as possible. Employee groups, clubs and organizations, etc. will be requested to allow time for the presentation of the hospital story and all news media will be provided with material by this group.

Further appointments to the Campaign Organization are being made daily. A fine start toward completion of this important phase is already noted. The officers of the Hospital Board of Directors are Lawson Hamilton, Jr. President; Jess Wilson of McKee, Vice-President; Mrs. T.M. Wright, Secretary; and Leigh A. Jones, Treasurer.

A meeting of the College Teaching Faculty group who are leaving shortly for the summer was held Monday evening in Boston Tavern. Willis D. Weatherford, Jr. Berea College President, presided. Speakers included Dr. Charles Harris, College Physician, Miss Bess Gilbert, who is handling the teaching faculty solicitation at the College and John Bill Allen, Campaign General Chairman. A discussion period followed the luncheon.

The goal of the Campaign will be in the neighborhood of $425,000. Raising this amount will mean that for every dollar subscribed approximately two dollars hospital facilities will be made available for the use of the people in the community. The vitally needed Extended Care Unit will become a reality and air conditioning for 49 beds in the existing hospital will be added. A 50 car paved parking lot is included in the Development Program.

Zero Corn Tillage Tried In County

The Civil War was responsible for the birth of the one dollar bill. The government found it impossible to pay soldiers and other war expenses with metal, for it was too awkward and unhandy to carry or transport. In 1862, the one dollar bill became legal tender.

Zero-tillage for corn production—a system whereby only a thin planting furrow is cut into the ground through killed sod—is being tried for the first time this year in Rockcastle County. Those planting corn in such a manner include W.S. and Kenneth Stewart, Wildie; Clay Colson, Brohead; Roy Brown, Route 1, Brohead; and Earl Roberts, Route 1, Mt. Vernon.

The soil where the corn is planted is sprayed with a quarter-pound of active paraquat per acre—an experimental herbicide—and a surfactant (wetting agent) in the standard material, two pounds of active Atrazine per acre.

Get the best for your dollars you spend on a home, by investing them in a modern, fully equipped mobile home.

The limited research that has been done of fertilizing no-tillage planting indicates that broadcast applications of both limestone and fertilizer on the surface is effective. If only small amounts of phosphate and potash are needed all the fertilizer can be applied at the row.

The conclusions drawn from these research plots indicate yields on killed sod plots equal to or better than those with conventional methods.

These home accommodate you with ample living space, large built-in closets, top-quality fixtures and many other luxurious features. For those who would like even more space, there is the expandable type mobile home.

Suitable planting equipment must be used in zero-tillage work. Those following this system in Rockcastle County are using a fluted-disk coultter to cut the dead sod ahead of the planter shoe and to hold down land disturbance.

The major advantages of no-tillage include: (1) sod land with steeper slopes can be used in row crop production with reduced erosion risk, (2) cost of production may be reduced, (3) soil may be planted under wetter conditions, (4) yields are equal to those from conventional planting methods.

Also, the cost of planning for a city or county is really negligible to the local government body since the federal government, under a plan called the 701 Planning Program, provides seventy-five percent of the funds and the state will participate in the balance of the cost, often to the extent of one-half of the remainder.

Clabough also informed the group that a planning program should be developed over a two year period. At present, Rockcastle County does not have a planning committee but the

ADMINISTRATRIX NOTICE

Notice is hereby given that Mary Eliza Frith, Route 3, Crab Orchard, Ky., has been appointed administratrix of the estate of Otis Carter Frith deceased. City of Mt. Vernon does. Robert Pybas is chairman of the city group.

William Van Hook, a member of the Mobile Labor Survey team presently conducting a labor survey in Rockcastle County, met with the group also to inform them on the team's progress to date and to answer any questions anyone might have concerning the survey.

He told the members that the results so far on persons returning the survey cards on the county are about a twenty percent return on the cards from the first mailing so far.

He explained that everyone in the county over sixteen years of age should fill out one of the cards, regardless of whether they are already employed or not, and return them since this was the only way to get an accurate picture of the county residents skills and qualifications. The team is also trying to act as an employment agency while they are in the community and plan to be here at least four months.

