years to accumulate. Young families are influenced by relatives, their friends, and advertising. But most of all, they lack the experience of dealing with the business and financial world which no one can avoid.

All families have problems of how to make ends meet, how to create a satisfying life, get what you want, and what you have, what decisions have to be made and when, how to adjust to the stages the family goes through.

Do you find yourself fitting these characteristics? Most young married persons will, even some who have managed homes for many years, are caught up in this pattern. Where can you find help for your problem? For years, the Cooperative Extension Service has been helping farmers and home-makers with their problems.

But extension now realizes it has much to offer everyone, especially the young families, with small children, working wives and a more rapid life style than their parents. A home-by-mail assistance program for young families is forming in Rockcastle County. Each month a family which subscribes to this program will receive a newsletter from the County Extension Office with down to earth helpful information on such subjects as how to find the real cost of credit, how appliances, and how to finance a home or car, tips on time saving for working women, low cost recipes, and so forth. If you are interested in receiving this information, call the County Extension Office at 256-2403. We will contact you and help you receive the information. There is no charge for the information and no obligations.

'KIPP CHILD CARE'

(Cont. From Front) train new staff as needed. This training is in addition to the educational requirements and experience needed for their particular position.

The KIPP project is one of its kind in the nation. KIPP takes a progressive approach in helping children. It is designed to reach children in their most formative years, infancy through six years of age. It is also designed to reach the family as a unit through nutrition, family planning, and referral to other helping agencies. Presently KIPP is serving 35 families in Rockcastle County with 62 children under six. The goal is to serve 60 families the first year. Service delivery began June 1, 1972. The family workers and aides in each department visit each family once a week when they work with the children in the home who are under five years of age. The family workers and aides use home-made toys in the infant stimulation program and through the use of toys, books and other educational materials, the workers can determine the developmental level of the child. By this method the workers can assess where the children are in their language development, their degree of muscle coordination, etc. The workers are also able to observe the child's health, both physically and mentally and, the need arises, follow through with the home on needed services. The basic goal of the Kentucky Infant and Preschool Project is to see that children are better prepared for the world from the time they enter the first grade until they can stand on their own two feet. According to the noted psychologist, Piaget, values and attitudes learned by a child in the first five years of life determine his entire outlook. KIPP is quality child development services offered to children under six in 16 eastern counties including Rockcastle. For questions regarding eligibility contact either the offices which deliver KIPP services. Information regarding day care will be printed as it is made available.

YOU AND THE DRAFT
 For the information of all draft registrants, we have compiled a list of the questions most frequently received by our office. Some of the questions and their answers follow.
 * Why did Selective Service phase out the 2-S student deferment?
 The college deferment phase-out is designed to make the draft, for as long as it is needed, as fair and equitable as possible for all registrants. Undergraduate deferments have been called the major inequity of the Selective Service System. Deferments have placed an unacceptable hardship on registrants who did not attend institutions of higher learning and similarly, have induced some men to attend college for the wrong reason—to avoid induction.
 Previously, the justification for college deferments was to ensure a sufficient supply of college-trained young people to meet national needs. But currently, only 25 per cent of the 1.9 million men annually reaching draft age are needed in the armed forces. Draft calls will have little effect on college enrollment when deferments are phased out.
 Dr. Curtis W. Tart, former director of Selective Service, discovered another reason for eliminating college deferments when he visited Vietnam in 1970. Many of the soldiers he talked with were college graduates. Consistently, these men reported that their service jobs lacked interest and challenge. Most of the men felt they should have entered the Army earlier.
 In addition, many returning veterans who continue their education do so with perhaps a deeper sense of direction and commitment. They also have the advantage of financial help through the G.I. Bill.
 We feel that the elimination of undergraduate student deferments is clearly in the best interest of all registrants.
 * How does the new draft law change the 2-S student deferment?
 The 1971 draft law allows men who were full-time college students during the 1970-71 academic year to finish their studies without interruption from the draft, provided they are making satisfactory progress and have not reached 24 years of age.
 Those entering college for the first time during 1971-72 or later will not be eligible for deferments. However, they will be able to postpone induction until the end of the current term or semester, should they receive an induction order.

