

As More People Get Social Security, Fewer of Them Live with Relatives

As more and more people 65 and over have received social security checks during the past 20 years, fewer and fewer of them have made their homes with relatives.

Of the 12 million people 65 and over in 1952, one in six got monthly social security checks and half lived with relatives, according to social security officials here.

"Today there are more than 20 million people 65 and over," a spokesman said. "Four out of five get social security checks and one in three lives with relatives."

Social security may have contributed to the live-alone trend, according to the spokesman.

"A study shows that most people 65 and over prefer to live on their own if they have enough income," he said. "And social security payments have become the largest single share of their income—now about 34 percent."

Since 1952, the average monthly social security check paid to a retired worker has increased from $66 to $132. The number of people who get social security retirement benefits has increased from 2 million to about 17 million.

"Some of the people getting retirement checks are under 65," the social security spokesman said. "They include wives, dependent husbands, and children of retired workers—plus retired workers who begin collecting reduced benefits at 62, 63, or 64."

"But almost all people 65 and over are eligible for social security payments," he noted. "And two out of three of them prefer to live by themselves—as married couples or single people."

Four out of five married couples with one member 65 or over now live apart from relatives—compared to two out of three in 1952.

Three out of five single people 65 or over live alone now—compared to half the single men and two in five single women in 1952, the study shows.

The study was conducted by the Social Security Administration of the U.S. Department of Health, Education, and Welfare.

4-H Agricultural Scholarships Increased to $1,000

Kids and animals naturally go together in the 4-H agricultural program as these Will County, Ill., young people demonstrate.

SPECIAL A million boys and girls enrolled in the 4-H agricultural program now have more reason than ever to strive for excellence during 1972.

International Harvester Company, national program donor, has increased the value of the educational scholarships to be presented to national 4-H agricultural program winners from $700 each to $1,000, the National 4-H Service Committee has announced.

One of the most popular of all 4-H programs, the Co-operative Extension Service's latest figures show that 994,582 boys and girls were enrolled in agricultural projects in 1971. These range from growing crops and live stock, to marketing, conservation, the maintenance and operation of tractors and machinery. And many of the youths participate in several of the projects gaining management skills.

The youths also may earn benefits in other ways. International Harvester provides a maximum of four medals of honor per county to 4-Hers carrying out outstanding agricultural projects.

The state winner receives an all-expense trip to the 51st National 4-H Congress in Chicago, Nov. 26-30, where six national winners receive $1,000 educational scholarships.

One of the 1971 national winners, Ben Rigdon of Jarrettsville, Md., used an array of agricultural projects in earning his award. Rigdon made soil tests before planting grain crops. He raised beef, swine and sheep and cared for the family's three tractors. Using ideas gained in 4-H conservation projects the Maryland youth planned his fields and the overall layout of the farm to halt soil erosion.

Another Oklahoma youth, Mike Steward, of Shawnee, another 1971 scholarship winner, learned about soil care, moisture content, fertilizers and other cropping practices through agricultural projects. He grew 538 acres of crops and raised 47 head of beef and dairy cattle while earning his national honor.

For information about local 4-H agricultural projects, contact the county extension agent or the state 4-H leader.

A poet in the schools

Students in five Kentucky schools have had a special treat this year as participants in the Kentucky Arts Commission's first Poet in the Schools program. At Cloverport, Shawnee High in Louisville, Scottsville, Paducah and Corbin, visiting poet Malcolm Glass is making poetry fun for youngsters.

In an unconventional exploration into the world of words, sounds and imagination, the Austin Peay professor has spurred children of all ages to express their feelings in free verse form.

The program, which is to be repeated next year, is financed by a $10,000 grant from the National Endowment for the Arts and another $10,000 from the state commission. A collection of the poems written by the schoolchildren will be made available to the public.

We must make known the disagreements that we have with our leaders by pulling levers on voting machines, not by pulling triggers. I pray that we shall rededicate ourselves to this procedure. The future of our country demands it; the future of our freedom depends upon it.

