

JUNE IS DAIRY MONTH — AND WE WOULD LIKE TO SAY . . .

CONGRATULATIONS TO THE Dairy Industry!

This month is a good time for all of us to take a closer look at our Dairy Industry. One thing is certain, it has become big business and is getting bigger every day. And our dairy farmers have done an excellent job in increasing production to meet growing demands. They are using the most modern, up-to-date equipment in rigidly controlled modern plants. We salute them for a job well done!

Trash Collection System Established At Livingston

The City of Livingston is this week publishing an ordinance in the Signal establishing a garbage and trash collection system.

The City has had set-up, at various locations in town, trash holders which are emptied and sanitized periodically by the firm owning the equipment.

Under the ordinance, it shall be unlawful for anyone owning property or residing in the city limits of Livingston to permit the accumulation of refuse and garbage in, about or upon premises owned or possessed by him and it shall also be unlawful for anyone to dispose of refuse or garbage within the city limits of Livingston.

The fee for the weekly pick-up, made each Monday at the curbside of businesses and residences, will be $2 per month for residences and $5 per month for businesses. The fee will be added to water bills where feasible and the city can enforce payment of the service by terminating city water service.

The penalty for any person violating the ordinance by allowing trash to accumulate or by unlawfully dumping within the city limits will be no less than $10 or more than $25 for each offense. Each day will constitute a separate offense.

POSITION AVAILABLE AT POST OFFICE

Tests for the position will be given at Richmond, June 22 through July 24. Application cards (P.S. form 2479A) may be picked up at the Mt. Vernon Post Office in about one week. Information will be available there.

SOCIAL SECURITY NO. NEEDED FOR LICENSE

Circuit Court Clerk Money Ed Cummins reminds the public that in order for drivers license to be issued, effective July 1 of this year, you must have a social security number. If you do not have a number, you may get an application to obtain one at the clerk's office.

This is a requirement of the Department of Drivers Licenses at Frankfort.

Also, the road test for motorcycles will be given the first Friday of each month beginning July 7.

Scenes From Dairy Day - 1972

DAIRY FAMILY -- Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Adams, left, and Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Adams of Route 3, Mt. Vernon, were named the Rockcastle County Dairy Family for 1972. The Adams brothers have a 280 acre dairy farm in the Brindles Ridge area of the county and milk 57 head of Holsteins.

The Rockcastle Stompers 4-H Club's float won first prize in the float contest Saturday. The club is composed of members of Livingston 8th grade and Mrs. Carla Hale, leader.

School Board Bonds Sell At 5.7790 Interest

VMIC, Inc., stock brokers with offices in Memphis, Tennessee and New York City, were the successful low bidders in Tuesday's resale of $1,490,000 Rockcastle County School Revenue Bonds.

The bonds were bid in at an interest rate of 5.7790 percent.

The original bond issue was sold at an interest rate of .7.68. By reselling the bonds due on the school from 1981 on, the county will be saved a total of $381,733.00. This savings is brought about by the fact that with the bonds resold, they are now due to be paid off in 1975, three years sooner than the original bond issue.

Interest cost to the county in dollars, under the new issue, will be $1,458,345.00.

John Nichols' Frankfort Watchline

In a sense, the special legislative session which ended last Thursday is an excellent advertisement for annual sessions — a proposed amendment to the constitution for which will be the November 1973 ballot.

First, as anyone on Press Row here will tell you, it's much easier to take the lawmakers in small districts — say a week or so at a time — than for 60 consecutive legislative days.

Secondly, the special session had to be held in part to clarify or just plain fix certain boobies made during the regular session last winter, such as repealing that "best" environmental control measure.

Kentucky voters have repeatedly turned down referenda which would have allowed their lawmakers to meet more often than once every two years.

Even that is too often for legislative critics, whose motto seems to be: Better for the Legislature to meet once every 60 years than 60 days every two years.

But the negativism seems to be fading, and we're guessing it's for two reasons.

First, the caliber of the average legislator definitely has improved in the past decade, to a point where even the casual voter senses it.

Secondly, this age is too technical, speedy and complicated for biannual sessions. The General Assembly needs to be ready to cope with the times.

Against the second argument, of course, is the fact that a governor always can summon the lawmakers into special session, which is exactly what was done recently.

A Helping Hand — When the Senate finally approved the environmental bill and sent it to the Governor — that same week that never reached him in the regular session — Sen. Scott Miller, the Louisville Republican, had a bright idea for the leadership.

He suggested appointing "an enrollment and escort" committee to make sure the bill got all the way to Wendell Ford's office this time. No one took him up on the proposal.

Just For You, Larry — As the Governor prepared to hold a barbecue at the mansion last week for legislators and the press, Republican Rep. Larry Hopkins of Lexington made it known he had not been invited — though apparently everyone else was.

Hopkins, you may remember, had challenged the Governor to a debate some months ago, a move not calculated to please Ford.

We don't know if word got around to Ford's office, but press secretary Tommy Preston appeared before Hopkins shortly and told him a special invitation was being extended to him. Hopkins went to the barbecue.

