Mr. and Mrs. Don Stevens, Donnie and Nancy, and Mrs. Grace Mariani of Louisville spent the week end with Mr. and Mrs. Ambrose Albright and Josephine. Mrs. Ruby Adams and Mrs. Charlotte Bullock and

Greg were in Somerset Tuesday. John Hasty is home after spending a week in the Rockcastle County Baptist Hospital. He is resting along fine. Mr. and Mrs. J.C. Allen, Tammie Dee, and friends from Indiana visited Bro. and Mrs. J.B. Allen over the week end and attended the singing at the Ottawa Baptist Church Saturday night. Word was received Sunday morning of the death of Herman Jones of Middletown, Ohio. He was a former resident of Ottawa. Several from here attended his funeral at Middletown.

TIME NEVER DRAGS for Mrs. Jane Hart, director of Education & Materials Section, Department of Mental Health. Mother, wife, author, state employee, she meets the demands of each role with deep conviction.

Mrs. Alba Hamm celebrated her birthday Sunday at her home with all of her children, grandchildren, and great grandchildren present. We wish her many more birthdays.

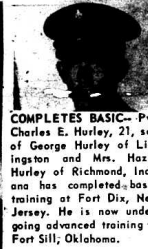

Robert Barker is a patient at the Somerset City Hospital. We wish him a speedy recovery.

We extend our sympathy to all the family of Herman Jones.

Your Man in Frankfort

It takes a strong man these critical days to stand up for you in the State Legislature. You have such a man in Harold DeMarcus. He is the man who knows what is on your mind... a man who knows what is troubling you... a man who has the wisdom and the courage to meet tough issues head-on. Inflation. Respect for law. Firm justice in our courts. Clean air and water. Better schools. He has addressed himself to all these issues. He knows you deserve to know where he stands. Put KENTUCKY First! Vote for Harold DeMarcus on November 4.

"...an historic night" in the 61 years of the National Press Club October 9 when National 4-H Week was observed with a large representation of national 4-H leadership from business and government.

Jack Linkletter, famed young TV star and son of Art Linkletter, who are National 4-H Foundation Co-Chairmen for the West Coast—received rapt attention and a standing ovation, a rare occurrence with Press Club audiences, as President John D. Hoffmann generally praised today's younger generation, and declared that much of their demonstrated respect reflected their feelings toward hypocrisies in an adult society that dictated youngsters, not necessarily practiced by their elders. Linkletter cited the need for 4-H principles among today's youth, and said that he and his father were committed to the current $8 million capital fund campaign to expand the National 4-H Center, located in suburban Washington. The expansion of 4-H membership, and emphasis into urban and suburban areas by the traditionally rural organization, was outlined by Chris Peterson and his colleagues on the 4-H Report to the Nation Team, representing the Nation's 36 million 4-H members. The scope with which these young city youngsters earned repeated applause from the audience.

Carter Announces $139,000 For Wolf Creek

Congressman Tim Lee Carter announced today that $136,000 has been approved for the further development of the Wolf Creek Trout Hatchery at Wolf Creek Dam located in Russell County.

Congressman Carter stated that the House had appropriated these funds, but that they were later stricken by the Senate in a similar bill. It then became necessary to persuade both House and Senate members who met in Conference in order to come to an agreement on this appropriations bill. Congressman Carter was noticeably pleased that the trout hatchery had received funds this year when so many cutbacks are taking place, for in his words, "This will bring about completion of Kentucky's first trout hatchery which is so badly needed here in Kentucky."

Edited By:
Thornton McConnell

Gov. Louie B. Nunn sees no way during the latter half of his term for the state to provide enough money for merger of the University of Louisville with the University of Kentucky on a complete and equal basis.

That does not mean, he said in an interview Tuesday, that merger cannot take place on a limited basis. That's up to the Legislature and the two universities. They will decide, he said, on the extent.

The interview with the governor was to clarify statements he made regarding the proposed merger at his monthly press conference Monday which was misinterpreted by some of the newsmen present.

The governor announced at this conference that in the two months following his Aug. 13 personnel freeze, the number of state employees had been reduced by 2,877, or about 10 per cent. Three per cent of this number, he said, were full-time employees, of whom the state now has 26,482, or 396 fewer than when he took office.

