Take a tip from a young Wood duck emerging from its nest, discover the beauty of nature.

The newly-hatched Wood duck is the symbol of the recent 36th annual National Wildlife Week, which ended March 24. The duck, pictured on publicity posters, helped portray the week's theme, "Discover Wildlife-It's Too Good to Miss."

All that newly-hatched duck has to do, to break out into the natural world, is take that first step out of the nest," said Thomas L. Kimball, the executive vice-president of the National Wildlife Federation. "And it's nearly as easy for people to take that same first step, to break out into nature and see what beauty it has to offer."

Kentuckians have ample opportunity for taking that first step. One does not have to go miles from civilization to see and enjoy wildlife. There are parks in the midst of our largest cities which are homes for birds and squirrels, and suburbanites often share their neighborhoods with a surprisingly large variety of wildlife—shrews, field mice,

VINES

Spring is the best time of year to set any kind of vine such as English Ivy, Vines or Myrtle, hickories, Wisteria and Clematis. Few home-owners are taking advantage of the decorative value of vines when they are carefully selected and correctly located. A bare spot near the side of the house where there is too much shade for shrubs, grasses or evergreens may be covered with English ivy or Vines. Vines can be used in place of an awning on a side of porch or to cover a fence which is not attractive.

Pruning Spring-Flowering Shrubs

Prune spring-flowering shrubs when they finish flowering if you want to produce the best show each spring in your garden.

To do a good job of annual pruning, remove from one-third to one-fourth of the canes or shoots. The older canes should be the ones removed. When pruning an old, neglected shrub for the first time, you may find it desirable to remove additional portions of the top.

The number of canes to remove depends upon the kind of plant. Fast growing shrubs, such as lilac, should have from one-seventh to one-tenth of the canes removed. Most others should have from one-fourth to one-sixth removed.

Forsythia, some of the spireas, viburnums, and a similar growing plants may benefit by having the new shoots (canes) which started from the ground in this spring "pinched" at a height of 14-18 inches. Pinching consists of removing the soft growing tip. This will usually encourage branching. As these new branches grow, they may be pinched again as they reach 10-14 inches. Continue pinching until about July 1. Forsythia shoots pinched in this manner will often flower well the next spring. This type of training works best on Lynwood Gold, Bessie Ferrand and Spring Glory forsythias.

Late-flowering shrubs—those forming flowers after growth starts in the spring—should have been pruned by or before the start of growth. Snowhill hydrangea, the hypericums, butterfly bush and crepe myrtle are examples of such plants.

Pruning to "bowl-type haircuts" spoils the natural shape. Prunes aged tops and reduces the amount of bloom.

Fertilize Plants and Grass

University of Kentucky Leaflet 287 gives directions for feeding trees and shrubs. A rule of thumb for fruit trees is to use 2 1/2 ounces of ammonium nitrate per bush of tree age. If the tree is growing in soil, this amount may be increased about 50 percent.

SERVICEBERRY

A native tree found in many counties, but seldom used around the home, is the Serviceberry, or Shadblow, Amelanchier, as it has all three names in different localities. This tree grows to be 25 or even 35 feet tall and has lustrous green leaves. Found growing native in the woods means it does well in the very early spring. On the edge of woods, it blooms so early, it is sometimes called the timekeeper tree as it heralds the beginning of spring.

NATIONAL FOREST TIMBER FOR SALE

A certified check, bank draft, cashier's check or money order, in the amount of $800 payable to Forest Service, USDA, must be deposited with each bid to be applied on the purchase price, refunded or retained as damages, according to conditions of the sale. The right to reject any and all bids is reserved. Before bids are submitted, full information concerning the timber, the sample contract, the conditions of sale and submission of bids should be obtained from the Forest Supervisor, Winchester, Ky. or the District Ranger, Berea, Ky.

The purchaser will be required to deposit $278.17 lump sum for road maintenance of 3.3 miles of S-Tree and Whinstone Roads, F.S. #20 and 43.

