

County Agent's Notes

By: H. Lee Durham

Do You Know Your Tomatoes?

"Hot-house" ... "green-house" ... "vine ripe" ... do you do battle with this army of labels every time you shop for tomatoes at the fresh produce counter in your supermarket? If you're like most consumers, you're probably thoroughly confused by all these terms.

In one study 860 shoppers in three metropolitan centers were interviewed as they entered the produce department of the sample supermarkets. Each shopper was shown three types of tomatoes: greenhouse (sometimes referred to as hot-house), vine ripe, and tub. Only one-third of the people interviewed correctly identified the greenhouse tomatto. Of this group, most knew it because of its color. The second identifying factor mentioned was the stem; 33 percent of those giving the correct answer mentioned either the stem of prominent calyx. This stem or calyx is usually a distinguishing feature since it is usually left on the greenhouse tomato and taken off all others.

As a consumer, you might also like to know some characteristics of the other types. Vine ripe tomatoes are those picked at the mature-green stage and shipped to consumer area where they ripen naturally. When ripe they are packed into tubes containing three to four tomatoes. Most tube tomatoes are produced outdoors in Mexico and in the southern part of the United States. A few of the tube tomatoes may be Kentucky-grown since a limited acreage is left entrusted for this use in northern Kentucky counties. It has been determined that as a consumer you probably should be a tomato purchaser on the basis of how you think they will taste. To most people, color and appearance is precluded to taste. But other factors may need to be considered too. Meanness, firmness of the flesh, and thickness of the internal walls, as well as acidity are improvements being made by horticulture plant breeders. Not all of these factors can be judged by a quick look—you may discover one type you especially like and try to buy it regularly.

Tomatoes that are allowed to reach maturity either in greenhouses or in the field will taste better and have more nutrition than those picked of non-maturity.

During the winter months, locally-grown greenhouse tomatoes can be excellent buys. Most of these tomatoes are left on the plant until ripe. Their flavor is excellent, with no wasted hard centers.

The Slow Moving Vehicle Emblem

Kentucky law requires that the Slow Moving Vehicle Emblem (SMV) be prominently affixed to all mobile farm machinery sold, leased or rented in or for use in Kentucky after January 1, 1971. No later than January 1, 1973 the SMV will be required, by Kentucky law, on all farm machinery when operated on the public roads.

An earlier memorandum indicated that OSHA (the Occupational Safety and Health Administration) would consider self-employed persons as covered under this act. Thus, a farmer operating his own tractor on a public road would be required to display the SMV Emblem. That ruling has been revised. The Assistant Regional Administrator for Technical Support of OSHA has stated that self-employed persons are not covered. Thus, the federal law requires the use of the SMV Emblem on a machine when operated by an employee, separate and distinct from the employer.

Kentucky law requires the SMV on all machinery sold, leased, or rented after Jan. 1, 1971. By January 1, 1973 it will require the SMV on all farm machinery operated on the public roads by an employee. These are the statutory requirements.

Use of Feed Containing Diethylstilbestrol

Diethylstilbestrol, a growth hormone, has been used extensively for several years in feeds, primarily for finishing beef cattle. The withdrawal period has recently been changed by the Federal Food and Drug Administration from 48 hours to seven days. This means that feeders finishing animals for market and using a feed containing diethylstilbestrol must switch to a non-medicated feed for the last 7 days before the animals are sent to market.

Change in the withdrawal period was made because residues of the drug were found in ten samples of meat in the United States. No detectable residues of diethylstilbestrol are permitted in meat. All the samples containing residues were liver tissue; none has been found in muscle tissue.

Extensive tests of meats are being made and any residues of diethylstilbestrol discovered in meat will subject the seller of the animals producing the meat to prosecution.

All feed processors making medicated feeds containing diethylstilbestrol are advised that the withdrawal period must be changed on such labels in the state registration file. Submit a revised label containing the proper withdrawal time to the State Feed Registrar, Room 124, Kentucky Agricultural Experiment Station, Lexington, Kentucky 40506.

eggs, chopped cooked meat or fish or grated cheese. Shoulder cloed is a meaty cut from the outside of the chuck. It has a well-developed flavor, and no bone. Allow 1/2 of a pound or more per person.

