America's Comfort Team— Electric Heating and Proper Insulation

Electric heating is the cleanest, most efficient way to keep your home warm and comfortable in the winter. And you can make it even more efficient - and even save money by making sure your home is properly insulated.

Proper insulation of ceilings, walls and floors prevents heat loss. Storm doors and windows prevent escaping heat while weather stripping of windows and doors help keep the cold drafts away. It's important that all doors and windows fit tightly.

Proper insulation is a good investment that returns benefits in clean, 100% efficient electric heat. Ask your Rural Electric System to help you make certain your home is insulated properly for comfort as well as economy.

Electricity - the cleanest energy you can use.

Seven Signs

Cancer has seven warning signals: Change in bowel or bladder habits; a sore that does not heal; unusual bleeding or discharge; thickening or lump in breast or elsewhere; indigestion or difficulty in swallowing; obvious change in wart or mole; nagging cough or hoarseness.

If you have a signal, see your doctor right away, the American Cancer Society says.

HIGH TIDE AND HIGH TRASH-- As snow blankets the more unsightly evidence of where people have been, rain, such as we had early Wednesday morning, emphasizes it more by floating it up out of the crevices for all to see. This photo was taken along Roundstone Creek. Pretty isn't it?

For Dad Pick a day to quit smoking cigarettes. It's not always easy to quit, the American Cancer Society admits, but it could save your life from lung cancer.

Potatoes are Plentiful

A meal just doesn't seem complete without potatoes. This could be why some people consider potatoes the single most important item in any produce department, and why many people think of potatoes as a staple in any well-stocked kitchen.

Potatoes haven't always been popular, however. At one time people ate potatoes only if there was nothing else to eat. According to legend, a Frenchman used an ingenious method to create interest in potatoes. Upon returning home after many years in Germany, where he had acquired a taste for potatoes, he was given a plot of land by the King of France. He promptly planted potatoes in the field, which was guarded by a soldier throughout the day. People became curious and stole potatoes from the unguarded field at night. Some of the potatoes were eaten, and others were planted.

Once, when the potato plants were in bloom, the Frenchman presented a bouquet of the flowers to the king, who placed one in his buttonhole and gave the rest to the queen. She later appeared wearing them in her hair. Of course, everyone wanted to imitate the sovereign. So little by little potato plantings became popular, and so did the potato.

Today there's no need to be devious about getting people to eat potatoes. And it's a good thing, too, because potatoes are so abundant. Not only fresh potatoes, but instant mashed potatoes and frozen french fried potatoes, as well, are on the plentiful foods list of the U.S. Consumer and Marketing Service.

Baked potatoes are always popular. Mix a little chopped onion and crisp bacon crumbles into sou r cream and use as a topper for the potatoes.

Fluffy whipped potatoes are good broiled. Place dollops of the whipped potatoes on a baking sheet, and broil 5 minutes to heat the potatoes and slip them with brown. Serve the potato dollops with any meat or poultry entree. Grated cheese added to the potatoes before broiling makes them extra lacy.

Frozen french fried potatoes are tasty when sprinkled with chili powder and onion salt as well as regular table salt.

Rebirth of the Rolltop Desk

Rebirth of the rolltop desk in your attic, or somewhere about the house?

If so, you may not have a valuable piece of furniture, but also one of today's most highly-prized status symbols. These introductions to yesterday's business are now much in demand by antique dealers who will often pay fancy prices for them if they are in good condition.

There was a time when the rolltop desk with its numerous pigeon holes, drawers, and compartments was an American monument to pluck and hard work. It had its genesis in the post-Civil War era, when efficiency, order and gadgetry amounted to almost a mania and when, according to one furniture researcher, one man with one big desk could operate a large business himself and keep his records in one big, fat file.

The rolltop itself, with its flexible sliding roof of rounded wood slats glued to a heavy canvas screen or held together with small wire cables, was both a marvel and menace. It could, when the occasion demanded, be quickly snapped shut and locked to conceal confidential papers, a half-eaten lunch, or a bottle of spirits.

Sometimes the sliding roof, called a "lamour," stuck in the grooves of its support, requiring much hand and pulling to work it free. Sometimes it came loose unexpectedly, resulting in skinned knuckles or broken fingers.

Now, rolltops are coming back and are in such demand that furniture factories are turning out replicas by the hundreds, as well as some modern versions, with the roll-top features. If you happen to have an original, take care of it.

It may have outgrown its usefulness at the office, but it's still dandy as a bill-collecting and letter-writing center at home. And if your tastes run to a more modern desk, you might clean up that old rolltop and peddle it to an antique dealer. Or repair and refinish it yourself for resale. You can get how-to-do-it instructions on furniture refinishing from the Rockcastle County Extension Office located in the courthouse.

STATE INVESTIGATES BAIL BOND 'TIPPING'

The state Insurance Department has launched an investigation of Kentucky bail bondsmen who pay jailers or law enforcement officers who refer business to them.

Insurance Commissioner Harold McCutley said the practice was uncovered by his department's investigators while looking into "tipping."