At the end of this four months, a brochure on Rockcastle County will be prepared and distributed to the local development organization, the Department of Labor, and the Department of Commerce. He stressed that the survey does not guarantee employment to persons nor does it guarantee industry to an area. However, Mr. Van Hook did mention that industries had located in communities as a result of these surveys being made. Persons interviewed by the counselors and meeting the necessary qualifications could be eligible to receive on-the-job training or schooling in a specific trade with substance pay.

Mr. Van Hook himself is mainly concerned with the farm placement end of the survey.

The customer will simply dial operator and ask for the office desired and the operator will dial the number for them. There will be, of course, no change for these calls to the London office. The telephone service and maintenance personnel and equipment will not be affected by the move. Guffey pointed out, "the main in Mt. Vernon but will be dispatched by the London office."

A local business house will be equipped to handle customers who desire to continue paying their bills in Mt. Vernon. Otherwise, customers will simply use the self-addressed envelope enclosed with their bill. Mr. Harold Crawford, southern division manager, was also on hand for the meeting.

S/Sgt. Larry B. Mullins Awarded Bronze Star

Staff Sergeant Larry B. Mullins, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Mullins, has been awarded the Bronze Star Medal by the President of the United States, the Award of the Army Commendation for Heroism, and the Purple Heart. Sgt. Mullins was awarded the Bronze Star Medal for "Outstanding Meritorious Service" during the period November, 1966 to October, 1967. His citation reads in part "His devotion to duty, loyalty, and meticulous attention to detail are in keeping with the finest traditions of the United States Army and reflect great credit upon himself, his unit, the 25th Infantry Division, and the military service. The Army Commendation Medal was awarded for a specific action by Sgt. Mullins which took part on July 24, in Vietnam. This citation reads: "For heroism in connection with military operations against a hostile force: Sergeant Mullins distinguished himself by heroic actions on July 24, 1967, while serving as a squad leader on a search and destroy operation in Hau Nghia Province, Republic of Vietnam. Sergeant Mullins maneuvered his squad under fire in an assault against an entrenched enemy force and succeeded in destroying the position. After destroying the bunker, Sgt. Mullins and his squad were ordered to advance against additional suspected enemy emplacements. Sgt. Mullins spotted an enemy machine gunner moving into position against his squad and immediately threw a grenade at the enemy soldier and directed his squad's small arms and grenade fire to try and eliminate the position. Sgt. Mullins was then ordered to place his squad on line and search the area for additional enemy activity. He spotted a wounded Viet Cong crawling from a hidden position with a hand grenade and immediately rushed forward, grabbed the grenade out of the man's hand and threw it to an area where it exploded harmlessly. Sergeant Mullins' heroic actions are in keeping with the highest traditions of the military service and reflect great credit upon himself, his unit, the 25th Infantry Division, and the United States Army. Sergeant Mullins, who was badly wounded in action, was discharged from the Armed Services on May 16. He is married to the former Brenda Mink and they have one son.

Third Interchange For County May Be Moved To Laurel

The third interchange for Rockcastle County at the interstate routes juncture with Ky 1329, which parallels the Rockcastle River, is in danger of being lost to Laurel County, according to County Judge Wayne Van Hook. According to Judge Van Hook, reliable sources have informed him that the moving of the interchange is strictly a political deal. The interchange if moved would be moved to two miles from the Rockcastle River into Laurel County. A motorcade to Frankfort next Tuesday morning is being planned by Judge Van Hook, Rep. Harold DeMarcus, and County Attorney James Lambert to meet with Highway Commissioner William B. Hazelrigg at a public hearing. The hearing is scheduled for 11 a.m. and the motorcade will leave the courthouse at 8 a.m. "Everyone who is interested in the welfare of Rockcastle County should make every effort to join us in our efforts to let this injustice," Judge Van Hook said. Persons who wish to join this motorcade to Frankfort, and every citizen of the county is urged to do so, and do not have transportation should be at the courthouse a little before 8 a.m. on the morning of June 4 and transportation will be provided. Governor Mann is reportedly against the switch but the Bureau of Public Roads in Washington is urging the change. This could have a great deal of bearing on the matter since this department uses up funds for the interchange at a ratio of nine to one. The interchange was first approved August 17 of last year in a letter to the then Highway Commissioner Mitchell W. Tinder from H.L. Seeman writing for Robert E. Johnson, Division Engineer of the U.S. Bureau of Public Roads. At that time, the interchange was justified, as to cost, by the unusually long distance of 18.5 miles between approved interchanges and the lack of service to the Appalachian area. The estimated cost of the interchange was set at $800,000. Reliable sources say that the Highway Department says that it will cost closer to five million to construct the interchange on the Rockcastle side and that it can be constructed for four million on the Laurel side. Every resident of Rockcastle is urged to be on hand for the trip to Frankfort next Tuesday.