Select the Right Plant For Your Home
Success in growing decorative plants in the home depends as much on good judgment as on skill in caring for them, according to horticulturists of the Agricultural Research Service of the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

If you want plants only as decorative accessories, buy them for their appearance. Get healthy, well-formed plants that are near the size that you need for decorative effect.

You must decide how much attention you can give your plants if you are interested in keeping them in good condition year after year. If some part of your home cannot be adapted to the specific needs of your house plants, then choose that which tolerate an environment that is comfortable for human inhabitants. Before making a final choice, make sure the plants cultural requirements suit your lifestyle and home environment.

How Fancy the Fruit?

Which grade of blueberries should you use when making muffins? Apples for pie cherries for turnover? The Consumer and Marketing Services of the U.S. Department of Agriculture has issued a new publication, "How to Buy Canned and Frozen Fruits" (S-10), that explains federal grades, provides buying, storage, and serving tips, and describes the styles of many kinds of canned and frozen fruits. A helpful two-page chart, in color, tells you how to use grades and styles.

Canned and frozen fruits differ in quality -- taste, texture, and appearance -- and are usually priced according to their quality. U.S. grade standards -- measures of quality -- have been established for most processed fruits by the U.S. Dept. of Agriculture's Consumer and Marketing Service.

fruits are the very best, with an excellent color and uniform size, weight, and shape. Fruits of this grade are excellent in use for special purposes where appearance and flavor are important.

U.S. Grade B, or Choice fruits make up much of the fruits that are processed and are of very good quality—only slightly less perfect than Grade A in color, uniformity, and texture.

U.S. Grade C or Standard fruits may contain some broken and uneven pieces. While flavor may not be as sweet as in higher qualities, these fruits are still good and wholesome.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Q. I have hired a woman to stay with my mother as a companion while she is recuperating from an operation. Should I report her earnings and pay the social security contributions on the wages I pay her?

A. Yes, if you pay her cash wages of $50 or more in a calendar quarter (3-month period of the year). For more information, get in touch with any social security office. Ask for the free leaflet, Social Security and Your Household Employment.

Q. Since I will be 62 later this year, I plan to apply for reduced monthly social security retirement benefits a couple of months before my birthday. I understand that I can earn up to $1,680 a year without losing any benefits. From what date do I begin counting the $1,680 — from the date I apply for benefits or the date I become 62?

A. Neither. Start counting from the first of the year toward the $1,680, even though you apply for benefits and become 62 later that year. However, regardless of your total earnings for the year, benefits are paid for any month in which you do not earn over $140.

Q. I am 65 and have Medicare, but my doctor visits and accept direct payments from Medicare and has sent me an itemized bill. How can I file a claim for the amount I pay Medicare to reimburse me over the $50 annual deductible?

A. Follow the directions carefully in Your Medicare Handbook. Fill out Part I of the Request for Medicare Payment form and attach the itemized bill. Then mail the itemized bill and the form to the address shown in the upper left-hand corner of the form. You'll find extra copies of the form at any social security office. If you have any problems understanding the form, or visit any social security office. The people there will be glad to answer your Medicare questions.

Have a question about social security and its retirement, survivors, disability or Medicare benefits? See your telephone directory for the phone number and address of the nearest social security office.

3,507 Persons Receive Food Stamps In Nov.

During November, 3,507 low-income persons in Rockcastle County received food stamps valued at $86,202. Acting Commissioner of the Department of Economic Security Garret Johnson announced today. This record compares to 3,351 low-income persons who received food stamps worth $82,848 during October.

In November 1971 only 3,474 persons in Rockcastle County received food stamps at a cost of $86,202.

Commissioner Johnson pointed out that Kentucky's Food Stamp Program, administered by the Kentucky Department of Economic Security and the Department of Agriculture, ensures the health of the nation's low-income families through better nutrition. Families in the program exchange an amount of their own money, usually spent for food, to purchase food coupons. In addition, families receive bonus coupons to boost their buying power.

Kentucky's 1973 County Food Stamp Program has experienced tremendous growth during the past year. During November, 3,507 food stamps valued at $86,202, in November 1970, 182,290 persons received food stamps worth $4,499,367.