He also said that cuts in vital services by the preceding administration had not only been restored but expanded and "we are now providing more service to more people with fewer employees."

STANDING OVATION

Caution in changing the system of Kentucky courts was advised by Governor Nunn in a talk to the Kentucky Citizens' Judicial Study Committee, Inc., at Lexington. He received a standing ovation.

The governor suggested fewer problems may be caused by the system itself than by lawyers too eager for success, judges too concerned with politics, and a public too quick to avoid jury service.

He asked whether "we should be trying to accommodate ourselves to some of the laws rather than changing the laws to meet the whims and fancies of various groups." A theory of justice, he said, can be summed up by an alliteration — "pardon, penal and probation" — but he made it clear he favors another approach — "sure, swift and severe."

APPALACHIA

The Appalachian Regional Commission was asked by Governor Nunn to add five counties to the 11 already in the Southeastern Kentucky health demonstration project. The five are Wolfe, Lee, Owsley, Jackson and Rockcastle.

The program, on which nearly $9 million has been spent during the last two years, covers a wide range of health services and facilities, such as helping to build or expand hospitals and provide mobile health care.

GOVERNOR AND JOE

Governor Nunn and Joe Creason will be the first day and second-day luncheon speakers respectively at the Kentucky Highway Conference at the University of Kentucky, Lexington, Nov. 18-19. Creason is president of the UK Alumni Association and a columnist for The Courier-Journal.

Delegates will be welcomed to the conference by UK President Otis Singletary, Dr. Robert Drake, dean of the UK College of Engineering, will preside. More than a score of speakers are listed.

Banquet speaker Nov. 19 will be Harold Kelley, chairman of the State Public Service Commission, C.B.

Owens, president of the Kentucky Association of Highway Contractors, will preside.

SAVES EDUCATION

The two per cent sales tax added to the then existing three per cent sales tax by the 1968 Legislature at the request of Governor Nunn was credited with "saving" our educational system" by Alex McIntyre Jr., commissioner of the State Department of Motor Transportation, in a talk at Louisville to the Kentucky Wholesale Grocers' Association.

McIntyre said, "we have steepled the exodus of schoolteachers from Kentucky by raising made possible by the increase add have been enabled to add other areas of education through the minimum funding program." He added, "higher education, as well as mental health and highways have also benefited."

ROOM TAX UPHOLD

The Louisville-Jefferson County Convention and Visitors Bureau will have an estimated $200,000 a year to finance an expanded tourist and convention program as the result of a decision handed down by the Kentucky Court of Appeals.

The decision was one in which the court upheld the validity of Jefferson County's two per cent tax on hotel and motel room bills. The tax, authorized by the 1968 Legislature, was levied on transient room charges by Fiscal Court last December.

WEIGHT WATCHERS

George L. Johnson, director of weights and measures, State Department of Agriculture, says every Kentucky housewife has the right to watch supermarket clerks weigh meat that is not prepackaged and she should not permit it to be weighed in cartons or on large sheets of wrapping paper.

If she does, says Johnson, she might pay up to 10 or 15 cents for the carton and paper before she gets to that first ounce of meat.

MENTAL HEALTH

The Waverly Mental Health Center, Kentucky's 21st, was opened in Jefferson County, Dr. Dale H. Farabee, state commissioner of mental health, described the centers as the cornerstone of the state's mental health-mental retardation system.

A further development in mental health activities came when Farabee committed $125,000 in department funds to completion of the $1 million Riverside Good Counsel Center for the mentally retarded in Covington.

ONE OF EIGHT

Albert L. Schneider, director of Eastern State Hospital's Day Treatment Unit, is one of eight rehabilitation counselors in the U.S. eligible for the National Rehabilitation Association's Elkin Award. The Elkin Award is presented annually for service beyond the usual duties of a Counselor. Schneider last year established a club in Lexington to help restore psychiatric patients readjust to community living.

NAMES CHANGED

The names of Falmouth Lake State Park and Falmouth Lake have been changed to Kincaid Lake State Park and Kincaid Lake. The new names, stemming from Kincaid Creek, which feeds the lake, were requested by a group of Pendleton County residents.

