LODGE OPENS—Carter County fieldstone, Norman arches, cedar siding, and a mansard roof are welded together amidst the lush greenery of the Eastern Kentucky mountains in the stately lodge complex at Greenbriar Lake State Resort Park at Greenup. The tri-level lodge, located on Ky-1, 15 miles west of Ashland, opens for public use on Friday, May 28. To the right of the lodge are three levels of luxurious guest rooms. Each of the 36 rooms has individual climate control, a private patio or balcony that overlooks the lake, and each utilizes Kentucky-made furnishings to cater to the traveler's comfort.

The first of what will probably become more or less routine, accident of it's type happened last Friday night when the above Pontiac went off of Renfro Road and wound up on its top in the edge of Lake Linnville. There were no injuries, and therefore no accident report filed with State Police so we have no details on what happened or who was involved. Just suffice it to say that who ever it was was lucky and that water gets awfully deep out there.

Despite local controversy revolving around Estill Co. School Supd. Buford Horton, Estill County's new $1.7 million high school was dedicated last week with Gov. Louie B. Nunn officiating.

Some 3500 Estill Countians turned out en masse to greet Governor Nunn who arrived by helicopter for the town's early morning parade which began the day's dedication festivities.

Horton, imprisoned for four hours the previous day for contempt of court in connection with the local controversy, was cheered vigorously by children and adults alike both at the parade and dedication ceremonies.

The local controversy, besides promoting disharmony, cost the town a unique honor—the presence of Mrs. Spiro T. Agnew, who had accepted the governor's invitation to dedicate the new high school.

Governor Nunn, dedicating the school, in honor of 102 Estill Co. residents killed in action in the last four wars, said, "Estill County High School can be a cohesive force rather than a divisive battleground."

It can help unite the people here in the common cause of happiness and progress, he added. "If the flicking spark of unity and concern we see here today is kindled and not doused out in the days ahead, it can be what it should and must be—a significant part of Kentucky and America."

KENTUCKY GETS BONUS FOR HIGHWAY AD CONTROL

Kentucky has received $89,477.54 in federal funds as a bonus for effectively regulating outdoor advertising along the commonwealth's Interstate Highway System.

Robert E. Johnson of the Federal Highway Administration presented state Highway Commissioner R.E. King with a check in that amount for one of the eight sections of I-75 in Kentucky. The figure is one-half of one per cent of the total construction cost of that section of the federally funded highway.

Under a federal law passed in 1958, outdoor advertising is prohibited within 660 feet of the edge of the right of way along the interstate highway.

It is a policy of the U.S. government to award bonuses to states which effectively regulate the law. However, the payments are made infrequently because of a shortage of federal funds.

Kentucky has received $353,134.42 in bonuses since the act went into effect, and has submitted requests for more than $903,000 in bonuses for sections of I-64, I-65, I-71, and I-75. The state expects to receive bonuses for these sections as funds become available.

BOARD OF EDUCATION UPGRADES & DOWNGRADES SCHOOLS

Six Kentucky high schools were upgraded in accreditation at a recent meeting of the state Board of Education. Four of the six were given comprehensive ranking, the highest of three accreditation classes.

The board also listed five other high schools as being downgraded because of overcrowded facilities, inadequate number of normal courses, lacking scientific equipment and having poor facilities and libraries.

Harry Deas High School in Louisville received the biggest jump in accreditation during the board's meeting. Deas was previously listed as conditionally accredited but received a comprehensive accreditation since this is the first year the Louisville school has had a senior class.

Scott, Montgomery and Nelson County High Schools were upgraded from standard to comprehensive ratings while Casey County and Leslie County, previously listed as basic, the lowest level of full accreditation, also received comprehensive.

Downgraded schools included Memorial High in Lincoln County and Eubank and Nancy High (both in Pulaski County) from standard to basic, and Hustonville High and McKinney High (Lincoln County Schools) were placed on emergency accreditation.

Seventeen other schools, operating for the first year, were also accredited and now has 407 fully accredited secondary schools, 79 at the comprehensive rating, 201 at standard and 124 at the basic level.

6000 KY EMPLOYABLES RECEIVING WELFARE

Merritt S. Deits, state Economic Security commissioner, has estimated that 6,000 Kentuckians, mostly women, are receiving state welfare payments although they are able to work.

Deits said there are 35,000 families on the program but "75 to 80 per cent are immediately employable without any added training."

The lack of job openings, transportation and day-care facilities for children were reasons given for the persons who cannot work.

The families—with dependent-children—caseload continues to grow monthly by 800 persons—40 per cent of these in Jefferson County.

Deits also free the Medicaid program of free medical benefits for the needy is growing rapidly. He estimated that Medicaid, which is costing $64 million in federal and state funds this year, will rise to $129 million by 1975 under present federal guidelines.