CPA Explains Increased Exemptions, Deductions

Taxpayers preparing to file their 1971 Federal income tax returns will find that the most significant changes from last year are in the treatment of exemptions and deductions, according to Kenneth Bunger, president of the Kentucky Society of Certified Public Accountants.

An exemption is the amount that can be subtracted from adjusted gross income for each of the taxpayer's dependents, including himself. On 1971 returns, Mr. Bunger reports, $675 may be taken for each exemption — up from $475 last year. Persons who are over 65 or blind are allowed a double exemption, or $1,350. (The personal exemption rises to $750 in 1972.)

A deduction is an expense that falls into one of several categories which the law permits to be subtracted in whole or in part from gross income at taxable income. The major categories of deductible expenses are taxes, interest, medical and dental costs, charitable contributions, and casualty losses (fire, theft, etc.).

The CPA official says that instead of itemizing deductions many taxpayers, especially those in the middle to lower brackets, may find it advantageous to take the standard deduction of 1% of adjusted gross income of $1,500, which ever is less, a sharp rise from the 10%-30% standard deduction of last year.

Mr. Bunger expects the change to cause millions of additional taxpayers to claim the standard deduction, rather than itemizing, and says there should be a further trend in that direction next year, when the standard deduction goes to 1% - $2,000.

For low-income families there is a minimum standard allowance which, together with the personal exemption, means a single person with income of not more than $1,725, and a family unit with income of not more than $3,400, will have to pay no Federal income taxes at all.

Although the low-income allowance was intended primarily to benefit families at or below the poverty level, it applies also to dependent members of more affluent families. Mr. Bunger says. Thus, a taxpayer's child can have an income of up to $1,725 and owe no taxes, while still being claimed as an exemption by the parent. This has been notified for years after 1971.

One major new deduction is available in 1972 to families where the taxpayer and wife work or there is only one employable adult. Such taxpayers may deduct up to $400 a month of the costs of the care of child care of living, according to the CPA official.

Mr. Bunger warns that some taxpayers will be mistaken if they assume that the bigger personal exemption and standard deduction will result in large tax refunds. One reason why Congress passed the increases, he says, was to correct a defect in the withholding tables that caused too little to be withheld from the pay envelopes of millions of workers. These taxpayers — especially in families where both husband and wife work — would have faced sizeable tax bills on April 15th — up to several hundred dollars in some cases.

For most, the new rules will not bring any windfall, but they should cause taxpayers without balances more closely the tax obligations, in his opinion.

WEATHER

Partly cloudy and colder through Thursday. High Thursday in mid-30's. Little chance of precipitation.

DON'T FORGET

The annual meeting and banquet of the Rockcastle County Saddle Club will be held next Monday night at the Broadhead Cafeteria at 7 p.m.

Tickets to the event may be purchased from any director or you may make reservations by calling 256-2150.

"SCHOOLS OUT, SCHOOLS OUT" was probably the refrain of these sleighing enthusiasts as they got their first day's snowfall from school due to the weather Wednesday. The snowfall was light, only one-inch, according to weatherman Bill Cox, but the rain which fell all day Tuesday made for a solid sheet of ice under the snow and travel for the school buses was too hazardous. ### Capitol Digest

Gov. Wendell R. Ford said his administration will introduce the General Assembly a single legislative package to both remove the food sales tax and impose a severance tax on coal.

"I said separating the two measures might give an advantage to opponents of the coal tax who are expected to give that measure stiff resistance."

Governor Ford estimated about $80 million per year would be lost from the food tax removal while the coal tax would yield an additional $30 to $40 million annually.

He said he originally planned a tax based on the price of coal at the mine and had not changed his mind as he continued to hear the opposition.

The governor also said he will not call a special session for reappointment after the regular session ends in March.

The state's current reapportionment plan was voided by U.S. District Court which ruled that the plan violated the state's constitutional provision to redraw its legislative districts during the 1972 session.

"I believe we can dress it up to meet the opposition of the court," Governor Ford said, "I won't go into it in any depth, merely to top it up and take some of the bugs out."

1971 SHOWROOM RUSH SHOULD EASE CAR TAG SALES THIS YEAR

State officials predict a decrease in the rate license plate sales during 1972 because of recent national economic policy.

New 1972 tags went on sale Jan. 1. The 1971 tags expire March 1.