EKU Choir In Europe

By Jim Warren
State News Bureau

FRANKFORT, Ky.—The Eastern Kentucky University (EKU) Chamber Choir is in Europe for a 27-day concert and sightseeing tour of 14 cities in five countries.

Before their departure May 25, Gov. Wendell Ford named the choir members Kentucky Ambassadors of International Good Will.

Among the cities where the 29-member choir will give concerts are Berlin, Regensburg, Heidelberg, Vienna, Lucerne, Salzburg and London.

In Berlin they will sing at the Kaiser Wilhelm Memorial Church.

"Performances at this historic church are by audition only and we are extremely proud to have been selected," Dr. Bruce Hoagland, EKU choir director, said before the group's departure. "And, to add to the interest during our Berlin visit, all members of the choir will be staying in private homes of German citizens."

To make the choir's stay in German cities more enjoyable, the university organized a special course in conversational German for the group last spring.

The tour is being financed entirely by choir members.

"These students have worked tirelessly to make the tour possible without any outside financial assistance," Dr. Hoagland said. "We have held public performances to raise funds and the rest has come from the students themselves."

The choir will visit the homes of famous composers in Vienna and hold a special concert for EKU alumni stationed near Heidelberg in the U.S. Army.

Cong. Tim Lee CARTER COMMENTS

Kentucky's Fifth District Representative Tim Lee Carter stated, "It is clear that the majority of people in our nation feel a deep respect for the rights of others. They realize that violence cannot solve the complex issues that face us in these changing times. But we have recently witnessed in our nation another senseless and tragic act of violence directed toward a candidate for this country's highest office. I regret that such an ugly event has taken place again in the United States of America. I deplore the fact that these acts have occurred so many times within the past ten years."

"It matters not," Congressman Carter continued, "what our political beliefs may be—our democracy provides for all of us a forum for the expression of our views, regardless of their diversity. To borrow from the words of the great philosopher Voltaire—'Though I may disapprove of what you say, I will defend to the death your right to say it.'"

"It is truly shocking to think that we are permitting our heritage to slip from our grasp through misguided bullets and misguided minds."

Congressman Carter questioned, "Are we determined to undertake our free system? Are we bent upon destroying our principles? I say to you that we are making a grave and virtually irreparable error when we resort to the politics of assassination."

"Do not think for one moment," the Congressman from Kentucky concluded, "that problems are solved, peace restored, or issues decided, by bullets.

Bonus Plan Announced

The United States Army announces a special bonus plan for young men enlisting in certain careers in the infantry, armor and artillery. The plan calls for payment of $1,500 for a four-year enlistment.

The bonus is payable in full following successful completion of basic and advanced training. This normally occurs about four months after enlistment, depending on the career field selected.

Men with prior service are eligible for the bonus plan if they have less than three years active service, have not previously received a re-enlistment bonus and meet certain other requirements.

Besides professional training, young men in the bonus plan will also be eligible to volunteer for the widest range of enlistment travel options ever offered by the Army. These include guaranteed assignments in Europe, Alaska, Hawaii, Far East and Panama, as well as Units of Choice in different parts of the United States.

The Army now starts enlisted men at $288.00 a month, with increases following basic training. It also continues to offer the traditional benefits of free meals, housing, clothing, medical and dental care, along with 30 paid vacation days a year.

This offer may be changed or discontinued at any time depending on Army manpower requirements. Local quotas will be limited.

For further information on the Army's new bonus plan, call Sgt. Johnny Brown at 623-1220 or stop by his office at 105 W. Main, Richmond, Ky.

If there was ever a word when this column was an absolute necessity, this is it. To begin with, there are five issues this month, the first of which falls on the first. Therefore, there are no meetings to report. Secondly, this has to be one of the quietest Memorial week-ends in the history of the county. And thirdly, by losing Monday, there was no time to work up a feature article to take up the slack. How do you like those excuses, "I have a million of them."

