Visitors Can Bring

T.G.E. To Sows and Pigs
The arrival of colder weather means Rockcastle County swine producers need to take extra care to keep T.G.E. out of their herds. This disease can result in a 100 percent death loss in pigs less than days old, according to H. Lee Durham, Rockcastle County Extension Agent.

Durham notes that T.G.E. or Transmissible Gastroenteritis, may be brought into the farrowing house by dogs, cats, rats, mice and birds. These animals are looking for a warm place to live and food to live on as the temperature drops and ice and snow arrive on the scene. One of their favorite places is likely to be in the farrowing house, which is warm and has plenty of feed and water.

These welcome tenants in the farrowing house may bring diseases to the sows and baby pigs, and one of these diseases may be T.G.E. This virus disease is highly contagious in pigs and is likely to infect every pig in a susceptible farrowing house.

The death loss is high with very young pigs, but decreases with age in pigs over ten days old. Sows infected with T.G.E. get sick, vomit, and then usually recover in a day or two.

There is a T.G.E. vaccine for sows on the market which is available through veterinarians, and the vaccine is about 60 to 70 percent effective. The sows must be vaccinated twice, 31 weeks and two weeks before farrowing. Vaccinated sows that develop immunity pass antibodies through their milk to the nursing pigs. The pigs are thus passively immune to the disease as long as they receive an adequate and continuous supply of milk from the immune sow.

Sows that have had T.G.E. two weeks before farrowing usually produce healthy litters and supply their litters with strikes, the only thing to do is ride it out. Raising the farrowing house temperature to 80 degrees reduces the stress of chilling. The animals should present in the herd, a break in farrowing along with a clean-up and disinfection of facilities will break the cycle.

There are some things farmers can do to help prevent T.G.E. from entering the farrowing house. They should try to keep out dogs, cats, rats, birds, mice and any other would-be visitors to the farrowing house. Also, anyone who has visited other hog operations should not be allowed in the farrowing house. Workers entering the farrowing house should wear clean clothing and clean disinfectant boots, and should have clean hands or wear clean gloves. Feed sacks and any other equipment brought into the farrowing house should be clean and not have been around other hogs recently.

Any farmer who suspects an outbreak of T.G.E. in his herd should contact a veterinarian as soon as possible.

THE FIRST THANKSGIVING FEAST

Despite the many details handed down by history and tradition about the first Plymouth Thanksgiving, nobody knows the date on which it was held. The year was 1621 but, apparently, the Pilgrims were too busy eating and having a good time to note the exact date. It could have occurred in November, but historians think it more likely, took place sometime during the harvest months of September or October.

Although plentiful and apparently enjoyed by all, that first Thanksgiving feast was hardly sumptuous. The Indians suffered near starvation chronically, and the Pilgrims had lived little better since arriving on the Mayflower the previous December. According to historical records, all but 52 died of hunger, malnutrition, and associated ills during that first bitter winter.

But the situation could have been worse. When the snows finally melted and the Pilgrims faced their spring planting, they did so with little knowledge and justifiable foreboding. Most were townpeople rather than farmers, and what little they knew about farming better suited Europe than the chilly climate and flinty soils of New England. Without help from the Indians, the Pilgrims might have had a crop failure with the disastrous concomitant result of a starved-out colony.

The Indians saved the day. They showed the Pilgrims how to plant corn, beans, squash, and that amazing "melen" they called the pumpkin. Also they taught them how to fertilize their corn crops with fish from the sea, and how to catch "fat and sweet" sals which the colonists relished and the unfamiliar Indians which they found good but "burdensome" to the taste.

So with the end of the summer and a good crop year, "Governor Bradford sent four men on a fowling so that we might after a more special manner rejoice together, after we had gathered the fruit of our labors." One Plymouth resident wrote.

The four hunters bagged wild turkeys, geese, ducks, wood pigeons and grouse, and the pilgrims ladies made beehchnuts into stuffing, pumpkins into stew, corn into bread and cranberry sauce.

Then there were stewed lobsters and oysters, baked eels and codfish, along with plenty of home-brewed beer and wine from wild grapes.