HOW TO BUY PLENTIFUL DRY BEANS

Dry beans are nutritious, delicious, low cost and right now, very plentiful.

Hearty dry bean dishes are welcome entrees to any home-maker attempting to stretch her food budget.

Dry beans are an excellent source of protein. In fact, dry beans provide more protein for the money than most other foods. And the protein derived from these foods, when combined with protein from meats and other foods of animal origin, make an unbeatable "protein team" which the body needs to build and repair vital organs and tissues.

Dry beans provide a wealth of energy and nutrition at a cost per pound that is nominal. They contain B vitamins, such as thiamin and riboflavin and some are a good source of calcium. They are real nuggets of mineral value for the iron they provide—a 3/4 cup serving of dry beans provides about a third of the recommended daily for an adult male.

Although there are many varieties of dry beans available in the stores, a few buying tips apply for all of them.

About one-third of all dry beans and nearly all dry peas and lentils are officially graded under the USDA's Federal grading program or after processing. However, retail packages seldom carry the federal or state grade.

Federal grades for dry beans and peas and lentils are generally based on the shape, size, color, damage and foreign material.

The more uniform the color and size of the product, the higher the federal grade will be. The lower grades usually contain more foreign matter and more kernels of uneven size and off-color. Lower qualities are not usually sold through retail stores.

The federal grades seen on the grocery shelf are usually U.S. No. 1 Choice Handpicked for Great Northern, pinto and pea beans; and U.S. Extra No. 1 for dry lima beans, large or small.

If you do not find packages marked with federal or state grades, you can be your own "grader" in a way by looking for the same factors an AMS grader considers.

First, try to buy your beans in cellophane bags or other "see-through" types of packages.

Look for beans with a bright, uniform color. Loss of color usually indicates long storage, lack of freshness and beans that will take longer to cook.

Look for beans of uniform size. Mixed beans will result in uneven cooking, since smaller beans cook faster than larger ones.

Look for beans without cracked seed coats, foreign material and pinholes caused by insect damage. These are all signs of low quality beans.

And read the label on the bean package. By law, the label must contain at least the name and address of the manufacturer, packer or distributor, the common or usual name of the bean and the weight.

Other information on the label might include instructions on how to prepare and serve them, including recipes.

After getting them home, dry beans should be kept in tightly covered containers and stored in a dry, cool place—about 50 to 70 degrees Fahrenheit. Stored in this manner, dry beans will keep their quality for several months.

After opening a package, don't mix the contents with that of other packages bought at separate times, particularly several months apart. Mixing packages will result in uneven cooking since older beans take longer to cook than fresher ones. Keep the beans in the original package until opened. Then store them in a glass or metal jar or a container with a tight-fitting lid.

BOILED BEANS

2 cups of dry beans (any kind)
6 cups (1 1/2 quart) water
1/4 pound salt pork, sliced
1 1/2 teaspoon salt

Boil beans in water 2 minutes, then soak 1 hour (May soak overnight without boiling). Do not drain off any water. Add salt pork and salt to beans and simmer until tender.

Black pepper, small amount of brown sugar and 2 teaspoons chopped onion may be added to beans 30 minutes before removing from heat. Serve with cole slaw, cornbread, mashed potatoes and milk.

Do you plan to have a vegetable garden this year? The food stamps you save in the summer can be spent in the winter.

SPLIT PEA AND FRANKFURTERS SOUP
1-1/2 cups dry split peas
1 quart water
1/2 cup chopped onion
1 1/2 teaspoon pepper
1/2 pound frankfurters
1 tablespoon margarine
1 large can evaporated milk

Wash peas. Combine peas, onion, salt, pepper and water in a sauce pan. Simmer 25 to 30 minutes until peas are tender. Brown frankfurters in fat in fry pan. Add frankfurters and evaporated milk to soup. Simmer 5 minutes longer to blend flavors. Do not boil. Serve 4-6.

Maryland "Gold" Leaf Showing Signs of Tarnish

Kentucky-grown Maryland tobacco, apparently, continues to raise BIG questions among agricultural concerns.