He declined to name the companies involved or say where the practice has been occurring. McCutley estimated the probe would be finished within one week and said investigators would require concrete proof and affidavits before taking action.

by perline n. underkin
Well, I don't quite know how to explain what happened to us this week but I look at our type and you will realize there needs to be some explaining done by somebody. It all began early Monday morning when we realized we were going to have to take our typesetting machines to Lexington because the type wasn't justifying. We took them over there early Monday afternoon, signing all the way because we were going to lose a whole day on getting the paper ready. Well, after waiting around all afternoon, we returned to the shop to pick up the machine only to learn that it wasn't ready. You can imagine the horror with which we greeted this news but could only turn our frustrated selves toward home so we could return to Lexington Tuesday and pick up the machine. This was accomplished about 2 p.m. Tuesday afternoon and visions of working all night long were already going around in our head when lo and behold, we discovered the machines still weren't justifying. At this point, since there might be some children reading this column, I won't go into detail about what was said concerning the ancestry of the machines and the people who had taken $84.00 of our money to fix them. Anyway, what I am trying to explain is that your eyesight is not as good as you think it is. "More crooked than a dog's hind leg" this week simply because we didn't have time for another trip to Lexington to try and fix whatever was supposed to be fixed originally. We shall be over there bright and early Thursday morning however, with few choices left for whatever we could do in the office. But, enough of that, the only good thing to come out of the whole mess this week was the fact that I got to see "The Godfather," Monday at TurfLand Mall. It's a blood and gore movie but if your stomach is strong enough and you don't mind "R" rated movies too much, you would probably enjoy it. I was discussing the cast with Fred and she reminded me that Marlon Brando was in it whereupon I, having read the book, immediately assumed he would have the role of the younger son who eventually takes over the "family business." She proceeded to set me straight about that bit of casting advising me that instead he was The Godfather. I was surprised, to put it mildly, since whenever I think of Marlon Brando my mind always conjures up visions of him in his black leather jacket, riding his motorcycle in "The Wild Ones." Remember that one, teenagers of the 50's? I got an even bigger shock when I told my ten-year-old that I had been to see Marlon Brando in The Godfather and he looked at me very blankly and said, "who's Marlon Brando?" I bet the kid doesn't remember Clark Gable, Gary Cooper, Tyrone Power, Eddie Fisher, Fabian, or anyone of the other important movie stars either. There was one star, however, who seemed to have bridged the generation gap and that is Elizabeth Taylor and she looks just as good now as she did fifteen years ago and that's saying quite a bit. But, back to The Godfather, if coming here I understand within the next few weeks so leave the kids at home and take it in... within the past several weeks, I have received two or three letters to the Editor unsigned. We have stated our policy on this in the past but some of our readers may not know it so for their benefit, we will state it once again. No letter to the Editor unsigned will be printed. We feel that when we write editorials and even this column and express our opinion everyone knows without a doubt who's writing it and we feel it's only fair that the same apply to any of our readers who wish to express an opinion...

John Nichols' Frankfurt Watchline

Whether you may think of the current Democratic administration, it seems to be keeping a eye on the operations of sound insurance companies, banks and lending institutions of other types. At least sharper than did it Republican predecessor, though only the surface appears to have been scratched in the latest incident—the closing of two Louisville savings and loan firms for a state complaint that it seems to be keeping a sharp eye on the operations of sound insurance companies, banks and lending institutions of other types.

Stewart Fertilizer Co.

True, the two institutions now in receivership were not covered by federal insurance and newly claimed such. But how many depositors—often the elderly and fairly poor—knew this would bother to find out that their practice of money was bolstered by nothing except the knowhow and honesty of the savings and loan executives?

Information available to us indicates the people with an aggregate of more than $50 million in the two affected institutions are going to get back far less per dollar than they have in it now. In addition, there is no way to protect the little fellow who thinks he is putting away savings for a "rainy day". Gov. Wendell Ford has announced his intention to call a special session, possibly in June, to take care of perhaps several matters. We're not experts, but there's a chance some remedial legislation could be enacted that would strengthen savings and loans firms which do not come under federal insurance.

The special session, incidentally, will last at least two weeks—what's the standard for the lawmakers expect to camp here at least that long and they, not the governor, decide when to adjourn. One definite topic will be for Kentucky to conform with new federal court interpretations on election residency. Another probably is to rectify the boo-boo of losing the omnibus Environmental bill in the legislative shuffle on closing day last month.

There also could be ratification of the U.S. constitutional amendment on women's rights. And if the Assembly's congressional redistricting measure should be voided by the courts—ouch! That special session could become rather extended.

WHEN PUBLICITY MEN meet—When Tommy Preston, press secretary to Ford, peeked in Capitol Press Row one day, he saw his GOP predecessor, Larry Van Hoose, waved and walked on. "Hey! Van Hoose shouted. "Aren't we speaking?" "Sure," Preston replied. "I would have said 'hi' but I was afraid you'd think it was an irresponsible and despicable statement."

GUESS WHO?—When Kentucky Fried Chicken King John Y. Brown was about to file as a Democratic candidate for U.S. Senate—he backed out in the final minutes—it was an open secret that several prominent Democrats were going to back him openly. He has a pretty good idea of the identity of four such supporters, but saying so at this academic stage would merely prompt denial. All Democrats, naturally, you know, now support administration choice Dee Huddleston.

AGE—BEFORE LOOKS—Addressing a statewide conference along with other legislators, House Minority Leader Harold DeMarcus held up a program showing old pictures of the lawmakers and quite of the members. "They talk about upgrading the Legislature, Well, do you see any improvement?"