Then as the Pilgrims sat down to eat and give thanks for their good fortune, 90 Indians, no doubt attracted by the banging blunders of the hunters, showed up and were invited to take part in the communal meal.

After the meal was over, as history records, Miles Standish paraded his 20-man regiment barefoot through the woods with bow and arrow and Pilgrims with ponderous firearms displayed their marksmanship.

And thus, says history, and contests and everyone had a good time--so good a time, in fact, that the festivities continued for three days with some of the Indians slipping away into the woods and bringing in five deer for the festive pot.

And thus, says history, began the tradition of one of our most delightful holiday seasons. Even though this Pilgrim get-together with the Indians was not the first formal giving of thanks in the English colonies -- one was held in a Virginia colony on Dec. 4, 1619 -- the New England feast is believed to be what President Lincoln had in mind when he proclaimed the last Thursday in November as a national holiday of Thanksgiving.

Roast Stuffed Turkey

Heat oven to 325. Rinse turkey with cold water; drain dry. (Use the neck (wishbone) cavity loosely with stuffing. Use your favorite recipe or try the one below. Skewer neck skin the back. Tuck wing tips behind shoulder joints. Spoon stuffing lightly into body cavity. Do not pack it, as stuffing expands during roasting. Tie a string securely around the tail, then tie the ends of the legs to the main string. Or push the legs through the band of skin above the tail.

Place turkey, breast side up, on rack in shallow, open roasting pan. Brush with softened butter or margarine. Insert a meat thermometer so bulb is in center of the inside thigh muscle. Be sure that the bulb does not touch bone. Roast, using times below as a guide, until thermometer registers 185. Baste or brush occasionally with pan drippings or butter or margarine. When the turkey is about two-thirds done, cut the cord or band of skin at the tail to permit the heat to reach the heavy-meated joints. To prevent excessive browning cover turkey with a loose tent of aluminum foil or lay fat-moistened cheesecloth over the legs and breast. Ready-to-eat turkey, and approximate hours: 6 to 8 lbs., 3 to 3 1/2; 8 to 12 lbs., 4 1/2 to 4 3/4; 12 to 16 lbs., 5 1/2 to 6; 16 to 20 lbs., 6 1/2 to 7.

To test for doneness when turkey is used for stuffing: About 20 minutes before roasting time is up, press the thick part of the drumstick between fingers protected with paper towels. If meat is done, it will feel very soft. Or move the drumstick up and down. It should move easily or twist out of the joint. Remove turkey to heated platter and let it rest for 20 minutes while you make gravy. This resting will help make gravy easier.

What we didn't learn.

Maybe we're successful as funeral directors because of the things we didn't learn from books. Such as thoughtfulness. And understanding. And compassion. And respect.

These are the qualities you can't get out of a book or a classroom - but they mean more to us (and to the families we serve!) than anything we've ever been taught.

The Stone Boat Adventure

In these highly sophisticated times it is good to have a story-book adventurer like Mike Mitchell to remind all of us there are still new horizons and challenges to be met.

Mike Mitchell, the young adventurer who in 1971 built a 14 foot sailboat and single-handedly sailed it from Los Angeles to Hawaii, has just completed another remarkable sea voyage. On June 23rd of this year he set sail from Masan, South Korea, in a Cement Sail Boat. He encountered all of the dangerous natural elements including a typhoon, he killed a man-eating shark and in the last days of the trip found that his water supply had become contaminated! Despite all of this, Mike arrived last Tuesday, some 7500 miles later, at the Los Angeles harbor to the enthusiastic welcome of the press and many spectators. He has captured this adventure on color film, lectures and personal appearances are scheduled.

Mitchell enjoys any challenge — on land, at sea or in the air and any new horizon is a way of life for this tall, attractive man who is frank to admit that being "first" is very important. He states that he will gamble with his life so long as the odds are backed by common sense and knowledge of that which he undertakes. His first book is ready for publication and he is busily researching his next adventure.

Let Us Be Thankful

From its beginning, this nation has been blessed in so many ways . . . in its land, in its people, and in its government. It is only right that we take time from our busy lives to acknowledge the source of all these blessings, our Creator. We invite you to join your neighbors as they come together in praise and gratitude for the gifts bestowed on this country. Come to the church of your choice on Thanksgiving Day!