On February 12, 168,134 pounds of leaf were offered for inspection on a local warehouse floor. Among those offerings, 38 percent was certified to have characteristics of quota tobacco, supposedly Burley.

Recently, March 21, producers offered 113,247 more pounds (preliminary figure) of leaf to be inspected and certified, hopefully, as Maryland, Type 32. However, only 24.5 percent was so classified, as 85,505 pounds (75.5 percent) was certified to have characteristics of quota tobacco - Burley.

Zed Layson, District Supervisor, Tobacco Division, Agricultural Marketing Service, which supplies inspectors and graders for the USDA, had the following comments: "The large percentage of leaf offerings failing to meet USDA standards today can be attributed to the February 12 offerings which failed to meet USDA standards and was brought back for re-certification. However, only a few baskets of the 83,467 pounds classified as Burley February 12 was re-classified as Maryland." Layson further remarked: "After instructions from Washington, a new group of inspectors were used for today's inspection. Their results were very consistent with the team that inspected the February 12 offerings."

Maryland - type tobacco grown in Kentucky has begun to be looked upon as a possibility of supplementary income for Kentucky farmers. This is being influenced by promoter, Bobby Oldham, a tobacco dealer from Live Oak, Florida, who has been contracting farmers to grow type 32 tobacco. The dilemma is in the fact that Maryland and burley tobaccos so very closely resemble each other. When grown in Kentucky, the similarity is complete. In making Maryland tobacco have Burley-like characteristics. The difficulty comes in determining the True identity. Especially if real Burley (over marketing) were to be commingled, therein.

Unless Kentucky farmers will address themselves to the full responsibilities of learning the cultural practices of growing Maryland tobacco and fully comply; and unless type 32 can become a regulatory crop; and unless all agricultural concerns approach the Kentucky-grown Maryland tobacco with the same motive (and not as an escape route for "carry-over" Burley); then, those involved may find the "gold" of Maryland leaf tarnishing.

4 Georgetown Families Begin Retreat In County

Cleftrock Corp. is the name of a business formed by four Georgetown College families and friends, whose goal is to set up a retreat center.

Located within the Daniel Boone National Forest, Cleftrock is composed of 450 acres at Luner in Rockcastle County, Ky.

Members of the corporation are Bob Fields, dean of religious life; Dr. Wayne Moore, dean of men; Mr. and Mrs. Milton Murphy, now in Israel, who are friends of Fields; and Mr. and Mrs. E.B. Smith, Mason, Ohio. Smith is a 1956 graduate of Georgetown.

Mr. Fields, a former resident of this county, is the son of Mrs. Mabel Kelly of East Bernstadt and the grandson of Mr. and Mrs. Willie Cummins, residents of this county for many years.

A great deal of the land purchased for the retreat was bought from Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Bustle of Rockcastle County.

Dr. Moore managed the Fields' retreat-cabin while they were missionaries in Israel just prior to their return to Georgetown.

"The idea came from our cabin retreats. Many times we've held student retreats there," Bob Fields said.

College groups can use the retreat for $4 per person per day. They have the advantage of being "self-sufficient" or having a staff available. They supply their own food and sleeping bags.

Nearly 80 4-Hers participated in the Rockcastle County 4-H Rally Day. The event was held Saturday, March 24 at the Harry Sparks Vocational School in Mt. Vernon. Speeches dealing with current problems and demonstrations of project work were presented by the county's 4-Hers.

Those participating in the speeches were 8-year-olds: Dawn Brumley, Robin Bowman, both of Loyal Clovers and Dee Ann Sargent of Brodhead; 10-year-olds: Nancy Cates, Brodhead; Vonda Croucher, Loyal Clovers; Patty Towery, Roundstone; Billy Cameron, Brodhead; Bruce Treon, Roundstone and Jeffery Burdette, Mt. In the Senior division, Marita Stewart of the Teen Club and Marcia Lamb of the Loyal Clovers participated. Champions of the speech contests will represent Rockcastle County in the Wilderness Trail Area Contest on March 31 at Harboursville.