The feature I had thought about concerned the new high school. I was out there last week and was astounded at the luxury which seems to abound there. You walk in on beautiful green carpeting, to the right of the entrance is the colorful cafeteria backed up by a very, very modern kitchen and then into the gymnasium which has to be the last word in gymnasiums. The only problem was that I could not capture all these features with my trusty Polaroid. It was just not equal to the job. So, I had to call on my husband and his larger camera with the King-size flash and we just didn't have the time to get it ready for this issue. But, it is really going to be something and I for one can't wait until the basketball season opens this year.

Well, the swimming pool at Cedar Rapids County Club opens.

Five persons miraculously escaped serious injury Wednesday afternoon when the brakes apparently failed on a truck driven by Donald Clark of Mt. Vernon as it was coming over Town Hill. Clark, in attempting to avoid hitting a car in the U.S. 150 intersection, struck the above building and three pedestrians on the sidewalk. The pedestrians, Mrs. Charles Bussell of Mt. Vernon, her daughter, Janet, about 12, and Mrs. Nancy Nicley, were believed not to be seriously injured. The truck then crossed the road, striking a utility pole and overturned. Clark was admitted to the Rockcastle County Hospital for treatment. Phillip Owens, a passenger in the truck, was not injured. The truck and equipment are the property of Kenneth Cromer of Mt. Vernon.

John Nichols' Frankfort Watchline

At last those "Veteran Capitol observers" you read and hear about were correct in predicting the outcome of the primaries.
Some, still we say, missed the mark widely during the Ford-Combs primary for governor last year, and others were touting Republican Tom Emberton to the skies in the November gubernatorial race.
Oh, well, how could anyone miss for last Tuesday? There were no surprises, unless you were stunned by the ease with which former Gov. Louie B. Nunn dispatched col king Robert Gable in the Republican primary to the skies in the November gubernatorial race.
Now the Monday morning quarterbacks are saying Gable ran a stupid race—that he lost! And too much invective that angered many Republicans who might otherwise have sided with him.
By this reasoning, Nunn secured a sympathy vote, especially since he chose not to reply to the charges of boozing, except to indicate his feelings were hurt that Gable—who he once regarded as a fine young man—could not let this be a friendly primary.
So, Nunn was able to save lots of dollars. But if you listen to Gable's friends, Nunn spent as much as he did at the precinct level on election day to insure strong worker—and transportation—interest.
Still, the former governor probably has much more left than if he had chosen to spend as did Gable.
If you're wondering why Gable's saturation advertising drew only 16,000 plus votes, do you remember the 1967 Democratic primary effort of David Trosper, who brought up the rear in the contest with Henry Ward and Happy Chandler?
Nunn undoubtedly will be hunting for President Nixon's coalition in November, but we must conclude that if anyone doubted Nunn's power in this party, that doubt should be erased—even with a turnout of only 16 per cent or so.
The Democrats admittedly have their job cut out for them, and it looks as though their nominee, Dee Huddleston, is going to play the role of Mr. Clean against the soiled political master, Nunn.
Both sides have left yawning gaps for the other to take advantage of — Nunn's entire record as governor is fair game and Huddleston's decision to stay on as Senate majority leader in the past session is another tactic that may boomerang.
As the handler of every administration legislative wish, Huddleston becomes vulnerable to public reaction against unpopular lawmaking.

We hope we won't find out too soon, is there a chance both nominees will lay low for most of the summer and give the Kentucky voter a rest from political speeches? *****

Putting on the Heat—Our hat goes off to Gov. Wendell Ford in his selection of the date to begin the special legislative session.
It will start at 1 p.m., Thursday, June 8. He will be held in non-air-conditioned chambers. It will likely be quite warm at that time of day and the days to follow.
Do you get the picture? Sweating grouchy legislators nipping their brows and deciding whether that Frankfort is one heck of a place to be in the late spring, so why not wind it up as quickly as possible and go home?
That, of course, would spall short session and consequent saving to the taxpayer. *****