JOHN NICHOLS'

Frankfort Watchline

When you realize the dismal political future of former Kentucky governors lately, it's rather surprising.

Not since Earl Clements made it to the Senate in the mid 1950s—and then out again—and Happy Chandler won a second term as governor about the same time—has the outlook been so bleak for those who reign for four years over the state's affairs.

Louie Nunn, who lost the U.S. Senate race despite a fantastically long coalition, is the latest victim.

There is Bert Combs, who came back after a decade to take on his onetime administrative aide, Wendell Ford, last year, and we know what happened.

There is Chandler, who tried for a third term again and again, and we know what happened.

There is Ned Breathitt, who hasn't tried formally for the U.S. Senate, but was steered out of the race in favor of Dee Huddleston, now senator-elect by his victory over Nunn. In other words, "landrops of political misfortune keep falling on the heads of former governors."

In passing, we asked Ford recently whether he was aware of the trend. Yes, he was pressed on. Did he realize that if the pattern held, this term might be his one and only of statewide import? Could be.

But Ford repeated that all he wants is to be a good state governor and we're taking it at face value. Assuming that he goes out of office with a good job rating, maybe he will just return to his insurance business at Owensboro and be content to work for the Democrats within the party without the temptation to run for high office again.

Back on the former governors' misfortunes, it has been noted that Combs and Nunn both were responsible for the total 5-cent sales tax in effect in Kentucky.

The implication is that both were punished by voters with long and bitter memories.

We think there is a good deal of truth to the theory, but that the careers of Chandler and Breathitt make the point somewhat paradoxical.

After all, Chandler was the longtime foe of a sales tax—the man who took off the first one and the man who made the first proposal to take it off four last year. But, the voters either didn't buy the Chandler no-tax record or Chandler.

Breathitt attained the governorship on a no-tax pledge and, folks, he kept it almost to the letter.

Supposedly that should have put him in great shape with the voters, but we would keep hearing after his term that he was not popular. Not popular with the politicians, we know. Not popular with the voters, either? We don't know.

Summing up, it's a bad decade for ex-governors—and not only in Kentucky. The fact is certainly has some bearing on it, but is not the whole bag by any means.

May we offer another theory: There are subtle aspects of a former governor's personality that possibly displease many voters, who may sense it more than express it to others.

That subject is worthy of a psychological thesis, and we're not equipped to go farther right now.

THE PHONE THAT DIDN'T RING.—Back in May after his senatorial primary victory, Nunn was telephoned by the vice president on election night. The conversation went out on the public address system as hundreds of cheering Republicans listened.

Switch the scene to election night, Nov. 7. Workmen had installed a new white phone a few hours previous and hooked it up again to a public address system.

Everyone just knew a call would be coming in from the White House.

Well, if the call ever came, it wasn't over that phone.

We've got a good idea for you.

At this time of year, it's often tough to think of a gift that's unusual... and useful! A gift that works around the clock, every day of the year. A private, personal extension telephone. It's a thoughtful and very personal gift and it's appreciated long after Christmas.

Call our business office for complete information. You'll discover that we have all kinds of special telephones in decorator colors, and decorator styles. And you'll even find we have telephones for the hard of hearing. And telephones that live outdoors. We have beautiful, melodic chimes that replace the normal bell. And all of these items have the Merry Christmas virtues of being useful and inexpensive.

This year, let all of us not only wish you a Merry Christmas but also help to make sure you have one.

Comeuppance for Creditors

Mrs. Olson was home alone when two husky men came to her door. "We're from the appliance store," they announced, and we are going to repossess your stove.

Despite her protests, they barged into the house, seized the stove, and carried it away—leaving scot stains all over the rug.

Understandably upset, Mrs. Olson determined to sue the store for damages. In court, the proprietor told the judge:

"Maybe my boys did get a little careless. I am willing to pay for cleaning her rug. But aside from that, she suffered no harm. After all, she was behind in her payments."

However, the judge held him liable not only for the rug but also for "punitive damages"—that is, extra damages imposed to teach him a lesson. The law is taking an increasingly stern view of "rough stuff" by creditors in the repossession of merchandise. To discourage such tactics, most courts will award punitive damages to the debtor over and above any actual harm done.