4-Hers taking part in the demonstrations were: Steve Zupanic, Parts of a Horse, Brodhead; Pam Mink, How Plants Grow, Brodhead; Marcia Lamb, Bound Buttonholes, Loyal Clo-

"Our goal is to build a retreat center where families and individuals can come for rest, recreation and renewal. There are no secret or magic formulas for making life together perfect but there are helps for finding better ways," Fields says. Some of the ways of achieving this, he said, are through small group sharing sessions, prayer, fellowship, trained counselors, quiet time for individuals and for families, good books and a caring knowledgeable community of concern.

NO CALAMITY DAYS

"According to Superintendent Charles B. Parsons, the State Department of Education has ruled that the "Calamity Days" will not be granted this year, as in past years.

Mr. Parsons received a letter from Don Bell of the State Department which stated: "Effective August 11, 1972, the State Board of Education passed a regulation (68.250) which is quoted as follows: 'Each accredited school regardless of classification shall provide a minimum of 175 days of classroom instruction.' Because of the provisions of the regulation, we cannot approve calamity days for your school district."

Since these five-days will not be granted, school will let-out Friday, June 1.

AIR CONDITIONING FOR HOSPITAL- Luster Bullock, left, and Ed Burke, workmen for the county's EEA program are shown installing some of the air conditioning ductwork in the Rockcastle County Hospital. To date, the hospital has paid for and is installing four units, which cost approximately $5,000 besides the ductwork. It takes five units to completely air-condition the hospital but funds are not available to purchase the fifth unit plus some other needed supplies, which would run the total needed for completing the project up to approximately $5,500. The ceiling being installed over the ductwork is 3/4" fire rated ceiling made of non-combustible material. The men are installing the system under the supervision of Brock-McVey Co. and the four units are expected to be ready for the hot weather.

RCHS Baseball Season Begins April 6 At Home

Thirty-two baseball players greeted Coach Jack Laswell Monday afternoon at the Mt. Vernon Elementary field and, from the candidated reporting, it looks as though the Rockets will have a good representative team this spring.

According to Coach Laswell, "The Rockets will have experience at third base with Dennis Payne; at short-stop in the form of Casey Caird; at second with Clayton Cash and at first with Paul Travis and Larry LaFavers. Catchers will be Ryan Riddle, Troy McClure and Mark Bray and the outfielders will line-up with David Collins, Darrell Proctor, John Clontz, Ronnie Brown and Dwight Griffin. Several Freshmen and Sophomores will complete the squad."

"The Rockets should have a very capable pitching staff headed by Johnny Saylor, Dennis Payne, Troy McClure and Mike Hopkins. The boys to come in on relief are Dwight Griffin, Casey Carroll, Ryan Riddle and Wayne Bengert," Coach Laswell further said.

The Rockets will play a 21 game schedule and will open their season April 6 against Whitley County at home.

Improvement Council Meets

The regular meeting of the Rockcastle County Improvement Council was held in the PCA meeting room on March 28 at 7 p.m. with Roy Brown, president, presiding.

Those present were Mr. Brown, Wayne Stewart, Gatliff Craig, Robert Thacker, Sam Ford, Stewart Parsons, Bob McKenzie, Kenneth York, William K. Bullen and Clay Colson.

During the meeting, Mr. Brown read the results of the employment survey conducted in Mt. Vernon recently by the Monticello Manufacturing Company. During the two days, 209 women signed applications and 60 men. Of these 209 women, 140 were under 41 (which seems to be the desirable cut-off age for the company) and of these 140, 36 were working now. Mr. Brown said that executives of Monticello Manufacturing were not altogether pleased with the turn-out for the survey but did take into consideration the bad weather which arrived on the last day of the survey. It was agreed during the meeting that additional applications would be distributed and made available at various locations throughout the county.