The Ladies Again—Overheard at a recent Legislative Research Commission planning session on ratifying the federal constitutional amendment affirming women's equality were these candid remarks:
"Maybe it ought to be a matter for the Department of Military Affairs, since these girls will be eligible for the draft."
"I always thought they were already at least equal, when are we going to make men equal?"
Of course, the lawmakers were joking, weren't they? But we learned there is intense pressure in Frankfort to get the equality thing passed. Meantime, the league of Women Voters has filed a suit asking Franklin Circuit Judge Henry Meigs simply to order Ford to sign that lost environmental bill that caused so much ruckus after the session. *****

The situation has forced cutbacks in many treatment programs. Only emergency services has been available in some areas for weeks.

PIKE CO. POLLUTER
The Johnson Bros. Limestone Co. of Elkhorn City may become the first Kentucky industry ever shut down for violating state air pollution standards.
The Kentucky Air Pollution Control Commission is seeking a temporary injunction against continued operations by the company until it submits a plan for adequate air pollution control.
Johnston Bros., and 14 other stone quarries and asphalt plants were cited by the commission last March for failing to have operating permits as required by state law. All 15 firms were ordered to obtain permits or shut down.
A company must provide for adequate air pollution control before the commission will grant an operating permit.
Johnston Bros., applied for a permit, but the application was denied when the company's pollution control efforts were found inadequate by the commission, Asst. Atty. Gen. Kenneth Howe, representing the commission, then filed a suit in Pike Circuit Court to shut down the company until it developed a plan for improving pollution control.

Frank P. Partee, commission technical director, said that if the suit is successful, it will be the first industrial shut-down for pollution violations in Kentucky.
GOV. FORD TOURS STATE TO BOOST TRAFFIC SAFETY
Governor Ford toured the state by plane, visiting seven cities, to focus public attention to Kentucky's rapidly rising traffic death rate.
The Governor noted that Kentucky traffic deaths in 1972 are currently running ahead of last year's rate, and he called for a "comprehensive war against violence on our highways."
At each stop on the tour, the Governor displayed graphs and pictures showing the results of highway carelessness.

He said last year's 1023 traffic deaths and 14,880 injuries represented a $123 million loss to the state.
"Whenever I wake up this morning there had been 395 people killed on our highways," the Governor said. "Before I left the Governor's Mansion there were 396. And what is so disturbing is that we are just beginning our travel season."
Governor Ford wore a black armband like the ones he said the State Police are to wear throughout the Memorial Day weekend "to mourn those already killed on our highways and those who will be killed."
He announced plans for traffic safety checks, public service messages and the distribution of more than 60,000 safety pamphlets to motorists during one week end.

BAH ASSN. ASKS BAIL-BOND CHANGES
The McCracken County Bar Assn. has adopted two resolutions proposing changes in bail-bond practices in Kentucky.
The first proposal asks the governor, the state Department of Insurance and McCracken County officials to investigate bonding procedures, make the findings public, take appropriate action to correct any unethical conduct discovered and prosecute any people who may be violating the law.
The second resolution asks that the General Assembly or the Court of Appeals adopt, in principle, the federal pretrial release procedures.

LOCAL SCHOOL DISTRICTS TO BE REGIONAL DEVELOPMENT

The state Department of Education is establishing 17 Educational Development Regions throughout Kentucky to enable local school districts to offer programs they cannot presently afford.

Ken Miller, director of dissemination for the Department of Education, said the regions would make it possible for local school districts to offer courses like driver education, art and music, and science. Since some districts cannot afford to equip a science laboratory, he said, several districts might pool their resources to establish a traveling laboratory.

Each of the regions will be staffed by a regional coordinator, and Miller said all 17 regions would be staffed within five years. He said about three of the regions would be operative in the next year.

Miller emphasized that any program offered by a region would be optional and the regional development would in no way threaten the autonomy of local school districts. "We will not interfere with their existing programs," he said. The regions will be supervised by the superintendent, he is out there to serve."