This is especially true when the reposessor resorts to personal violence. Thus, a court awarded punitive damages to a housewife after her sewing machine was repossessed at the point of a pistol. In another case, a furniture dealer told a widow she could have extra time to pay for her purchases because she had to have an operation. But while she was in the hospital, he broke into her house and decamped with the furniture. Here too, a court found ample grounds for awarding punitive damages.

Nevertheless, the law does not frown on the basic idea of repossession. By giving the creditor a simple and speedy remedy against the delinquent debtor, it can keep down the cost of credit for other consumers.

Reputably courts have found nothing improper when a reposessor towed away a car parked in front of a debtor's house or even in his driveway. As one court pointed out, the seller is merely being "back" "without force, threats, or even stealth"—what is rightfully his.

Library

Notes

A shipment of new books has been received at the Rockcastle County Library.

Among them are:

ACQUINTE, by Marc Duke. An extraordinary book on the Chinese art of healing. THE BRIDE'S GUIDE FOR YOUNG MARRIERS, by Betty Rolston. Valuable, practical constructive counselling in creating a desirable home for today's young woman.

CHAMPION CATS OF THE WORLD, by Catherine Ing and Grant Ford. For comprehensive and her elegance no other book approaches this collection of the finest examples of the world of cats.

CHEMISTRY FOR THE MILLION, by Richard Smith. Written for the layman, this interesting and highly readable book explains what chemistry is all about.

CIVILIZATIONS OF BLACK AFRICA, by Jacques Maquet. An excellent introduction to traditional African societies and the emerging modern realities.

DISEASE AND HISTORY, by Frederick Cartwright. A distinguished medical historian explores the impact of disease on the great events of history. THE DIDDAKO!, by Rumer Godden. An absorbing novel of the conflict between the freedom and excitement of grey life and the staid prudence of an English country village.

DOPEY TALK, by Jan Blakham. A different kind of Western.

FAMOUS AMERICAN TRADEMARKS, by Harold Bahach. This book brings together the stories of dozens of fascinating trademarks and symbols. The lore, history, legends, and even the human personalities, in their creation and development are described in interesting detail.

FINDING FACTS FAST, by Alden Todd. A unique book that not only tells you where to find what you want but also teaches you how to find out what you want and need to know about everything.

GOLDENROD, by Herbert Barker. A novel about love - between a father and his sons, a man and a woman.

THE GREAT DRUG DECEPTION, by Ralph Fine. This book discusses the tragic consequences when the drug industry places a higher value on sales than on human safety.

A HEALTH UNTO HIS MA-

JESTY, by Jean Plaidy. A romantic novel of the lusty, yet elegant days when England called Charles Stuart back to his kingdom. THE INSIDE SWING, by August Darr. Covering such basics of golf as the grip, the stance, the address and the long and the short game, this book shows why the inside swing assures better game control.

JOHN EDGAR HOOVER, by Hank Messick. A critic I examination of the director and of the continuing alliance between crime, business and politics.

LET'S GET WELL, by Agate Davis. In simple, nontechnical terms, backed by medical references, Miss Davis reviews the scientific literature, indicating that recuperation can be hastened by the proper selection of natural foods and the use of dietary supplements.

MILBURY, by Bowen Ingram. A finely etched portrait of the subtle gradations of emotion and awareness experienced by a young girl growing up in the South.

MONEY IN POLITICS, by Her-

...ABOUT QUILTS!

Making do in a new hand called for all the ingenuity early settlers could muster. With today's interest in recycling materials, there's a lot to learn from our hearty pioneer forebears.

The first colonists found long and cold winter nights. The light bedclothes they had brought from Europe would hardly do, and cloth was rare. Pioneer women cut every bit of good material from worn-out clothing and sewed these together, regardless of size and shape, into fanciful "crazy quilts."

As material became more plentiful, pieces were cut into Bill Tripp squares and rectangles of uniform size and sewn together in "flat or rick" quilts. Soon, designs such as "Roman stripes," "brick wall" and "log cabin" developed. Triangles and diamond shapes were cut to create other patterns. These early pieced quilts were almost all geometric in design.