Observations From The Republican Convention

(Ed's Note: Mr. Lambert is a law student, the son of Attorney and Mrs. James Lambert of Mt. Vernon. His observations are first-hand, interesting and informative and we think you will enjoy them.)

By: James H. Lambert

David Brinkley calls it that little bit of land where man has improved upon Mother Nature. He is, of course, speaking of Miami Beach, site of both the 1972 Republican and Democratic National Conventions. Here, miles of lavish beachfront hotels, gently swaying palm trees, perpetual summer, and vast stretches of white, sandy ocean front beaches with the luscious blue Atlantic serving as a background, have all combined to make the city a mecca for the rich and affluent who wish to escape the cold winters of the north.

Miami Beach also conjures up visions of romance and intrigue for the young. One advertisement states: "It moves. It swings. Big stars, Big clubs. Or little intimate corners where you can be alone together."

While winter rates in Miami Beach hotels are exorbitant beyond belief, lodging and other services are very high, even in summer. But, being fortunate enough to have a friend living in the area, and having always wanted to attend a Republican National Convention, I turned my three-year-old Ford southward—of course, after having called my friend to make sure I could stay with him while there.

As incumbent Presidents rarely have difficulty getting renominated, there was never any contest as to who the standard bearer would be. Therefore, I would like to record certain of my observations concerning the non-delegates, as the demonstrators liked to call themselves.

I drove directly to the Atlantis Hotel where the Kentucky delegation was staying. My brother, Joe, who was an aide to Senator Cooper, was there, as was most of the delegation and their families. Monday night consisted of talking politics and making new friends and greeting old ones.

Tuesday, however, as I drove across Biscayne Bay on the Arthur Godfrey Parkway, I saw bands of demonstrators walking up and down the streets. The radio reported that 2,000 demonstrators were in town. The announcer continued that they were assembled in Flamingo Park—which is about six blocks south of Convention Hall—and were preparing to march up Collins Avenue (the main street) and then back to the Hall for a silent protest.

This march was apparently accomplished with the demonstrators marching up Collins Avenue (the main street) and then back to the Hall for a silent protest. This march was apparently accomplished with the demonstrators marching up Collins Avenue (the main street) and then back to the Hall for a silent protest.

There, they tore down pictures of President Nixon and Vice President Agnew, as well as ripping down the American flag and throwing it contemptuously to the ground and spitting on it. At this point, being some 75 feet away, we had hardly had time to react.

Dr. Harold Burton, a physician from Corbin, was slowly walking from the hotel to the street to join the group when a demonstrator—while passing him—asked the doctor to show the face, knocking out two teeth. At this point, members of our group attempted to catch the demonstrator, but he ran behind a car and escaped us. Dr. Burton had his back to the man and could hardly have seen him, prior to being struck.

Wednesday—the day President Nixon was to make his acceptance speech—was the most violent day of the Convention. The demonstrators had publicly announced they intended to prevent delegates and guests from getting to the Convention Hall

Fiscal Court Makes Recommendations For 1973-74 County Road Programs

Evans Hilton, District Engineer, Ky. Department of Highways, met with the Rockcastle County Fiscal Court Tuesday to get their recommendations for the 1973-74 County Road Aid Program and Rural Secondary Road program.

Mr. Hilton told the court that the programs were being set up early this year so that contracts could be let in the Spring thereby giving contractors more summer months in which to work.

The County Road Aid Program covers maintenance of 136 miles of county roads in the county and nine bridges. Rockcastle will have approximately $96,318.00 to spend on county roads which figures out to $625 per mile per year. The amount of money available from the Rural Secondary Program is not known since it is determined from the gasoline tax collected during the fiscal year.

Mr. Hilton also presented a supplemental agreement to the Rural Secondary Program to the Court covering the Northfork of Copper Creek Road to the Garrard County line, a distance of 1 mile. The agreement was accepted by the Court and the Court also made a motion, which was unanimously approved, to carry the present roads already set up on the two program for maintenance.