F.L. Pantecost, of the Revenue Department's Tax Law Division, said Kentucky license plate sales, which jumped by about 100,000 tags last year, probably will increase less than half that amount in 1972.

He attributed both trends to President Nixon's removal of the excise tax on automobiles last August.

"Many people who would have waited until this year to buy new cars, tax rates above 10 percent in the state rooms when the tax was removed," he said, "That gave a huge increase in plates last year, and should mean fewer tags sold for new cars this year."

Paul E. Tanner, of the department's research staff, said 1,905,288 '72 tags of all types were sold in Kentucky and estimated 1972 tags would reach about 1,950,000, health dept. will move to close open dumps.

The Kentucky Health Department announced it will take legal action to close all open garbage dumps in the state after Jan. 15.

A 1968 law ordered a June 1968 closing date for open dumps but the Health Department says many still are operating.

Sam Johnson, director of solid waste disposal for the Health Department, said county health departments are helping track down owners of the open dumps.

The information gained will be turned over to the office of the attorney general for legal action.

PARK BUILDING WILL EASE COSTS PUT IN LINE, JOHNSON SAYS

Parks Commissioner Ewart Johnson announced the state is going to stop building large resort-hotels parks, at least for the time being.

"We've got all the parks we need for now," Johnson said. "We want to start right here and clean up, improve and expand the ones we have."

After the examination of parks, finances Johnson said it appears about 50 cents of each dollar is spent for labor costs and the rest on materials.

"We're looking at food costs and labor costs, and we're going to try to bring those things into line with costs in similar operations in private industry," Johnson said.

The gas system. He will be laying it in an effort to cut labor costs.

BILL WOULD STOP STRIP MINING

State Rep. Raymond Overstreet, Liberty, has asked the Legislative Research Commission to draft a bill prohibiting strip mining during the regular session.

The bill would prevent the construction of the landowner involved. The bill would require applications for surface mining permits to be filed with the surface owner's consent from the surface landowner.

It would get around the controversial broad form deed which now enables the owners of underground mineral rights to get the mineral any way he wants without the surface owner's permission.

The broad form deed has been upheld in the Court of Appeals.

"The people should decide whether they want their land stripped, not some governmental agency and not some conservation group," Overstreet said. "This bill would allow the people who are affected to make this decision."

Watch Those Dates!

Ever wonder whether the food you are buying is fresh? Do the freshness codes on food products confuse you? If so, you have plenty of company. Eighty percent of the customers interviewed at 18 Chicago grocery stores did not know that the date on food products indicated when the product should be removed from sale.

USDA's Economic Research Service interviewed a sample of shoppers in a Chicago food chain, six each in a low, middle, and higher income neighborhood, to determine customer reactions to freshness codes.

While most shoppers correctly associated the date with freshness, 45 percent thought the food should not be used after the indicated date.

Actually, the date indicated when the product should be pulled from sale but that there was still ample shelf-life for storage of the items at home.

Three-fourths of the users interviewed said they checked the open-dating codes frequently. Bread and milk were the most often date-checked items, followed by refrigerated dough products, eggs, dairy products, such as sour cream and cottage cheese.

Frankfort Watchline

The cry of "tripper bill" undoubtedly will be heard in the current legislative session if the Democratic administration moves ahead with what it wants to do—gain some breathing room for hiring policymakers and a horde of job-seekers.

The plain fact is that the state merit system, enacted a decade ago by the Democrats—who worried then only about factional enemies, not the Republicans—who emerged stronger at a time when the Democrats wist it were weaker.

The irony is that the system has become stronger because the Republicans began firing so many Democrats indiscriminately after 1967 and, finally, test cases were filed with the Personnel Board and the courts.

Now the merit system—designed to protect state employees against whimsical firings, political retaliation and the like—has come to mean something. And one of the things it means is that the allies of Gov. Wendell Ford can't "clean house" as they'd like to without a pretty good case against everyone they want out.

Personnel Commissioner Ralph Howe is a case in point. He is hired by the Personnel Board—which happens to be all-Republican at the moment—and enjoys the protection of the merit system.

The Democrats, trying to oust him, don't see why he should. They feel that officials in policymaking posts should be aligned with the governor they serve.

One thing to remember in that what the General Assembly creates, it can destroy or shelve—and that includes the merit system.