PROCLAMATION

Because appropriate ceremonies have long marked the harvest season and bread symbolizes food, Governor Nunn has proclaimed the period of Oct. 26-31 as "Harvest Festival Week" and Oct. 28 as "The Day of Bread" in Kentucky.

Not many years ago a person would have been confused if his friend had told him that he had caught a rockfish from any one of several Kentucky lakes. He would have wondered, no doubt, exactly what was a rockfish or what it was doing in Kentucky.

His questions can be easily and enthusiastically answered by biologists of the Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources. The rockfish, he will be told, is nothing more than a land locked ocean striped which has found its way into Kentucky waters through the stocking program arranged by the Department.

"The saga of the rockfish started in the late fifties. It was then that the local fish and wildlife agency reached an agreement with the South Carolina Fish and Wildlife Department whereby Kentucky was permitted to catch rockfish from the Santee-Cooper reservoir at Monck's Corner and transport them to Kentucky where they were stocked in Kentucky, Cumberland and Herrington Lakes. Mostly those caught by pole and line (to be within South Carolina law) averaged about two pounds each, with the largest one going whooping 12 pounds. They were freed in the chosen lakes in the hope that they would reproduce and furnish to Kentuckians a fast growing fish to augment the present high population.

Cooperating with TVA: biologist and with those from Tennessee the project of catching and returning adult rockfish to Kentucky waters continued and the fish did well in these lakes. They grew with great rapidity and before long 16 pound rockfish were quiet frequent in the stocked lakes. Of course, the payoff came when one that tipped the scales at better than 34 pounds was hoisted from Lake Cumberland. That weight has not yet been surpassed in Kentucky waters although a rough fish netting operation in Her-ington Lake a few months ago turned up a 40 pounder which was promptly returned to the water unharmed. The adult stocking program continued until 1966 with the hope that the fish would reproduce. No reproduction has been established, although eggs found in Kentucky Lake were determined to be fertile.

In 1966 a new method of stocking was started. That year, in cooperation with the South Carolina neighbors, over 3 million fry were transported from Monck's Corner and released.

Homemaker's Help

By Faith N. Plummer Area Extension A.

Americans buy more spices than most anybody, both in quantity and variety, probably because of the many ethnic groups who need them for their long-remembered native dishes, and because of the expanding tastes which come with expanding incomes. Almost all the spices we use must be imported, and last year we sent about $37 million overseas to bring back the taste accents we wanted. This was about three-fourths of 1 per cent of our total agricultural imports for the dollar. Some of the dollars did not bring back much by weight. A pound of Spanish saffron cost close to $100 by the time it arrived in

New York, making it the world's most expensive spice.

Pepper is the most common import among spices. In 1968 over 53 million pounds of black and white pepper arrived in the United States. That is enough to supply every man, woman and child in the country with a quarter pound.

All spices are derived from aromatic parts of tropical plants. Those imported in quantity to the United States are allspice, cardamom seed, cassia and cinnamon (both of which are called cinnamon in the U.S.), cloves, ginger, nutmeg and mace (different parts of the same plant), pepper, turmeric, and vanilla beans.

Allspice gets its English name because it smells something like a combination of cinnamon, cloves and nutmeg. It is one of the two important spices native to the Western Hemisphere and is grown chiefly in the Caribbean Sea. In 1968 we brought 1 million pounds plus.

Cardamom is the tiny, black seed of a fruit from a plant related to ginger. A native of India, it is now grown in Asia and Central America. Used mainly in baked goods, it is an especially important ingredient of all authentic Danish pastry. Cardamom is high-priced spice, costing from $2 to $5 per pound unprocessed. Imports in 1968 were 117,000 lbs.

Cinnamon and cassia are both marketed as cinnamon in the U.S., and come from the bark of related trees of the laurel family. Both are much used in baked goods, to flavor chocolate, chewing gum, dentifrices, medicines, liqueurs and non-alcoholic beverages, and for pickling. Cinnamon is also used in some perfumes.