Frank Claibagh Meets With Development Assn.

Frank Claibagh, from the State Division of Community Development, met with the Rockcastle County Development Association Wednesday night and talked with the group concerning community planning and development. Mr. Claibagh told the group that Mt. Vernon was presently involved in a community planning program and had set up a planning committee to deal with the various facets of the program. He said that all communities, regardless of size, topography, rural or industrial, need planning of one sort or another. First, Mr. Claibagh pointed out, it is vitally important for a community to inventory what they have. The first step then is to do four things (1) a population forecast (2) economic study (3) existing land use analysis and (4) base map and existing land use map. These are all simply putting down on paper what a community has in the ways of resources and how it is being used. Previously, all planning had been done by state personnel, Claibagh said, but Governor Nunn felt that private enterprises should be doing planning development and had tried to set-up one county regions and staff them with workers to do the planning in these counties as a whole rather than county-by-county. Right now, Claibagh said that his office staff was doing the planning for thirty-four counties with a staff of five. This is slowly being alleviated so that there will be adequate personnel for the various regions. James Cass, son of W.S. Cass of Brodhead, is the director of the Division of Community Development and another Rockcastle Countyman, Gathif Craig is Mr. Cass' administrative assistant. Mr. Craig is the one who has been named as principal of Livingston School and will be taking over his duties there in September of this year. Mr. Claibagh touched on the highly controversial subject of zoning. He told the group that often there was much dissent over this subject simply because the persons involved did not understand exactly what zoning involved. Zoning, particularly in the rural areas, does not attempt to specify to farmers what or where they may build on their land. Rather, it merely zones an entire area which culture and the only areas in which zoning may enter are first, building a building too close to a highway. The state legislature put controls on this fact which say that a building being constructed must be set back from the highway a

to the post in January of this year when G. H. "Hobe" Griffin resigned after being named to the post of Assistant County Highway Foreman. Under Kentucky statutes, Roberts must again stand for election in 1959 when all county offices will be chosen.

A complete voting tabulation, precinct by precinct, will be published in next week's issue of the Signal. BHS GRADUATION The graduation exercises for Brodhead High School will be held at this Friday night, May 31 at the school auditorium. The exercises will begin at 8 p.m. Congenial speaker will be Dr. Elbert Ockema, Registrar at Eastern Kentucky University.

However, the Democrats of the county picked their candidate a little better as Katherine Peden, Democratic candidate for the nomination carried Rockcastle County and was also victorious in the state. Miss Peden will now face Mr. Cook in the November General Election. INSPECTING FURROW--Clay Colson, left, and Tommy Harold Mink are shown inspecting the new modelly the pe-nill corn planter. Mr. Colson has planted some twenty acres of corn by this method. W.S. and Kenneth Stewart about fifty acres, and Earl Roberts of the Ottawa section around thirty acres.

ND-TILL CORN PLANTER DEMONSTRATED--Rockcastle County Soil Conservationist Clay Colson, far left, and farmers John Houston, Don Bullock, Tommy Harold Mink, and W.S. Stewart inspect a soil corn planter which is designed to plant corn in sod corn has been killed by spraying it with atrazine, surfactant, and paraquat. Once the corn is planted it does not have to be tilled again until it is ready to be picked. (See story by H. Loe Durham on inside page). The planter shown runs around $1,400, in cost but the expense is made up in the labor cost saved which averages $7.50 an acre. The crotches on top of the planter are not part of the equipment but are used as extra weight to help the fluted rollers cut into the soil. It is estimated that 15% of the corn in Kentucky will be planted by this method in 1968.

BABSON'S POINT OF VIEW

REUTHER PLANNING OWN MINI-FEDERATION
 Walter Reuther, dynamic leader of the United Auto Workers, has long been planning to withdraw from the AFL-CIO and take his membership with him. Now he has done it, by the simple strategy of refusing to pay the UAW monthly dues into the Federation's coffers. The AFL-CIO's constitution provides for suspension of any affiliate, falling more than three months behind and the UAW stopped payment early this year.

