Tom Duncan's Frankfort Watchline

If you understand the candidates for governor you're not really listening. The flapping and squawking over a possible special legislative session compounded the normal problems of pinning down politicians.
 Republican candidate Tom Emberton accuses Democratic Lt. Gov. Wendell Ford of a "time lost" stance on issues. But Emberton's prime issue is a pledge to exempt take-home groceries from the sales tax.
 And Ford hasn't committed himself to the exemption. He says he "favors" it—and that's different in political parlance.
 Emberton forces also say Ford dickered himself when he didn't call a special session while Gov. Louie Nunn was away.
 But Ford said his position was unchanged—that if Emberton is sincere in his pledge he should get Gov. Nunn to call it.
 Emberton's camp says he didn't ask the governor to react either way because he's "not the lieutenant governor's messenger boy."
 But it would be nice if the public could find a messenger boy. *****

campaign trail after hospitalization. Her doctor's a friend but you'd think he was a stranger—she's trying to get her to take it a little easy. *****
 Schools have been talked so little in the campaign that it just doesn't seem like a Kentucky race.
 Perhaps it's because of the apparent rebuff of the Kentucky Education Association in the Democratic primary.
 But the quiet in KEA circles—and the vagueness of the candidates—has made the campaign almost suspiciously devoid of the usual school-money fights. So far, Of course, wrangling among the colleges and universities has taken up some of the slack. *****

POSTER CHILD—Three-year-old Glenda Sue Yates visited the office of Gov. Louie B. Nunn recently to promote the National Cystic Fibrosis Research Foundation's Breath of Life Campaign Sept. 12-18. Glenda, who is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gary Yates, of Rineyville, is the 1971 Poster Child for the fund-raising campaign in Kentucky and Southern Indiana. (Steve Mitchell Photo)

All the talk about the state's responsibility for schools hinges on this in the Constitution: "The General Assembly shall, by appropriate legislation, provide for an efficient system of common schools throughout the state." Efficient, it says. *****

 Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Farris, Pineville, Ky.

"Friends don't believe me," says Mr. Farris. "It'll show 'em our electric heat bills. The key to our comfort and economy is insulation. And those bills are it — no maintenance and repair bills."
 "And the comfort is really something," says Mrs. Farris. "Electric heat responds so quickly—even, draft-free, clean — winter coming doesn't bother us at all."

Gov. Louie B. Nunn announced the Kentucky Industrial Development Finance Authority's loan and factory tax credit programs helped 1455 new jobs in the state last year.

Seventeen industrial plants and 16 industrial subdivisions were financed in some 16 communities.

The authority made loans to 26 small firms in Edgewood, Burksville, Henderson and Carter County and new plants were financed in Fulton, Kenton and Owensboro.

The governor said some 140 jobs were saved in London when the authority approved $500,000 to rebuild a burned out plant there.

Some 36 plants have been financed in 45 towns totaling $7,423,300 since the authority was created in 1959.

WHITE HALL SHRINE
 WILL OPEN SEPT. 16

White Hall, the newly restored 19th century home of Kentucky abolitionist Cassius Marcellus Clay, will be officially opened to the public during ceremonies Sept. 16.

The 40-room Madison County mansion has been renovated and furnished under the supervision of Mrs. Louie B. Nunn and the State Department of Parks.

Mrs. Nunn has located many of the original family furnishings and brought them back to White Hall to be housed in Kentucky's newest state shrine.

Cassius Clay aroused the anger of family and friends because of his opposition to slavery in the 1840's and spent most of his life defending man's right to be free.

Clay was credited with bringing the 1860 Republican Convention to Abraham Lincoln and later served as ambassador and advisor to the president.

For years after Clay's death White Hall stood empty, the victim of age, weather and vandals.

The state purchased the home from the Clay heirs in 1968 and began the renovation.

COMMERCE CHIEFS SAY ECONOMIC PICTURE GOOD

State Budget Director Jack Blanton and Commerce Commissioner Paul W. Grubbs have expressed optimism at the effects of President Nixon's wage-price freeze on Kentucky.

Blanton said the state will gain about $60,000 during the freeze on automatic raises which otherwise would have been paid to state employees.

He added that the road fund will benefit from higher gas sales if the automobile excise tax is removed and increased economic activity resulting from the new policy will bring more tax dollars into the state treasury.

Grubbs noted announcements of new and expanded industries in Kentucky have increased to a $2.5 million-a-day pace since President Nixon announced his new policy.

"Although these figures cannot be considered a direct result of President Nixon's new economic policy, we believe they are indicative of Kentucky's immediate future

In economic development," Grubbs said.

VEE VACCINATION MUST REACH 90 PERCENT TO STAY VOLUNTARY

Resolutions passed by the Kentucky legislature on Sept. 7 require that horse encephalomyelitis (VEE) may become compulsory if the voluntary program does not cover the state thoroughly.