The Magistrates were then asked for their recommendations for the two programs. The Magistrates recommendations on the County Road Aid Program follows: District 1, Heister Jones; CR 142 from US 750, 1.3 miles, improvement and CR 1329 from US 25, .9 mile, maintenance.

District 2, Boone Cromar, CR 104 from US 25 to Sand Hill Church, Bituminous Initial Treatment (BIT) and CR 1226 from KY 1249 to Creek grade, drain and traffic bound macadam (GD&TBM).

District 3, Sherman Sargent, CR 1287 from end of bituminous to KY 1250, GD&TBM and CR 1250, remainder for maintenance.

District 4, Cleith Thacker, CR 1084, remainder for maintenance and CR 1054, approximately 1.0 mile to Martin, maintenance.

District 5, C.W. Phillips, CR 1210 from old 25, maintenance; CR 1001 from end of maintenance to KY 1912, maintenance; KY 1787, 1.0 mile, part taken off Rural Secondary Program and CR 147 from KY 490, north 1.3 miles to reconstruction, GD&TBM.

Recommendations made on the Rural Secondary Program were: District 2, Boone Cromar; CR 1244, Bituminous surface from KY 1249 to KY 461.

District 3, Sherman Sargent; CR 1252 from end of bituminous surface to KY 70, BIT surface to top of hill, approximately 3.5 miles and CR 1058, reconstruct all.

District 5, C.W. Phillips; KY 1004, remainder BIT and CR 1054 from end of blacktop to Hummel Ridge, BIT.

The Court also accepted the equipment rental agreement from the State Highway Department at $66 a ton.

GOSPEL SINGING THIS FRIDAY NIGHT AT MVEE

There will be a Gospel Singing Saturday night, September 9 at Mt. Vernon Elementary School at the top of Hill, approximately 3.5 miles and CR 1058, reconstruct all.

Child Development Services Now Available Through KIPP

Child development services which includes child learning, nutrition, and day care (beginning January, 1973) are now available through the Kentucky Infant and Preschool Project (KIPP). The KIPP staff in the county are funded project with funds made available through Title 4A of the Social Security Act and the Appalachian Regional Commission.

The components: child learning, nutrition, family planning, and referral are now being delivered by the KIPP staff in the Department of Economic Security, Child Welfare, Mental Health and Public Health. The KIPP staff in the county are: Mrs. Dolores R. Albright, Intake Supervisor; Wayne Hambricht, Family Worker; Linda McCauley, Family Aid; Joyce Craig, Intake Secretary; Public Health: Mrs. Juanita House, KIPP Nutritionist; Mental Health: Bill Kelsey, Intake Supervisor; Mrs. Betty Lewis, Family Worker; Gail Dillingham, Family Aid and Mrs. Virginia S. Bray, Secretary, Child Welfare; Steve Albright, Intake Supervisor; Cora LaBort, Family Worker; Glenda Haddock, Family Aid and Rosalind Philbeck, Secretary. There is also a KIPP Dietician available, Sue E. Helen Palmer located at the Rockcastle County Hospital.

As was stated in last week's Signal, John Hamm will be the County Supervisor for the Day Care Component of the Project which will be getting underway in the near future.

According to Mr. Hamm, the proposed program will provide wide child development and day care services for Rockcastle County. The services will be offered to pre-school children 4 years and older through six child development centers geographically located so as to provide accessibility to all or most of the county's children in need.

Eligibility will be determined with priority being given to active, former or potential AFDC (Aid to Families with Dependent Children) recipients.

Some of the objectives of the child development centers are: 1) to satisfy the child's nutritional requirements and correct any dietary deficiencies; 2) to diagnose and treat any physical or mental impairment; 3) to maximize the child's physical development; 4) and 5) to enrich the child's intellectual and cultural life; 6) to get parents involved in the child's development; the activities of the center and the educational systems that affect their lives.