LONG FEUD BROUGHT SCHISM
 The break has been in the cards for a long while. Thirteen years ago Reuther aided Meany in bringing together the long-separated Federation and the CIO to formulate the AFL-CIO. Reuther hoped that his powerful position as President of UAW would eventually lead him into the line of succession for leader of the union movement when Meany stepped down. But this never came about. Nor did Meany ever encourage his ambitious lieutenant at all in this direction. Fundamentally, the two have always been irreconcilable rivals. The UAW head has leaned strongly to the left and has eagerly urged liberal reforms for Woodworkers, American Federation of Government Workers, and the Teachers Union. If all of these groups should pull out, it would add close to 600,000 more members to the emerging separate house of labor. And, of course, it would mean a substantial addition to the income from dues. Butted about, also, have been reports that Reuther would welcome the enormous and wealthy Teamsters Union into his organization. This division of unionism has been independent since it was cast out of the Federation some years ago for corrupt practices and Red infiltration.

TROUBLE FOR SOME EMPLOYERS
 If fate should smile on Reuther, and most of these prospective groups actually join up with him, it could have a smashing impact on labor relations. For one thing, there would be enough money from dues to implement Reuther's plans to rev up organizing and bargaining tactics. Should this be successful with a smoothly streamlined approach, some of the younger leaders of AFL-CIO segments might decide later to throw in their lots with the new mini-federation. Rivalry between the AFL-CIO and its pugnacious offshoot could bring serious woes to employers in the affected fields. Competition for the "organizing" might easily become as rabid as it was in the old days when the CIO and AFL were separate and hostile. There would inevitably develop the old system of pirating members from established locals. Once such rough and tumble moves begin, the bitterness would increase and invite more violent charges and countercharges. Employers in some lines must expect that growing antagonism between the two factions will make labor relations a real problem. With Reuther's dynamism and the surge generated by it in many AFL-CIO quarters, things will surely pop before 1968 is much older.

Memorial Day 1968
 By: Cong. Tim Lee Carter
 "Eternal vigilance is the price of freedom." That's what our ancestors had to practice when they settled this country looking for the personal liberty they could not find in their homelands. Had it not been for the eternal vigilance against the threats by Indians, by wild animals, and by hostile nations, we would not be free country today. Because of their eternal vigilance, America was born and lived on and grew great. On Memorial Day, 1968, I want you to think deeply about this "eternal vigilance" to which all of us owe so much, and I want to remind you that over the years of our history, it has indeed been nearly. It is those dead we honor today; those glorious dead to whom we are forever indebted. When asked recently about the debt we owe those who died for us — "how can we repay it, if it can ever be repaid?" — "To this difficult and sad question, I replied: "In one sense, it can never be repaid. But, I said, while our brothers, sons, husbands, and sweethearts are still fighting, we who are left behind can be eternally vigilant so that the freedom for which they are risking their lives are not lost here at home. The enemy of our free way of life here in America is subtle and insidious. With a smile on his face, he comes loaded down with glowing promises, guaranteeing us a bright Utopian future. All we have to do to achieve this pleasant state is to sit back and let the Federal Government un-things, because "Uncle Sam can do it better." Of course, he doesn't ask for it all at once. But a little liberty is snipped off here, or a little freedom there, until in the end, we are more and more indebted to an all-powerful Government. I know I do not have to tell you how, every day, the Federal Government is reaching out into our private lives more and more, telling us what we can and cannot do. And, of course, this calls for extra powers" which too often become permanent. How can we pay the debt we owe our honored dead? We can dedicate ourselves to the job of eternal vigilance here at home. The men and women now fighting in Vietnam will want to return to the same free country they left behind. Let's make sure they do. In closing, let me leave a Memorial Day thought with those of you who may have lost a son, or a brother, or a husband, or relative or sweetheart in Vietnam. The words are Abraham Lincoln's: "I pray that our Heavenly Father may assuage the anguish of your bereavement and leave you only the cherished memory of the loved and lost and the solemn pride that must be yours to have laid so costly a sacrifice upon the altar of freedom."

Mrs. Plummer Attends 4-H Conference

"Good leaders are vital to the success of the 4-H Club program," Kentucky 4-H Extension agents were told at their annual training conference last week.