Total U.S. imports in 1968 were 9 million pounds of cassia and 5 million pounds of cinnamon. Cloves are the dried flower buds of a tropical evergreen tree native to eastern Indonesia. In the United States we use cloves for pickling and preserving, making catsup, for baked goods and in chocolate. Clove oil is used to flavor chewing gum and candy, in soap and perfume and in pharmaceutical preparations.

A poor 1968-69 crop in Zanzibar has sent prices up from 38 cents a pound of a year ago to a recent $1.75 wholesale in New York. Ginger is imported in the form of roots and last year we brought in 3.6 million pounds from Nigeria, Sierra Leone, the Fiji Islands and Jamaica, to be used in soups, pickling, meat preserving, situp, toilet and medicinal preparations.

Nutmeg and mace both come from the same tropical evergreen tree; nutmeg is the pit or seed of the fruit and mace comes from a thin, fleshy "aril" around the pit. Since there is much more of the pit than the aril, nutmeg is in much larger supply than mace and costs less. Nutmeg is used in baked goods and sweets and in seasoning of processed meats; mace is most used in baking and in flavoring meat dishes. Both yield an oil used in drugs and pharmaceutical products.

Total imports of both last year slightly exceeded 4.6 million pounds. Pepper is the dried berry of a tropical vine, chief suppliers to the U.S. are Indonesia, Brazil and India. Although we are the world's greatest pepper consumer after Tunisians and Moroccans, our consumption per person has been decreasing, perhaps because it is rarely used as a food preservative and because of the greater use of preservatives and convenience foods which are already lightly seasoned and there is little tendency to add more when eaten.

Turmeric comes from the aromatic roots of a plant related to ginger. It is used mainly as an ingredient in curry powder and prepared mustard. Last year we imported nearly 3.4 million pounds, mainly from India and Jamaica.

COMPLETES BASIC- Pvt. Gary W. Longford completed basic training September 26 at Fort Knox. He is now stationed at Fort Carson, Colorado for eight weeks AIT Training in combat mechanics. The Private is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John C. Longford of Route 2, Mt. Vernon and is married to the former Colleen Griffith.

Vanilla beans are the fruits of a climbing orchid native to Central American and the Caribbean. It is used mainly in flavoring and other substances, but some is used for fragrance in perfumes. The United States usually buys all of them call for ginger, about two-thirds of the world vanilla exports, and in 1968 a total imports into this country were nearly 2.2 million pounds. Use of synthetics is increasing. Curry powder is a blend of spices, ground seeds,

Let's Keep Ahead of Chickweed

Now is the time to do something about chickweed! Most people do not become concerned about this serious pest until spring. When does chickweed grow? Chickweed is a winter annual. The seeds germinate in the autumn and grow into plants that live through the winter. The plants develop new seeds from April until early summer, then die. In cool, moist, shaded areas, some chickweed may continue to grow during the summer. How can chickweed be identified? The leaves are arranged in pairs along the stem, and are usually egg-shaped, smooth, and less than 1 inch in length. The flowers are small with five white, deeply notched petals. The plants are shallow-rooted, and the trailing stems often form mats that crowd out desirable lawn plants. What can be done about this pest now? Since the majority of chickweed seeds germinate in the fall, now is the time to start to control them. Check the lawn frequently to determine if chickweed is present.

Scattered plants should be pulled immediately. Larger infested areas should be treated with a herbicide. Recommended materials are (a) 2,4-D, (b) 2,4,5-T, (c) silvex, or (d) banvel-D. These materials are sold under various trade names as single materials (2,4-D, for instance), or combinations (2,4-D, and silvex). For rates to use, follow directions on the label of the containers in which the material is purchased. Care should be taken to avoid a spray-drift to desirable plants. Newly seeded lawns should not be treated with any herbicide until the grass has become well established.

The chemicals frequently do not act as quickly in fall as in the spring when weather conditions are more favorable, but they will be effective if properly applied. Annual weeds such as crabgrass and cantal are evidence now in the lawn, but good control can't be easily obtained this late in the season. Wait until early next spring before treating to control the latter two weeds.

Any of the herbicides listed are effective against buckhorn, plantain, wild garlic, broad-leaved plantain, ground ivy, dandelion, henbit, and other broadleaf weeds.

Repeated spot treatments may be necessary. Clover may be severely injured or killed. Do not use banvel-D where the chemical may be washed into root zones of desirable trees and shrubs.