The present KIPP staff in Rockcastle County have been trained in child development, by the staff that attended a two-week child development workshop at the Children's Center, Syracuse University, Syracuse, New York. Two of these staff members were Steve Albright and Bill Kelsey. On going training sessions are held to Frankfort Watchline

At the risk of repeating ourselves, it does seem coincidental that the exemption of take-home groceries from the 5-cent sales tax goes into effect Oct. 1, a month before the election for U.S. Senate.

The 1972 General Assembly took it off last winter, of course, at the behest of the Ford administration, but—also at that best—chose not to make the exemption effective until much later.

It seems we were hearing at the time about the confusion and economic wrench the sales tax exemption might cause—new cash registers, educating the grocery clerks and so on.

However, the same excuses were not put forth for another tax which was newly imposed, the levy on the extraction of coal which went into effect promptly—barely two weeks after the legislators went home.

The coal operators were howling—but they always have, of course, and never have been taxed for their operation as in other states.

Still, they had some right on their side as they argued against undue haste. But the state wanted that money quickly and took the unusual step of starting to collect it before the new fiscal year came around.

Anyway, we won't be paying that nickel on our meat and potatoes, beginning next month, and it'll be interesting to see who tries to take the most

Strange, both parties are in favor of the idea, though it was the Republicans who stuck on an added 2-cent sales tax in 1969 and the Democrats who-banned it and hewed in 1971 when the Republicans again proposed taking off the tax.

Tom Emberton, the GOP nominee for governor, endorsed by then Gov. Louie B.

Nunn, first made the proposal, however, Nunn and other Republicans were not too enthused about one of their own standard bearers pushing for cutting a tax they were depending.

Back to the Democrats, under nominee Wendell Ford, who took weeks to decide what he was going to do. After all, how can you be against Santa Claus?

Well, not to stretch things too long, Ford went along all right and thereby pulled the rug out from Emberton's hottest issue.

History, especially the recent kind, depends a good deal on who's telling it.

More than likely we'll hear from Dee Huddleston, the Democratic nominee for Senate, that he had a strong role in making sales tax exemption through the 1972 Assembly.

And don't be surprised if Nunn, his rival, does not remind us all that a Republican first came up with the motion.

Meanwhile, is there any compelling reason that the severance tax imposition and the food tax exemption couldn't have been started together?

SPLITTING HAIRS— The Revenue Department passed around a circular last week showing how grocers are being advised to apply the food tax exemption.

There were the expected items in the tax-exempt category, mainly the usual shopping bag fillers.

But in the column marked "taxable items," we couldn't help noticing a singular entry, "candied apples."

Now, we all know that an apple is a fruit and, as such, doesn't have that nickel hanging over it after Oct. 1. But all you have to do is shove pointed stick into it, drop it in caramel and—life's taxable!

The same for "filled nuts versus chocolate-covered nuts. The same for lemonade mixes versus cocktail mixes.

The same for canned fruit juices versus canned soft drinks.

The same for cooking chocolate versus a good old candy bar.

We're getting a sweet tooth just writing about this, and one line in the Revenue circular sums it up: "The method used in packaging and distributing these preparations, including the kind and size of container used, will be considered in determining the primary use for which these preparations are sold."

BEWARE THE LADIES— That case of James Thompson, the ousted Personnel officer in Economic Security, and his allegations of politics in hiring and firing still is on the coiner.

One Ford administration official commented that any who tangles with Gail Huecker, the economic security commissioner, and Cattie Lou Miller, the personnel commissioneer, really has an uphill battle ramblings...

Was all set to scribble about how much I have enjoyed the Olympics on TV during the past week and then the tragedy occurred Tuesday and knocked the prop right out from under me.

I have never heard of anything so terrible in all my life and if I hear one more TV commentator refer to it as "the incident in Munich" I'll swear off television forever. It's not an "incident" it's a atrocity and one that puts the security division of the Olympics in a very bad light indeed. But, they, like other normal people, probably never thought of a group of fanatics stooping to kidnaping a group of young athletes and murdering them.