Thus, you can look for some proposed changes, and you can expect the cry of "tripper" again.

administration. But an amusing one has escaped public notice.

Before leaving office, Gov. and Mrs. Louis B. Nunn invited one of the blues-blooded Bluegrass horse couples for dinner—on a date that after Gov. Wendell Ford's inauguration.

Historically afraid of touch with mudsane political matters, the bluesbloods arrived at the executive mansion, as they had on previous Nunn invitations, only to be told that "the governor is having supper."

After some confusing messages back and forth, the bluesblood realized the governor wasn't the one who invited him.

And what did he say after the chaffered ride to the Nunn's new home in Lexington?

"My God,"

THE MIDNIGHT OIL—However you felt about Wendell Ford, you had to admit he was a campaigner.

However you feel about Ford now, you had to admit he's a worker.

More than once since taking office he has been at his desk past midnight, going over the biggest state headache of all—the new biennial budget.

Finance Commissioner Don Bradshaw and Revenue Commissioner John Ross are losing sleep along with the governor.

All this might mean Ford's budget message could be ready sooner than expected—possibly in the next couple of weeks.

HURRY UP AND WAIT—As news reporters chafed outside Ford's office recently, waiting for a long-delayed press conference, one sage got philosophical about it.

"It's a whole lot like the first baby," he said, "You never really know when it's going to get here."

PARDON ME, WHICH GOVERNOR!—Slogans are bound to happen in the change of

TOO MUCH, TOO SOON—After a special citizens' committee recommended the old proposal for annual legislative sessions, one was commented that even the current 60 days every two years is too long.

"They ought to make it two days every 90 years," he quipped.

Killer Kite

"Kite weather" sent eight-year-old Jimmy into an open field to fly his lock string a copper wire for a string. He soon had his box kite scudding into the sky.

The kite, which Jimmy's kite crossed a high-tension power line and deadly voltage crackled downward, killing him instantly.

However, the court held the company not responsible. The judge said Jimmy's use of copper wire instead of steel string was too unusual to have been foreseen and guarded against.

Courts generally agree that power companies cannot be expected to take precautions against such accidents. Nevertheless, since electricity is such a dangerous product, they may carry a higher-than-average burden of responsibility.

In another case, a boy's kite snagged on a power pole. When he climbed the pole to retrieve his kite, he touched an uninsulated wire and suffered a bad burn.

This time, three factors weighed against the company:

- 1) that the pole was right next to a playground;
- 2) that it had low step easy for children to climb;
- 3) that no DANGER signs were posted.

A court duly awarded damages to the injured boy, saying that the company could fairly have foreseen this kind of an accident.

True tree climbing is even more foreseeable than pole climbing. Thus:

A boy got a shock from an uninsulated wire that passed through the upper branches of a tree in front of his house. Said later for damages, the power company pointed out that there was nothing in its tree so snagged kite, no frightened kitten, no tempting fruit—that would justify the boy's venture into the treetop.

But the court held the company liable anyhow, for misleading human nature.

"The immemorial habit of small boys to climb trees," said the court, "is a habit which corporations stretching their wires over such trees must take notice of."

30 Million Women Work, Earn Social Security

Close to 30 million women are earning social security protection for themselves and their families through their own work, according to social security officials here.

"The working woman has both disability and survivors protection," a social security spokesman said. "If she becomes unable to work for a year or longer because of a disabling accident or severe illness, she and her dependents may be eligible for cash monthly payments from social security."

In some cases, social security helps pay the costs of services from a State rehabilitation agency. So, she might also be eligible to get help in getting back on her feet and returning to work, the spokesman said.

If a working woman dies prematurely, monthly cash payments from social security can help her children through school (until they're 22, if they remain full-time students and unmarried).

"If a working woman's husband is 62 or older and dependent upon her for his support, he also can be eligible for monthly social security payments on her work record," the spokesman said.

"Even though her husband may be working at a full-time job, her children are still eligible for benefits on her work record," the district manager noted.

On her own work record, the working woman can retire at 62 with reduced monthly cash payments. Or she can wait until she's 65 and get full monthly cash benefits, the spokesman said.

But, if she could collect higher benefits as a wife on her husband's record, she can choose to collect the higher payment.