Voluntary vaccination began Sept. 7 and state officials hope to reach 90 per cent of Kentucky's horses.

"If we don't get 90 per cent coverage, we'll quarantine all unvaccinated horses at their premises until they are vaccinated," said state veterinarian L. G. Northington.

He said any lesser vaccination will leave the state in danger of a VEE outbreak. Local veterinarians will perform the vaccinations with the U.S. Department of Agriculture paying all costs.

"All indications are that the disease will get here (to Kentucky) unless we stop it," Northington said.

CONSUMER SPOKESMAN FRAUDS IN CAR WARRANTY

The Kentucky Citizens Commission on Consumer Protection commended American Motors Corporation (AMC) for its expanded 1972 model warranty coverage.

Mrs. Elizabeth Sowards, commission chairman, praised the new plan in a letter to AMC Board Chairman Roy Chaplin.

The expanded warranty includes provisions for additional parts coverage and "loaner" cars which owners may use if their own cars are being repaired.

Mrs. Sowards said her commission receives many complaints from motorists who experience the inconvenience of having to rent extra cars to drive while their own are being repaired.

She expressed hope that the big three auto makers will follow the lead of AMC in its voluntary action to solve this "agony of consumer dissatisfaction."

FOOD STAMP USE DOUBLES PREVIOUS YEAR

Merritt S. Deitz, economic security commissioner, announced the value amount of food stamps purchased with food stamps over the past fiscal year is double that of the previous fiscal year.

Deitz noted food stamp recipients could purchase $1 worth of food for each 30 cents of coupons during the just-ended fiscal year while each $1 coupon represented about $2 in grocery-buying power the year before.

Deitz said food stamp users purchased some $76.9 million worth of food during fiscal 1970-71 and paid about $23 million for the coupons.

This compares with $38.8 million in food purchased during fiscal 1969-70 with coupons costing $4 million.

The number of Kentuckians using the stamps increased from about 158,000 in fiscal 1969-70 to about 280,000 last fiscal year.

Deitz credited the growth with the increased value of

Hunting & Fishing

Come the cooler, crispier yet foggy morning of September and the nitro gets in a dither about the upcoming hunting season. By then many have already sampled the dove and squirrel hunting, but many more prefer to wait for the quail or the waterfowl and the rabbit or deer.

Having gained his right to hunt, he then can go about scouting the area, so on opening day he won't be the "lost hunter" without a plan of action. If he knows the area which his game has used he will know they are pretty apt to be back in that section during the hunting season. So, he can go directly to this choice area without wandering over the whole area when the time comes.

opens. His first step would be to see his doctor for a physical check-up. Having passed this basic course, he could go into a training routine that would bring him into prime hunting condition. This is not so much poppycock. And if the persons who have suffered heart attacks while hunting could talk, they'd tell you the same thing.

Refusal to Work

Out of work? To millions of people in that predicament, unemployment compensation is a Godsend. But in order to collect those weekly checks, you have to be willing to take another job if one turns up.

This raises problems. How willing do you have to be? If the job is good but the hours are bad, must you accept anyhow—or lose your right to compensation?

Generally speaking, the law makes reasonable allowance for hardship cases. For example: an unemployed woman was offered a job on the night shift at a nearby factory. When she refused to take it, her unemployment compensation was cut off.

But in a court hearing, she told the judge that she would have had to walk home in the dark through a tough neighborhood—and that she had been terrorized twice by nocturnal assailants.

The judge decided that her refusal to take the job was justified, and ordered her compensation payments reinstated.

That does not mean, however, that you can wait indefinitely until the perfect job comes along. Another case involved a restaurant worker who, accustomed to working from 6 a.m. to 3 p.m., turned down a job that started two hours later in the day.

"Frankly," he explained, "it's just too hard for me to change my hours, I'm used to the old way."

But this time, a court denied his right to unemployment compensation. He was out of work, noted the court, more by choice than by necessity.

Suppose a job that is offered would create religious conflicts. A number of cases have arisen involving Seventh-Day Adventists who were not willing to work on Saturday.

Almost invariably, the courts have accepted this as a legitimate reason for rejecting a job, with no effect on the person's right to collect unemployment compensation.

Work which requires one to violate his moral standards, said one court, "is not suitable work."

Tips for Small Grain Seeding

Test your soil and supply the suggested liming and fertilizer materials. A soil test is the first step to profitable small grain production. A pH of 6.0 to 6.5 is best, and nitrogen should be applied both in the fall and spring. If your small grains are part of a double cropping system the P and K requirements for both crops should be applied in the fall.

Proper seedbed preparation. The seedbed should be shallow, fairly smooth, and firm. A properly prepared seedbed will permit uniformity of seeding depth. Plowing to a depth of 2 to 4 inches is usually all that is necessary when following other row crops.