At this point, I haven't heard whether the games will continue or not. At first, I thought they shouldn't because really what athletes will have any heart to continue? But, still, I don't think it pays to let the world see a group of rebels be able to put a stop to anything in the world at any time.

Have a very interesting article in the paper this week from James H. Lambert (better known here as "Little Jimmy") concerning his observations at the recently held Republican National Convention. Jimmy is a good writer and you'll enjoy reading it. I enjoyed reading in Sunday's Herald a reprint of an editorial, which appeared in the Somerset Commonwealth Journal about Cong. Tim Lee Carter and some demonstrators at the Convention. It seems that Cong. Carter was strolling down the street when he was accosted by some anti-war demonstrators who began their attack verbally and then switched to more aggressive attack by ripping the buttons of Carter's coat off. Carter ended the proceedings with the deft use of a "haymaker" and we for one are glad he did. So there....

Went to Friday night's ball game between the Rockets and Russell Co. and don't know whether the Rockets were just playing ragged ball or whether Russell County has one more of a high school team. I do know one thing though, Russell County has one player, No. 3, (don't even know his name) who was huge and who could move the ball wherever and whoever he wanted to it seemed. Ronnie Brown nailed him one time on a reverse when Brown was the only thing between him and the goal line but that was one of the few times he was nailed by anybody. I'm not sure but I think he made all of their touchdowns (final score 42-0) but I do know he made all but maybe one. On well, the season's young and we understand Coach Polly promised the boys some hard practice sessions this week in blocking and tackling....

The President would have to speak to a half-empty auditorium, thereby embarrassing him before the nation.

By Wednesday afternoon, Collins Avenue was crawling with people, and massive traffic jams were resulting. Boys and girls — hundreds of them, usually in their late teenage or early twenties — would either lie down in the middle of the street, or clasp hands, thus forming human barriers and preventing traffic from getting through. Traffic would have to stop; then one of the demonstrators would raise the hood and knock a wire or remove the distributor cap so the car would not run. The police were doing the best they could, but the demonstrators had formed gangs of 50 to 100 and had scattered throughout the city.

Two incidents concerning Wednesday afternoon stand out in my mind. At last, the taxi the President sign on its back bumper, was traveling north on Collins Avenue when a crowd of demonstrators immediately pulled down their gas masks, had nose, and caught a full blast of fumes in my face.

By far, the most violent act I saw at the Convention occurred on Wednesday afternoon about 6:30 P.M. A chartered bus, carrying the South Carolina delegation, was forced to stop by the demonstrators. The bus tires were slashed and the demonstrators entered the bus. From my vantage point about 75 feet away, I could see them hitting the delegates and dragging them out of the bus. When all of the demonstrators were off the bus, but with half the delegates remaining aboard, a man with a red bandanna on grabbed a newspaper from the street, lit it, took off the gas cap, and was starting to start the lightest sewer pipe into the tank when the police arrived.

A powerfully built black policeman with a huge billy club swung at the man in the head and knocking him at least 100 others were thrown into nearby wagons. More demonstrators came from a nearby building to join the group. They were shouting for peace would attempt to blow up a bus containing children, made me realize that certain demonstrators were dragging them out of the bus — even those murdered — to destroy those who differed with their views.

I had been walked to all of the other sessions, but decided that it might be wise to take a taxi to this one. No driver, however, would take me. When I went and flag them down and point toward the Hall, they would shake their heads and drive away.

Upset at what I had seen, and a bit foahardy I suppose, I decided to walk, although the hotel clerk strongly advised against it. The demonstrators had, by this time, surrounded the hall, and I do not remember any of their while en route.

On Wednesday afternoon, the police had secured a group of school buses, which they strategically placed around the entrances to the Hall, thus preventing the demonstrators from gathering in large numbers in front of the gates.