Suggested time of application of herbicides for broadleaf weeds in Sept., Oct., or early Nov. or March, April and May. For chickweed and star-of-bethlehem, October or November or in the spring during March and April.

Treat Strawberry Fields Now for Weed Control.

It's still not too late to get a fall treatment applied for controlling winter annuals such as chickweed and henbit. These weeds germinate in the fall, grow during the winter and spring, then develop seeds and die in late spring and early

REVIEWING AN AUDIT—James Thompson and staff secretary Shirley Cooanougher, conduct follow-up on an audit conducted for a government agency. Auditor Thompson initiated a program of reviewing audits to insure that the reports are put to constructive use. Thompson views the Auditor's office in a consulting role for all government agencies, "to help them utilize modern business techniques."

summer. The chemicals recommended for control are Sesone 90%, at the rate of 3 to 4 pounds per acre; Enide 50W, at 10 to 12 pounds per acre; or Dymid 80W, at the rate of 6 to 7 and one half pounds per acre.

Since these are pre-emergence materials, the strawberry fields must be cleaned before these chemicals will be effective. They also will help control small grains that might come up from the straw much used on many fields.

News

New books received from the Department of Libraries. DODOS AND DINOSAURS, by Dorothy E. Sheltie. Dodos and dinosaurs, animals of the past, where are they today? This slender volume acquaints the reader with some of the great museums which are inhabited by the remains of these animals of the past and relates the stories of how they got there. Grades 4-6.

THE FLAME OF FREEDOM, by Clifford Lindsey Alderman. England's present state of freedom is based on a long history of conflicts, some of which were internal conflicts like the Peasant's Revolt of 1381. This volume presents the theory that although this revolt failed at the time its influence has been felt by succeeding generations in forging the freedom that Englishmen enjoy today. Grades 7-9.

GROWING TIME, by Sandel Stoddard Warburg. Jamie is saddened by the death of his dog and friend, King. However, his Uncle John and his Granny lighten his sadness by helping him come to an understanding of death and the continuity of life. Grades 3-4.

A KIND OF SECRET WEAPON, by Elliott Arnold. Winter 1943 in Denmark - even the children can not escape the terror of Nazism. Young Peter must face the reality of war when he discovers that his parents are taking part in the resistance movement. Grades 7-up.

THE KING'S FALCON, by Paula Fox. King Philip found himself surrounded by quarrelling and bickering. His only solace was the secret training of a young falcon. As his unhappiness increased, the falcon provided a surprising path of escape. Grades 4-5.

THE LONG PILGRIMAGE, by George Finkle. The dark days of early Europe and the reign of Charlemagne provide the background for this tale of a young Norseman's exile. A vigorous narrative permeated with history. Grades 8-12.

MASHA, by Marc Koy. Masha was one of the chosen ones, a Russian girl chosen to attend the Smol Institute for Noble Girls. Masha, a novel of Tsarist Russia, contains a story of interest to young girls while involving the historical past. Grades 7-up.

MY ENEMY MY BROTHER, by James Forman. World War II is ended and the inmates of the concentration camps are free. Four young Jews being the long journey to the Promised Land of Israel. However, despite their dreams, they find that Israel is a place of reality as well as dreams and that

They were kept in the troughs for 12 days, during which they were fed brine shrimp. At this stage 200, 000 were removed to brand new Green River reservoir. The remainder were placed in the Frankfort Hatchery holding ponds where alfalfa hay was used for fertilizer. Near the end of June the youngsters had reached a length of two and one-half to three inches and 23,072 were stocked in Lake Cumberland on July 1. Quite naturally, a large number of the original shipment was lost due to predation and other causes.

The young fish are now showing up in these two lakes. Two were caught from Herrington Lake on October 6. They were nine inches long. On October 8 one was taken from Lake Cumberland this one measured 10 inches in length. These catches were made by fishermen using pole and line. The biologists are of the opinion that a great number of these small fellows survived. Next week they are to make extensive tests in these two lakes to try to determine if the survival has been up to expectations.

It will be that in a few years rockfish will be a new and welcomed attraction in Kentucky's lake system.