Let's hope we are not trading on this line when we share with you the case history of Ezra, a registrant of a local board in the Appalachia region of Kentucky. A few months ago this young man had three draft options—exemption, deferment, or serving in the Armed Forces. Believe it or not, he chose the last.

Ezra registered for the draft in 1968. At the time of registration he was a recent high school graduate. His first job after graduation was as a counter man in a restaurant. After working at this position for a short time, he went to work as a laundry route man.

Based on documentation in the file, Ezra was not eligible for any other classification but I-A. Subsequently, he was ordered to report for physical examination on Monday, Oct. 20, 1969. On the Sunday preceding that date he was ordained as a minister. At this point it is well to remember that Ezra had not provided the draft board with any proof of education beyond the 12th grade.

Selective Service Regulations provide that if a young man is a "fully ordained minister of religion" he is entitled to consideration for Class 4-D, which is a draft exemption.

That Oct. 20, the Armed Forces Examining and Entrance Station found Ezra acceptable for military service. However, upon receipt in November of a copy of the certification of ordination, the local board reclassified the young man 4-D. (Cont. to 8) flour added to each oven cooking bag causes the water to boil normally and avoids bumping. The flour does not affect the quality of taste of the prepared food.

When using a roasting bag product where a seasoning or sauce mix is included, the mix is sufficient and flour should not be added unless otherwise specified in the product directions.

When using a plain roasting bag, add 1 tablespoon of flour to the bag, shake well, then add the meat. Spice may also be added to the flour for flavor, but a sprinkling of salt and pepper is not sufficient without the flour.

Use a pan large enough to hold the entire bag so that the bag does not overlap the sides and is deep enough to hold all liquids that may be released during cooking. The pan should be at least 1 1/2 to 2 inches high. A metal pan, preferable aluminum or stainless steel, is recommended.

Trim any excess fat from meat before putting it in the bag.

Puncture the bag as directed on the package.

Preheat oven to recommended temperature.

Place in the oven so that the bag does not touch the sides of the racks of the oven.

Carefully read the manufacturer's directions as to cooking temperatures and times.

After cooking, allow food to stand a few minutes to allow the steam in the bag to subside.

Use same care when opening the bag you would when removing the lid from a steaming sauce pan or kettle.

"YOU & THE DRAFT"

Ezra submitted documentation to the board indicating that he devoted 80 hours a week to religious work. In 1971 he enrolled in a degree-granting ministerial school. Under current draft regulations, a young man who is satisfactorily pursuing a full-time course of instruction in a recognized theological or divinity school is eligible for consideration for Class 2-B (deferment).

Ezra was born on Feb. 14, 1950. From the first lottery he received the number 004. The lottery does not have application when a young man is in a deferred or exempt status; in other words, he must be classified A-1 and be in the prime selection group.

In January, 1972, Ezra advised the local board that he no longer wished to be considered for a 2-D or 4-D classification even though the president of the college and his fellow students had urged him to continue in a deferred status. He stated that he had an obligation to serve his country and he wanted to go and that he would be a better preacher for having served.

With a lottery number of 004 and with the resignation of draft calls, Ezra was ordered to report for induction in April, 1972. It was found acceptable, sworn into the Army and assigned to the Reception Center at Fort Knox for military training and assignment.

"We quite frankly believe Ezra has proven to be the exception to the rule in that he wanted two options that would have legally kept him out of the service."

County Agent's Notes

By: H. Lee Durban

TURF MIX - Fertilizing

Fertilizer is usually not applied in May. But if you did not fertilize this spring, and your turf grass looks a little anemic, a light application of fertilizer should change it to a nice green color. Most people have applied sufficient fertilizer and are mowing more than they really care to mow.