As their part, the demonstrators stood in the shadows shouting obscenities I hardly knew existed. By this time, they had become a mob, a pack of wolves, with even their leaders unable to control them. The demonstrators were 95 per cent white, and anyone who was not white was his shoulders, and who were anything approaching a clean shirt and trousers was immediately suspected of being a Nixon supporter, thus a prime target of harassment or physical injury.

Wednesday night, the demonstrators were allowed to occupy the street in front of the Hall. This policy had also been followed the night before. A few-foot-high fence separated the street from Convention grounds. Here, their stage and sound equipment was set up, and 10,000 — as the police estimated — sat in the street on rows, to hear their leaders speak from the platform.

Innocent children slaughtered by U.S. bombs... how Nixon was a warlord, and, of course, many epithets totally unprintable. She seemed to have an almost hypnotic effect on the young people.

At the other end of the block, the more militant demonstrators had gathered and were tanning the police with the most vicious and obscene language I had ever heard. The police, to their credit, watched carefully, but made no reply.

There was a young policeman nearby, and he and I began talking. He was very friendly, and allowed me to stand with him and watch. Soon the first rock came across the fence. Then came a bottle. Another rock. Then a barrage of rocks and knives. At that time, the officer in charge nodded his head and his men began firing tear gas into the crowd.

The demonstrators began running to escape the fumes. About 25 per cent of the demonstrators actually came to Miami Beach looking for violence. However, the leaders of the anti-war movement had whipped the remaining ones into such a frenzy by their inflammatory speeches that, in the end, even

My arms and face began to burn; the gas permeated my lungs so that I could hardly breathe. I began running for the door of the Hall and the air conditioning inside. Every step was an effort. I fell as if I was literally choking to death. Finally I reached the door and began rubbing my eyes, when a voice shouted, "Don't rub your eyes. Throw water in your face." After soaking my face and arms for at least ten minutes, the burning subsided. Still feeling as if I might faint, I went to the first aid room for treatment. It was nearly 11:00. After resting oxygen and resting for 20 minutes or so, I had started back to the Convention Floor, when a CBS reporter interviewed me as to who had started the trouble.

In retrospect (and this is only a personal opinion), the demonstrators of the anti-war movement had whipped the remaining ones into such a frenzy by their inflammatory speeches that, in the end, even they couldn't control them. Although no one was killed, newspaper accounts stated that more arrests were made in Miami Beach this August than in Chicago during the violent 1968 demonstrations. Even with my unfortunate experience with the tear gas, Miami Beach stands out to me as a city of beauty and charm. And the thousands of young people who conducted themselves as ladies and gentlemen convinces me anew that the vast majority of youth in this country do wish to obey the law and work for the candidate of their choice in an orderly, rational manner.

There are now more young persons than ever before. These young persons are marrying soon after high school and are given the responsibility of a family and home to care for before they realize what is in store for them.

The number of persons with ages between 15 and 24 have increased 50% in the last ten years. There are over 30,000 marriages per year in the United States; one-third end in divorce. Money management and marital adjustments are two frequent reasons given for divorce. The average age at marriage is eighteen for girls and nineteen for boys. One half of the girls are married by age 21.

Today's young families are highly mobile. One-half of them will move every year. In twenty-three years of marriage the average home provider will change jobs six to seven times. Over 40% of the women work outside the home. In one-fourth of our families the head of the household is under 35 years old.

Our largest consumers are young families. Young families are major purchasers of furniture appliances, and insurance. Young persons have more money to spend than their parents had when they started housekeeping. Most young persons use credit but do not fully understand it. Few have kept written records. They do want consumer education help that is reliable.

Young families do have financial problems. Do have management problems and do have consumer problems. Their expenditures are greater in proportion to their income than more established families. Many young families may be over indebted and paying too much for housing, transportation, entertaining or other areas of their expenditures. Often young families are not prepared for emergencies. Financial problems include large unexpected medical expenses, installed buying, heavy household expenses and moving often.

Young marrieds often do not communicate with each other after the honeymoon stage has ended. More often than not they have not clarified their values and identified their cooperative goals. Their expectations are unrealistic - wanting now what it took their parents twenty