Ladies, Be Seated — A practical joker struck just as soon as the Senate passed the women's equality resolution and made Kentucky the 19th state to ratify the constitutional amendment.

On the door of the men's rest room a sign, bordered by hearts and flowers, saying: "Ours."

Always No. 1 — At that mansion barbecue, the Governor used tact in commending everyone about the women's equality matter.

BOONE HEIRLOOMS — Mrs. Eugenia Blackburn, curator of the Kentucky Historical Society, and Frank G. Rankin, society president, examine three spoons which once belonged to Sarah Boone, mother of Daniel Boone. They were presented to the society by Mr. and Mrs. Sten Peterson of Louisville. Mr. Peterson's mother inherited the spoons about 40 years ago with other Boone items that were family heirlooms. (Karen Tam Photo)

"I want you to know that whatever the outcome, my wife's still going to be No. 1 at the mansion," he said.

Here's a Prediction — GOP House Leader Harold DeMarcus of Stanford hasn't changed his theme that the Legislature will be meeting in special session after the November election — despite the short session just held.

DeMarcus insists the lawmakers will have to gather again to make up the "irreparable" loss of revenue from exempting food from the sales tax, among other things.

DeMarcus also says the new coal severance tax is just not replacing the revenue lost through the food tax exemption.

Capitol Digest
Epileptics now may obtain Kentucky driver's licenses under a new regulation of the state Department of Public Safety.

Before obtaining a license, an applicant must provide the department with certification from a physician that the epileptic condition is controllable by drugs, details of the drug and dosages required and a statement that the applicant has been free of epileptic seizures for one year.

The new regulation, announced recently by acting Public Safety Commissioner William G. Newman, relaxes statutory restrictions which prohibit licensing epileptics.

The bills were introduced during the 1972 General Assembly to remove the restriction against epileptics, but both measures died in committee.

Newman also announced another new regulation which gives the department broader authority in requiring drivers to submit to medical examinations. Old rules required such examinations only when a driver more accidents in a two-year period, or when he reported "blacking out" at the wheel, or after a doctor or two or more citizens made affidavits alleging such infirmities.

RECLAMATION DIVISION TO REGULATE "PUNCH-MINING"
State Reclamation Director Buddy A. Beach says his division soon will begin drafting new regulations to bring the so-called "punch mining" technique and other in-between mining operations under Kentucky's new reclamation law.

That law, which originated as House Bill 47 in the 1972 General Assembly, expands the definition of strip mining to include all surface operations, including access roads, at any mine, making them subject to the environmental provisions of the 1966 strip mine law.

Punch mining involves the use of deep-mining equipment to remove coal from an already stripped surface seam. Since coal is removed from shallow shafts cut into the highwall, the process legally is considered deep mining and therefore not subject to the strip mine law.

The Reclamation Division now is legally unable to move against such punch mine operations, despite any environmental damage they may cause.

Counting Calories? - Try Fruits & Vegetables

Today most adults are diet conscious - almost no one feels completely free to eat all the foods he or she really likes. Reasons given may include a serious need to cut down on cholesterol and saturated fat intake and thereby reduce the risk of heart attack or stroke or perhaps merely a desire to control weight by reducing calorie consumption. Most people have at least some knowledge of what constitutes good nutrition, such as the need to supply the body daily with high quality proteins, vitamins, minerals, carbohydrates and certain fats.

The problem with most diets is that they are heavily weighted with carbohydrates and fats and are not adequate in protein and vegetables provide essential dietary factors without the large excesses of carbohydrates and fats which undermine good health. Certain members of the bean family, for example, supply high quality protein, vitamin A, B, D and riboflavin as well as some calcium, phosphorus and iron. Cooked spinach contains vitamins A, B, C, D, E, K and riboflavin and is quite low in calorie content, as are other vegetables and fruits.

It is apparent that in addition to unrefined flours, nature's fruits and vegetables are high in nutritional factors and low in calories and should be included in the diet whenever possible. To obtain the best flavor, color, texture and food value in vegetables, cook them only until they are tender. Vegetables cooked whole in steam retain most of their nutritive value. To shorten cooking time - cut, slice, dice or coarsely shred vegetables. The amount of water used in cooking is important. The less water you use, the more nutrients are retained in the cooked vegetables.

Proper storage is important in maintaining the quality of processed fruits. If you keep canned fruits in a place no warmer than 70 degrees F., they will usually retain their quality for a year or more. The color, flavor and texture of canned fruits that have been stored at very warm temperatures or for long periods of time may not stay at top quality but the fruits still will be safe to eat. Once a can has been opened, the fruit should be refrigerated if it is not for immediate use.

County Agent's Notes

Renovate Strawberry Patches Now

Renovating strawberry patches as soon as possible after harvest will help promote greater production next year. Patches worked out or renovated promptly will live longer and produce better than patches where weeds and grass are permitted to takeover after harvest. In general it takes far less effort to work out and condition the old patch after harvest than to care for the young patch during the first summer.