"Any of the several national health insurance plans now before Congress would be preferable to Medicaid," Deits commented.

He attributed most of the increasing caseload to "broader knowledge of welfare benefits" and to work of outside organizations such as welfare rights groups, Appalachian Volunteers and Volunteers in Service to America (VISTA).

"One of the stated purposes of the national Welfare Rights Organization," said Deits, "is to overload and harass the existing welfare system and make it so expensive it will collapse, to be replaced by a minimum-income system."

LAKE CUMBERLAND TO TEST LITTER LAW

The Army Corps of Engineers recently announced Lake Cumberland will be the test site this year for a national effort to reduce littering at lake and dam sites.

Last December, Kentucky senator Sen. John Sherman Cooper successfully amended the 1970 Flood Control Act to authorize the engineers to issue citations to litterers, at areas they administer.

The Cooper amendment calls for penalties up to $500 in fines and six months imprisonment. Engineers will be empowered to issue citations to offenders. Offenders have the option of paying the ticket or contesting it before J.E. magistrates.

Before enforcing such a policing program, the engineers decided to work out administrative and technical problems at a test site.

Since Cooper is the author of the amendment and also the ranking Republican on the Senate Committee that oversees the engineers, his request that Lake Cumberland be chosen as the test site was honored.

The Kentucky senator, riled over lake and dam site littering incidents reported in newspapers and receiving complaints from residents protesting the increasing number of vacationers who leave behind a stockpile of litter, found the Corps of Engineers powerless to punish litterers. Cooper immediately espoused their cause and framed his amendment to correct the situation.

MENTAL HEALTH SYSTEM RANKS AT TOP

The National Institute of Mental Health said, "Kentucky has the best system of mental health care in the country," according to Mrs. Lillian Press, executive assistant to state Mental Health Commissioner Dale Farabee.

Speaking to the Frankfort Community Council recently, Mrs. Press also said two national publications—The New York Times and Reader's Digest—have featured the state's mental health system and were impressed with the program.

The Department of Mental Health has existed as a separate entity only since 1952. Prior to then, it was part of the now defunct Department of Welfare.

Charged with the responsibility to investigate and form programs for mental retardation, alcoholism and drug abuse, in addition to other mental health problems, the department is dedicated to two basic principles:

"People have the right to receive treatment when they go to a hospital."

"People of the entire state must be able to receive help for their problems close to their homes."

To improve treatment in the state hospitals, patients

Watchline

"They have their work cut out for them—and they better get at it."

That's how Republican Congressman Gene Snyder sees the situation facing his party's statewide candidates in the general election.

Few top Republicans will acknowledge it, but Snyder in effect is putting his finger on the point—the outcome of the Democratic primary was not what they wanted.

There was some disagreement on whether they preferred to run against Lt. Gov. Wendell Ford or former Gov. Bert Combs in the governor's race.

But the last thing they wanted was for Ford to cap his uphill fight with a decisive victory that could build momentum for the fall. And few really thought it could happen.

Gov. Louie Nunn prefers to look at the possibility it came more because of lack of enthusiasm for Combs than real Ford strength.

But one of the GOP inner circle—one who really thought Ford would win the primary—admits Ford's the type of hard campaigner who can win any time out, thus echoing Snyder's view.

And House Speaker Julian Carroll's victory in the lieutenant governor's race could spell more trouble. "Experts" had it figured out—Carroll could beat Atty. Gen. John Breckinridge only if he were carried along by a big margin for Combs.

But Carroll proved again how little attention the people pay to us experts. And he's a canny hard worker on the campaign trail.

There could be problems of geography or personalities. But the election of Gov. Edward Breathitt and Lt. Gov. (Cont. to 3)

The Week At Livingston

Hubert Mullins of Hamilton, Ohio visited his brother, Oscar Mullins and Mrs. Mullins over the week end.

Clarence Jones of Covington was here for Memorial Day and visited his aunt, Mrs. Eaker Jones and Mr. Jones.

Mrs. Connie Black of Chicago, Illinois spent last week with her mother, Mrs. Eva Black.

Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Halcomb of Frankfort spent Sunday with his brother, Mrs. "TOM DUNCAN" (Cont. From 2)

Harry Lee Waterfield proved that isn't fatal if the candidates can reach the people.

So the clear message to the top of the Republican ticket, Tom Emberton and James Hoat, is "they better get at it."

Those who haven't watched Senate Majority Leader Walter "Dee" Huston in action, closely might be surprised at talk that he may try to jump all the way to the U.S. Senate next year.

But he's the steady, even-tempered type who could do it. He's the rare kind who wastes little energy in re-arrangements—and less in grandstanding.