Mrs. Faith N. Plummer, Mt. Vernon, was among the 100 Kentucky Extension 4-H youth agents attending the May 21-23 conference, which had leadership development as its theme. Other 4-H agents from the Westmoreland Trail Area at the conference were Paul Claiborne, London; Wallace Halcomb, Williamsburg; Joe Steady, Manchester; Vernon Banks, Hadan.

With over half the nation's population under 25 years of age, good leadership is especially important today, the agents were told. Speakers discussed new leadership concepts and ways to develop and work with leaders of young people.

Dr. Robert Bills, dean of the College of Education at the University of Alabama and a former University of Kentucky staff member, emphasized, in his discussions with the group, the changing abilities and interests of today's young people and the kinds of leaders they need.

"Something's going on among our young people," he said. "Nobody understands it fully, not even the youth themselves, and you can look at it in different ways. You can focus on the extremes, represented by the hippies, or you can examine the brilliant academic achievements of many; the idealistic purposefulness in career choices and preparation; the willingness to stand up and be counted; to do hard work in great causes; the bold, honest quest for 'something better.'"

"In the past, people were limited in their development by faulty notions about how people mature and how intelligence is formed. Now with our increased knowledge of children's abilities and potentials, we've given our youngsters opportunities to develop that many of us did not have. Perhaps we've produced a more truly open person, a more knowledgeable person, a person with, more commitment, but also a person who frequently has less ability to evaluate for himself the consequences his actions.

Youth needs leadership, but not the leadership which determines things for him," Dr. Bills continued. "The leadership youth needs is one which listens and understands; which encourages and stimulates; which clears paths and raises sights."

"The major task of 4-H and its leadership must be the development of people-adults as well as youth," he said. "4-H must help young people to become experienced; it must help them examine values and themselves in relation to new thoughts and ideas; and it must help them to select directions for their own development."

"Today's youth are truly far beyond what any youth has ever been before. They're not merely more sophisticated, they are more intelligent, better educated, more feeling, more committed, and more self-directing. To this extent our parents, our society, and our institutions, including 4-H, can be proud of what it has done. But the need for a new type of leadership has been created."

Dr. Bills went on to describe the qualities of such a leader, emphasizing the importance of the leader's genuine interest in the individual young person's development and in the leader's ability to help the young person decide things for himself instead of deciding them for him.

Developing leadership in young people as well as in adults was a major part of the program discussion. Miss Emmie Nelson, Program services associate, National 4-H Service Committee, Chicago, Ill., talked to the agents about new concepts for teen leaders.

She suggested a leadership program for young people, age 16 to 19, with the teen leader serving in an adult-like role in working with younger boys and girls.

She noted that such a program is somewhat different from existing 4-H youth leadership programs, with the teen leaders being at least 16 years of age and having more responsibilities than most junior leaders.

Miss Nelson pointed out that these teen leaders would not be required to carry a 4-H project or to have had previous 4-H experience. The "teaching-like" role of the 4-H teen leader would give him an opportunity to test his knowledge and skills, and particular emphasis would be placed on learning as much as possible about leadership.

"Youth must be provided an outlet for their restless desires, caused by a search for jobs, for identity and for independence; concern about their future; a desire to make a contribution to society, such as a role in solving social, economic and political problems; and a desire to assume adult roles," Miss Nelson said.

"Society insists that youth develop behavior which is expected by adults. The 4-H teen leader may be a way to accomplish these goals."

During the conference, members of the state 4-H Club staff also discussed Kentucky 4-H leader needs, leadership training techniques, and teaching materials. Agents also discussed methods and problems of developing and working with leaders in their areas.

"Rockcastle County has 527 4-H Club members and 17 adult volunteer 4-H leaders, Mrs. Plummer said after returning from the conference.

"Many other young people, age 9 to 19, in this area could benefit from 4-H participation if we had more leaders to work with them. And 4-H today has activities to interest any young person, in towns and cities as well as on farms—the major emphasis is on personal development."

"You can help the young people in this area by serving as a 4-H leader," she continued. "Extension offers training, teaching materials and guidance to those who are enough interested in our young people to be 4-H leaders. For more information on serving as a 4-H leader, call or visit the local Extension office at 256-2403, Courthouse, Mt. Vernon, Ky. 40456.