Broadleaf Weed Control
Now is a good time to spot-treat those weeds that you missed earlier. Since the temperature is getting warmer, be much more careful in using herbicides and in preventing drift to desirable plants such as shrubs, flowers and garden greenery. If there are any questions as to safety, perhaps it is best not to apply herbicides at this time. You should use coarse spray and apply when the air is calm.

Diseases
We are into the period of year when we can expect an outbreak of disease in turf. In fact, a disease called "leafspot" has been active all spring, and may cause considerable damage to turf. Since fungicides are used to prevent disease, and the tedium required for application is more than most homeowners care to go through, we usually hope that we escape this problem. However, occasionally, disease does hit our lawns, and we must use a fungicide program. Fungicides are much more effective as "prevents" than as materials that cure; but if used according to directions, they will do a fairly good curative job. Usually, the real problem involved is identification of the disease and then using the right material to control it. Ask your County Extension Agent for Misc. 372-C, for recommending materials for controlling diseases. He also will be able to assist you in identification of diseases. Other good sources of information are your lawn-garden centers and local nurseries.

Height of Cut
Mowing is perhaps one of the most abused and least understood turf grass management practices. Bluegrass and timothy leaf tissues should not be cut lower than 2 inches. Shorter mowing reduces the leaf surface but, if used according to directions (the food manufacturing factory of the plant) to such a degree that the plant may have to draw food from the root reserves to initiate new growth.

Repeated defoliation of this nature reduces the root system, resulting in weakened plants which are unable to cope with adverse weather conditions and competing weeds, etc.

I realize that when you mow closely, you won't have to mow so often, but this won't produce the desired result.

Insect Management
Insect competitors have long challenged man's attempts at producing a greater quantity of higher quality Burley leaf. The competition has been fierce and the insect has proven a worthy adversary.

Early in our struggle against the worms, hoppers, plant lice, and their kin the grower relied mainly on hand-picking. Knowledge was limited and time and labor were cheap. Chemical knowledge grew steadily in the 20th century, and the mid-1940's saw the release of synthetically produced chlorinated hydrocarbon pesticides. These materials generally had a long residual life, and were inexpensive to produce and buy.

The chlorinated hydrocarbons, however, have been gradually replaced by compounds in two different chemical families: the organophosphates (diazinon, malathion, parathion, and others) and the carbamates (lannate, Sevin, and others). These materials differ from the chlorinated hydrocarbons by being more hazardous to the grower, more expensive to buy, and must be applied at the correct time (or times) because they are short residual materials.

There are many factors that influenced the changing use pattern of insecticides, new pest infestations, and long residual nature of certain pesticides, the impact of both national and international public opinion has exerted a growing influence on the tobacco insecticide usage picture.

Tobacco growers this year should expect intensified pre-market sampling by the buyers who will be checking the leaf for residue of insecticides and illegal residue levels. Buyers will consider high levels of residues in tobacco as a negative characteristic of quality. The reputation of U.S. grown tobacco and the future of this industry will depend on responsible action by our farmers in avoiding the use of chemicals that are not recommended and using correctly only those that are recommended.

We are justified in considering the removal of the chlorinated hydrocarbons as weakening our position in tobacco insect control? In most cases it should not. The concern is more over safety - these newer "tools" of insect management will require of us a better insecticide usage and safety habits.

What considerations does tomorrow hold for tobacco insect problems? Stricter legislation relative to the manufacture, registration, recommendation, and safe usage of insecticidal chemicals are a few. In other words, all of us involved in agriculture will have to know more about why and when chemical controls are needed.

As we learn more about tobacco insects, economic damage thresholds, and non-chemical controls, fewer chemicals will be needed to protect our leaf. A pilot scouting program was conducted in North Carolina in the summer of 1971. The program showed pesticide use by farmers to be 10 times as high as needed for pest control as determined by trained scouts who surveyed tobacco fields for threats by insects, weeds, and plant diseases. The program could result in reduced insecticide poundage applied to tobacco by eliminating costly preventive spray schedules and treating only problem fields.