Where a serious leaf disease problem exists, mowing off the strawberry leaves (but not injuring the crowns of the plants) may be helpful if it is done promptly. However, mowing or leaf removal a month or so later in the summer is usually harmful.

Mowed leaves and any heavy mulch should be removed before cultivation. A lighter mulch can often be worked into the middles during cultivation.

Fertilization, either before or after cultivation, should consist of an overall (broadcast, over-the-row) application of as much as 500 pounds per acre (five pounds per 100 feet of row) of a 10-10-10 or 12-12-12 fertilizer. However, if phosphorus and potash levels are already high, a nitrogen application of 100 to 150 pounds per acre of ammonium nitrate is satisfactory. The fertilizer should not be left on top of the leaves, but should be brushed off with a "brush-foliage" broom, sack or similar tool.

Cultivate the middles as soon as possible after harvest. The picking rows should be narrowed to widths of 18 to 24 inches with some type of cultivator, stratcher or roto tiller. The compacted row middles should be well tilled to kill any weeds of grass and to allow summer rains to soak in. Cultivation should continue until frost, as with new plantings.

After renovation is also a good time to costume chemical weed control, if that is being used. Daclath, Enide (Dymid) and Temoran are the three materials now most widely used in Kentucky strawberry production and each one is doing well when properly used.

Menace of the Japanese Beetle For those who have been intrigued and have asked about the small metal, lanternlike objects seen swinging from metal posts all across the countryside, this is the answer to their question. These gadgets were insecttraps erected by the University of Kentucky Department of Entomology in cooperation with the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

This information comes from B.C. Pass, Chairman of the U.S. Department, who says the purpose of these traps was to help keep track of the spread of the Japanese beetle which now infests many counties in the state.

And there's good reason for keeping check and controlling this insect. Possessing a voracious appetite and loving the taste of at least 275 plants - including many field crops, shade and fruit trees, ornamental shrubs, some weeds, and the roots of grassy lawns - the Japanese beetle does millions of dollars in damage every year throughout the United States.

This beetle that looks on the handsome than dangerous is about one-half inch long with shiny copper-colored wings and a broad, metallic-green body, decorated with 12 white spots. It first showed up in 1916 in a nursery in Riverton, N.J., riding aboard a shipment of lilacs from Japan, and quickly multiplied. Easily outnumbering such natural enemies as robins, starlings, moles, and skunks which dig for the grubs, and specially-imported wasps, that paralyze grubs, the beetles spread clear across the country.

A notorious hitchhiker which will ride aboard almost anything that moves, the beetle has defied quarantines, transport inspections, food traps, mass sterilization, and wide use of insecticides in its westward march. It now infests at least 22 states and parts of Canada.

There are several ways of counteracting the menace of the Japanese beetle. One of the best is inoculating plants with spores of milky disease, which is fatal to the grub of this and a few other closely related insects but harmless to all other forms of life. This spore dust is manufactured commercially from the bodies of infected grubs and can be purchased at many farm supply stores. When applied to the soil, it seemingly poisons the ground for future generations of beetles.

This method of control, however, is most effective when carried out on a community basis. But since it may take several years for the milky disease to become duly effective, insecticides may be necessary in the meantime.

According to Pass, the adult beetle itself seldom becomes a problem where regular spray schedules are followed for control of other insects. But if there is a specific need for beetle control on plants, a spray of carbaryl or malathion may do the job.

There are other chemicals for eradicating grubs infesting lawn turfs. Anyone having problems with these insects can secure more information by contacting his local Extension Agent. A publication on "Controlling the Japanese Beetle" (Home and Garden Bulletin 150) also is available, at nominal cost, from the Superintendent of Documents, U.S. Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C. 20540.

Unfortunately, the Japanese beetle now infests most of the counties in Eastern Kentucky, but because of the traps that hold off the infestation and the quarantines set up by the state requiring certain articles, soil, turf, plants, plant parts, be treated prior to movement from an infested to a non-infested area, there has been a delay in the spread of this pest from east to west.

Beautiful... EXCITING NEW MODELS
by Jim Walter Homes

HERE THEY ARE !!
AT LAST - The new models you've been waiting for... the new models you have demanded for so long !!

To meet the ever increasing demand for spacious living, we are proud to introduce these larger two bath homes. We have just finished these NEW models which meet the requirements of discriminating folks everywhere, who require a larger, more distinctive home designed for comfortable living. Look them over carefully. Notice each one has two full size bathrooms to unclutter those morning traffic jams, and over 1150 square feet... all of it living area. Notice especially the beautiful colonial design of the Salem... the early American look of the Lexington. Note the isolation of the master bedroom. Yes, these are truly NEW models. We feel sincerely that you will love them every bit as much as we do.

Here's how you can build the home of your choice on your property at a price you can afford. We'll offer you a selection of over twenty models that can be built on your property. You can count on the materials to be high quality, long-lasting and requiring little maintenance. NOW DECIDE HOW MUCH INSIDE FINISHING YOU WOULD LIKE TO DO YOURSELF... TO SAVE MONEY. We'll stop at almost any stage of inside completion. Then, you take over. Finish the rest yourself. It'll save you money.