Proper seeding depth and seeding rate. Seeding depth is important because small grains need strong root systems at the proper depth to withstand winter "heaving" of the soil. Seed should be planted from 1 to 2 inches deep, depending on soil and moisture conditions.

Seed source and variety selection. Good stands are the result of planting good seed. Choose seed that is: true to variety; highly germinative (90% or better); Free from weed seeds and crop mixtures; chemically treated. Planting certified seed is the surest way to obtain these qualities.

What to do in... September

Renovate the home lawn. Late September is a good time to de-batch, reseed, and fertilize. Ask your county Extension agent for a copy of "Home Lawns in Kentucky." Spray broadcasted lawns to control broadleaf weeds. Fall is a better time than spring - you are less likely to damage dormant shrubs and trees. Clip hedges for the last time. Transplant and divide perennials.

Carlo Saylor of Route 3, Mt. Vernon used a new technique this year in the cutting and housing of his tobacco. Mr. Saylor and his son, Max C. Saylor of Hamel, Illinois, took some wagon rails, affixed new axles and tongue and used car wheels, then some used steel pipe and made rails and they had themselves portable tobacco scaffolds for the wilting and curing of tobacco. Mr. Saylor, shown in the above photo with two of his wagons filled with cut sticks of tobacco, takes the wagons into the field with him and affixes the sticks to the rails on cutting. The wagons, designed to hold a capacity of 85 sticks of tobacco each, are then rolled to the barn and can be rolled outside to take advantage of pretty days to help wilt the tobacco. When the tobacco has been well wilted, the wagons are simply rolled into the barn and the tobacco cured until stripping time on the same racks. To date, the Saylor's have built six of the wagons and have sold two of them. They are 25 feet long and 3 1/2 feet wide with two rails for hanging tobacco.

Corn Production Under Forecast

Check bottom leaves of roses. If red spider mites are present, spray with Kelthane. Continue applying fungicide sprays weekly if you have an infection of Blackspot disease. Plant daffodil bulbs. Stake tall chrysanthemums as they start to bloom. Bring houseplants in. Take cuttings on tender annuals that you want to overwinter. Transplant evergreen shrubbery. Transplant barefoot deciduous plants only after leaf drop. Replace old garden labels. Begin watering shrubbery under eaves and in dry places. In preparation for winter. Do garden construction work now while the weather is cool. Select vegetables for winter storage. Harvest and store white potatoes and sweet potatoes. Sow lettuce in coldframe. Sow winter cover crops in vacant garden areas. Pull onions as soon as tops die down.

Corn Production, forecast at 5,266 million bushels, is 1 percent (79 million bushels) less than forecast of August 1 but still record high, and 28 percent (1,156 million bushels) more than last year. Dry August weather in the West—corn belt is primarily responsible for the decline from a month ago.

Soybean Production, forecast at a record 1,186 million bushels, is 4 percent (49 million bushels) below last month but 4 percent (51 million bushels) above 1970.

Sorghum Grain, forecast at 881 million bushels, is 3 percent (27 million bushels) below a month earlier but 26 percent (244 million) above last year.

All Wheat Production, at 1,625 million bushels, is record high, 2 percent (95 million bushels) above last month, 18 percent (247 million bushels) above 1970.

Winter Wheat Production, at 1,163 million bushels, is nearly 1 percent (7 million bushels) above last month and 79 percent (166 million bushels) more than last year.

Other Spring Wheat is forecast at 376 million bushels, 5 percent (7 million bushels) above last month and 79 percent (166 million bushels) more than last year.

Durum Wheat, at 87 million bushels, is 1 percent (3 million bushels) more than last month, and 72 percent (36 million bushels) above 1970.

Fall Potato Production is forecast at 247 million cwt., 2 percent (6 million cwt.) below 1970. For all seasonal groups, 1971 production is placed at 314 million cwt., 3 percent (11 million cwt.) below 1970.

Take Care of Your Potato Crop

Many Kentucky homeowners go to a great deal of expense and work to produce a good Irish potato crop. But producing is only one aspect; storing the potatoes can be a bigger problem. Certain precautions taken at harvesting time and shortly thereafter can do a great deal in preventing substantial storage losses.

One of the first considerations is to make sure your potato crop is mature. Immature potatoes are subject to rapid breakdown. After digging, potato tubers should remain on the ground for an hour or two before handling. This drying helps to prevent skinning or peeling and subsequent disease infection. The best time for homeowners to dig potatoes is in the evening after the sun has gone down. At this time of the day there is no chance of sun scalding. Leaving the potatoes on the ground surface overnight also helps cool them down some. The temperature is a most important factor to consider when storing potatoes. When potatoes are stored in piles, the temperature may increase enough, and the aeration be so poor, that a form of injury called "blackheart" results. The best storage temperature is between 35 to 50 degrees F. To facilitate air movement, store potatoes in baskets or boxes.