Also, if we continue on a poundage program we may save some production dollars through lessening insecticide usage. Since our tobacco field boundaries are no longer rigid, we may find that it is cheaper to grow several extra rows than it is to pour on those insecticide dollars. Preliminary studies have indicated that untreated fields may yield leaf of comparable quality and weight as fields that have been dutifully sprayed with insecticides.

These statements aren't meant to suggest that we no longer need chemicals available to us to protect our leaf. When problem insect populations begin to gnaw into our profits, chemicals, remain our most efficient means of management. However, it has never been more important to use available chemicals wisely and safely.

Plant Populations of Tobacco Studied at UK
Increasing the number of plants per acre is one way for tobacco growers to obtain higher yields and returns. However, plant populations greater than 10,000 plants per acre probably would not increase yields enough to pay for the extra labor which is needed.

turas and hours of labor required with populations of 8,000, 10,000, and 13,400 plants per acre. In rows 39 inches apart, plants spaced 20, 16 and 12 inches apart give those respective populations.

The experiment involved growing Burley 21 for three years at Lexington, according to J.H. Smiley, UK Extension tobacco specialist. The tobacco retrieved 200 pounds per acre of nitrogen and was irrigated when necessary. Labor records were maintained for all hand operations, such as transplanting, priming, topping, and housing. Data from previous work were used for calculating such operations as land and plant bed preparation and cultivation.

The population of 8,000 plants per acre produced acre yields of 2,710 pounds. The 10,000 plants per acre yielded 3,023 pounds and the 13,400 plants per acre produced 3,122 pounds. Sold in 1969 for 31 cents a pound, the returns per acre for the respective populations were $1,978, $2,206, and $2,300. The respective hours of labor required were 312, 387 and 500.

Thus acre yields increased with each increase in number of plants grown per acre. However, labor requirements increased at a faster rate. Under the conditions of the experiment, increasing the plant population from 8,000 to 10,000 per acre increased gross returns per acre by $228, a realization of $3.04 for each hour of additional labor. Increasing plant population from 10,000 to 13,400 per acre increased gross returns by $94 per acre, or 83 cents for additional hour of labor.

Thus the data from the experiment suggest that populations much greater than 10,000 plants per acre probably would not increase yields enough to pay for the extra labor which is needed.

Since growing tobacco involves numerous operations where each plant must be handled separately, such as transplanting, topping, harvesting, and stripping, more plants per acre means more hours of labor used per acre. The purpose of the experiment was to determine the yield, re-

"RAMBLINGS"

Saturday and of course, my four water dogs were among the first there. You know the weather was beautiful both Saturday and Sunday but just a little chilly for swimming, I thought. But, I gave in and took the kids out, minus the baby, and did "little" sun bathing myself while I watched the children splash around in what must have been pure agony while their lips turned blue and blue. Of course, I got a sunburn but so what, I'm serious.....

We've decided to drive to Louisville this year and take in the Miss Kentucky Beauty Pageant on June 17. Vicki Riddle, Miss Rockcastle County, is a beautiful girl and should stand out very good chance among the other entries. The idea of getting to see the event in person is exciting although I expect to return home with a whopping inferiority complex from being among so many beautiful girls. But, that's life, right?.....

Don't forget that the Mt. Vernon Playgroup opens Monday night, June 5 under the direction of Charles "Duke" Baker and Tommy Coffey. Also, to the ladies, the first women's softball game will be Tuesday night. I understand so be sure and come out as the legs position will have to be decided that night and the men can have their first good laugh of the season.....

Since news seems to be short even here, I guess I'll have to give up on this column as a means to fill the front page and go searching for more news. How would individual three-column pictures of each of my five children look on the front?.....

$94,680 in Food Stamps Sold Here in March

During March, low-income persons in Rockcastle County received food stamps valued at $94,680 Economic Security Act. Acting Commissioner Ernest Johnson announced today.