About 1750, the applique quilt appeared. To a large piece of cloth the size of the finished quilt, smaller pieces of colored cloth cut in intricate designs were applied.

Both pieced and applique refer only to the design of the quilt, explains Compton's Encyclopedia. Each quilt has a lining and an interlining. The name "quilt" comes from the method of fastening the layers of material firmly together. Lining, interlining, and quilt tops are stretched into a quilting frame. Then the quilter works out a design in your running stitches through all layers.

Pioneer women gathered in "quilting bees" to work together. These were large, social gatherings that produced the family's needs for winter. As many as 12 women might work at one quilting frame, and, at any quilting bee, several frames might be in use at one time.

It's fun to discover interesting facts in Compton's Encyclopedia.

Shanda Michelle Middleton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William R. Middleton, Jr. of Quail, celebrated her first birthday November 5 at the home of her parents. Grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Robert Middleton of Route 3, Vernon and Mr. and Mrs. Shirley Caldwell of Route 1, Brodhead.

An Electric Clothes Dryer Means Less Work for You!

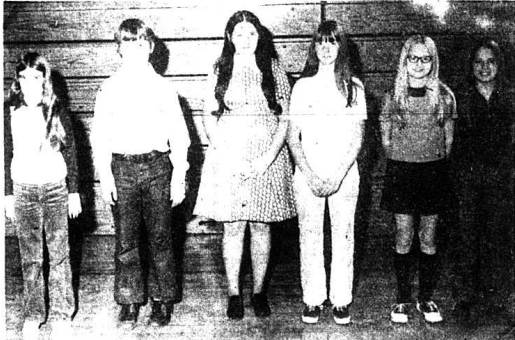

A clean, flameless electric clothes dryer means less work and more free time for you! It cuts down on muscle-straining laundry work. No lifting and lugging heavy baskets of wet clothes outside to the clothesline. You can even throw those clothespins away!

Your flame-free, efficient electric dryer cuts down on ironing work, too. Many pieces are ready to fold and put away right from the dryer. Another great advantage of clean, essential electricity.

See your appliance dealer about the labor-saving healthy benefits of an automatic electric clothes dryer. It saves you steps, time and strength. That's part of the "good life" of clean electric power!

Electricity — the cleanest energy you can use.

FAIRVIEW

Rev. Ray Dean filled his regular appointment at Fairview over the week end. Due to colds and chicken pox our Sunday School attendance was down to 91. But we thank God that some of us were able to be there. And we wish a speedy recovery for the sick.

Sympathy is extended to the family of Mrs. Charlie Clark of Snider, May God comfort and bless them in their sorrow.

Doctor in Doubt

"I did my best." So said a doctor not long ago when a disgruntled patient sued him for malpractice. It seems the patient had been suffering for eight years from a surgical wound that would not heal. Now, demanding damages, he told the court:

"I realize that the doctor did his best. The trouble is, his best was not good enough. After all these years, he must have realized his own limitations. What he should have done was to send me to a specialist."

The court agreed, and the doctor was held liable. The court said that when a doctor has or ought to have serious doubts about his ability to handle a case, he has the legal duty to send the patient to someone who is better qualified. A similar duty rests on other practitioners of the healing arts. Take this case:

A druggist healer, treating a man who had severe abdominal pains, gave him a vigorous massage and a strong laxative. Result: the man died from a ruptured appendix. In due course, his widow sued the healer for malpractice.

At the trial, he insisted that he had used the best treatment according to his own school of thought. Nevertheless, the court ordered him to pay damages. With plain signs of possible appendicitis, said the court, he should have turned the case over to a regular doctor.

Of course, the mere fact that a treatment is unsuccessful does not mean the doctor was at fault. In another case a boy's broken leg, set by the family doctor, healed with some permanent stiffness. The family, claiming damages, blamed the doctor for not calling in a specialist.

But the doctor explained:

"This was not an unusual case. I have often handled similar fractures, and there was no special reason for me to expect trouble with this one."

The court decided this was a legitimate defense, and dismissed the case. Noting that medicine is not an exact science, the judge said no one would dare to be a doctor if he had to guarantee perfect results every time.