Huddleston put aside his own desire to run for lieutenant governor in order to become chairman of Ford's campaign—at a time Ford people weren't exactly a threat to over-populate the earth.

Now, as a Combe backer put it, "Dee stands real tall."

The unofficial ramrod of the Ford campaign, former state party chairman J.R. Miller, drives himself—and others—so relentlessly that he looked as though he'd aged 25 years in 24 hours.

But before the night was over he was talking strategy for November with a Combe leader who'd come to make peace.

The most arduous job of the night came when a big wheeler dealer who backed Combe looked around at 6:35 p.m., just 35 minutes after the polls closed, and said, "I'm J.R. Miller's phone number."

Perhaps no organization felt so pounded by Combe's defeat as did the Kentucky Education Association. It doesn't officially endorse candidates but all its chips were riding on Combe.

But the staff is taking sur-prisingly good naturedly some jokes that they might get some leverage by "threatening" to endorse a candidate in the fall race.

Seriously, some KEA leaders do see the disaster as a possible chance to get the political facts of life across down the line.

Now if they can just pipe daylight to the NEA in Washington.

Some reporters had a feeling almost from the start that Combe's heart wasn't really in the race. It fits with his statement in conceding "I feared to win almost as much as I feared to lose."

Hunting & Fishing

There's no telling how many fishermen there are who are perfectly satisfied to catch only bluegill.

They are the experts along this line—people who scorn other types of fish. Their choice is bluegill and they don't mind letting the world know.

These individuals, surely, must take a bit of ribbing from the snide bass caster, who abhors the thought of catching any other fish than the black bass, of the trout fisherman who thinks that he is the only purist in the business.

This is all well and good. As they say, it takes all kinds to make up the world and the same goes for fishing in Kentucky. So, to go "fmod" about it all, each fisherman has his individual "thing" to do.

Now that the bluegill fisherman has been equated with the so-called upper echelon, let's get down to the nitty-gritty of catching this tiny, terrific fighter.

It's about time, right now, for the bluegill to be on the nest. He moves in a bit later than other species of fish and deposits his eggs in a nest found out for that purpose by both male and female of the species. Usually the eggs are on a clearing on the bottom of the lake, in water not more than a couple of feet deep.

Many individuals may spawn eggs in this area and, once spawned, the adults stand by to protect the eggs from marauders, and therein lies their downfall. They'll battle anything that comes near the nest—even a lunger bass is not to fight by the sharp pinpointed darts of the bluegill.

They'll attack a turtle or any type fish that veers too and they'll do the same to a preferred morsel of food neatly fashioned to a tiny hook.

They'll hit with a vengeance that makes the art of "hooking" these fellows little more than a sharp jerk on the line. The fish is then reeled in through the shallow waters as it veers from side to side, violently bugling all the while.

This fishing procedure over a nest may continue for hours, as a seemingly unending supply of bluegill are waiting nearby to take the tempting lure.

The fisherman may use a cane pole, which is ideal for farm ponds; he may use the casting or spinning rod or, if he desires to display mild skill with his flyrod, he may just about wear out his arm while casting a small fly over and across the nest, bringing in a flapping bluegill on almost every cast.

This is the principal type bluegill fishing while the gamblers are on the nest. At other periods they may be harvested by different methods. The procedures will vary as the season progresses, but there never seems to be a lack of bluegill.

They can be found in farm ponds, in major lakes or small lakes, and also in streams. In all those places, they'll offer an individual some very exciting and profitable fishing, since, from a food standpoint the bluegill is rated among the best.

Why not give it a whirl? You'll like it and you'll find that bluegill fishing can be just about as exciting as any other type.

They were chaperoned by Mrs. Lloyd Cain and Mrs. Lee Durham.

Summertime — and the living is grubby!

Be sure you have hot water a-plenty... the flameless electric way

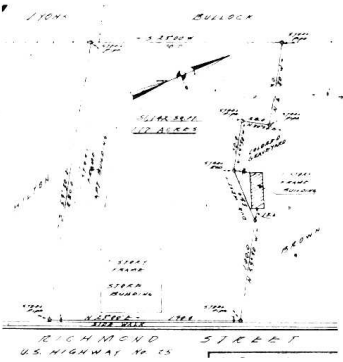

Little guys can make a big play for hot water: lots of showers — shampoo — laundry. But hot weather and hot water always go together. More clothes to wash, more showers and baths, along with all the regular needs from shaves to dishwashing. Luckily, a new rapid recovery electric water heater can meet all your demands as fast as they come along. No waiting for hot water — no flame — no venting — no pilot — no worries.

See your dealer about heating water the plentiful, carefree way — electrically.

You'll love to stay in hot water — electrically. KENTUCKY UTILITIES COMPANY