This record compares to 3,723 low-income persons who received food stamps valued at $92,238 during February 1972. In Kentucky, the food stamp program is administered jointly by the Department of Economic Security's Bureau of Public Assistance and the Food and Nutrition Service of the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

Commissioner Johnson pointed out that the program safeguards the health of the nation's low-income families through better nutrition.

Needy families in the program receive an amount of their own money, usually spent on food, to purchase coupons. In addition, families receive bonus coupons to boost their buying power.

Kentucky's food stamp program has experienced tremendous growth during the past year. During March, 304,835 low-income Kentuckians received food stamps valued at $7,856,353. In March 1971, 293,880 persons received food stamps with a total coupon value of $7,234,398.

At present, 73 counties are participating in the department's food stamp program. According to Rick Crawford, assistant supervisor of the program, this figure will increase to 88 by December.

Folk Festival To Be Held June 2, 3, & 4

That long awaited season has finally arrived in Kentucky heralding not only the beginning of summer but also the Tri-State Folk Festival in Danville on June 2, 3 and 4. The three day event which will be held at the Pioneer Playhouse, State Theatre of Kentucky on U.S. 150 will feature the finest folk artists from West Virginia, Tennessee and Kentucky expressing their skills as performers in an effort to perpetuate our early American heritage.

Schedule of events for the three day affair includes the opening of the Festival at 6 p.m. on Friday, June 2, followed by the stage show at 8:30. Activities will get underway early on Saturday with a workshop at 9:30 and 1:30, a stage performance at 8:30, and a swim party and cookout at 11 p.m. A special interdenominational religious folk service will highlight Sunday, June 4 at 8:30 and 10:30 a.m. with a final folk concert at 2 p.m. and gospel singing at 8 p.m.

Throughout the three days there will be continuous festival events including country music, banjo-picking, story telling, old time fiddling, folk instrumental music, Appalachian style music, folk dancing, poetry reading, and western style square dancing.

The entire Festival will be filmed in color for a National Showing at a large date and outstanding talent will be selected to participate in the National Folk Festival in Washington, D.C. and the Kentucky Bluegrass Fair in Lexington, Kentucky.

The Pioneer Playhouse includes complete facilities for the comfort and convenience of festival patrons including campgrounds for Rec V and tents, a 24 hour grocery, restaurant, mini bike trails, movies for children, 18th century Village-of-the-Arts, social hour nightly, ice house, snack bar, and dormitory housing facilities available on the grounds.

FIRST FISH-- Probably the youngest fisherman in Rockcastle County, James Daniel Hacker, Jr., aged three, pulled in his first fish recently. Young Hacker caught the two pound, fourteen ounce bass with the pole shown in the above photo. He did have to have a little help from his dad, James Hacker, Sr., to pull it in. The fish was caught at Brodhead in the Dix River.

DDT-TDE USE ON TOBACCO DISCOURAGED

This year, tobacco will be sampled at the market place to determine if producers used pesticides containing DDT or TDE on their tobacco. Delmer New, chairman of the Rockcastle County Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation (ASC) Committee, announced.

Random samples will be taken from the tobacco at the time of marketing. These samples will be chemically analyzed to determine DDT-TDE residues, if any. Each producer will be asked to certify whether or not DDT or TDE was used on the tobacco after it was planted in the field, before a marketing card will be issued for the farm. As in the past two years, tobacco producers using DDT or TDE are not eligible for government loans on their crops. False certification certifying use of these materials is a violation of federal law.

Both domestic and foreign buyers are concerned about the level of DDT and TDE in their purchases in certain areas last year. Some have indicated that they may reduce their purchases in those areas this year.

"It is important for every tobacco grower to avoid use of DDT and TDE," Mr. New said, "because these pesticides are a serious threat to the market outlets for our tobacco. If even a small amount of tobacco with DDT or TDE content is included during the redrying and packing processes, large quantities of other tobacco being processed can be affected, resulting in an adverse marketing situation."

There will be special singing nightly.

Rev. Dolores Melvin, pastor, and the congregation cordially invites the public to attend.