Also during the meeting two committees were named by Mr. Brown to undertake action soon. One, the site committee, will be headed by Sam Ford with members, Kenneth York, Clay Colson, Gatliff Craig and Roy Brown. The other committee, a Finance Committee, was made up of Gatliff Craig, chairman, Jerry Cox, Cledith Thacker and Roy Brown.

Gatliff Craig named several possible sites in the county which included the Proffitt property and Clanton Saylor site around Brodhead; the area around Roundstone and Conway; the Clyde Payne property; Sparks Quayle and the driveway at Renfro Valley.

Friday night, the consolation game will begin at 7 and the championship game at 8 p.m.

Admission will be 50¢ for students and $1.00 for adults.

All proceeds will go toward the Lion's sight conservation project.

JOHN NICHOLS'

Frankfort Watchline

The General Assembly is dormant now except for meetings of the 14 interim committees, but come November the voters will have to decide again about whether to approve annual sessions.

The last attempt several years ago was rejected, though not overwhelmingly, so the lawmakers and their friends were tempted to try again.

Currently, the legislature meets once every two years for 90 days consecutively. Some detractors joke about the need to meet once every 60 years instead, claiming Kentuckians would be better off.

We're not taking sides at the moment, nor predicting the outcome, though it's safe to say the odds are against annual sessions in view of the unsuccessful history of all such efforts.

The first thing that faces annual advocates, especially the 138 members of the House and Senate, is whether to campaign openly for the referendum question.

Some feel the public would view that advocacy as a conflict of interest matter—sort of like a banker lobbying for a banking bill during the session.

But other, and their number is growing slightly, feel it's about time for the legislators to stand up and tell the people yearly sessions are a necessity, even if it will cost the taxpayer more money in the process.

We have been a party to at least one informal chat with a key legislative source who solicited ideas from newsmen covering the Capitol.

Well, that's not our place, and we do get the feeling that the legislators—some of them, anyway—think it might be a public service for the press to announce or promote their annual sessions proposal.

A few view it almost as a duty of the news media, as though there is only one side to the question—"you know us, fellows, and you know our problems, so pitch in and help"—that kind of approach.

We don't buy the proposition that annual sessions would necessarily be beneficial to Kentucky, even in these changing times, or that it would make the Legislature more responsive to the people or that it would lift the prestige and character of the members.

It sure would cost more, despite the argument we've heard from advocates that really it would be more economical, the state could keep up with the times, and so on.

After all, the Legislature would be able to convene for a total of 90 days in the two-year period. That's 30 days more than now and we'll waver every day will be used if annual sessions are approved by the voters.

You hear, too, that the state must keep tab with constantly changing affairs in Washington and pass relevant legislation to save money, help the people or whatever.

Well, this is a strong point. Yet, look at what's happening now in the federal revenue sharing situation.

All 49 other states have legislative sessions this year, and they are grappling in confusion with the myriad details of the federal law.

Kentucky? Why, we're just saving up that federal money and will have about $150 million to spend come the next session in January. And, by then, we ought to know much more than now about the restrictions and pertinent regulations.

There's far more to annual sessions, pro and con, than the bases we have touched lightly. Our point is that the public should be told of both sides pretty thoroughly.

As a matter of fact, we hear the Legislative Research Commission plans to do just that when the time is at hand.

THAT'S PERFECTLY CLEAR—A release from the State Education Department says educators and citizens are holding a conference "to arrive at a 'clear cut' definition of Career Education."

The obvious rejoinder is that they should know by now. Anyway, we'll check with Education later to find out if the conference came up with a perfectly clear definition.

A STARS LIGHT IS DIMMED—When Jim Gray was named Commissioner of the newly-fashioned State Bureau of Highways, he had to make some sacrifices.

Amid whispers of Gray's prior function as Kentucky's Democratic Party patronage chief and murmurs about conflicts with the Federal Hatch Act, Gov. Wendell Ford let it be known to those who inquired that his old pals debut as a movie star was going to wind up on the cutting room floor.

You see, Gray, Ford, Party Chief J.R. Miller and others had roles in a party fund-raising film, copies of which were sent to the various county Democratic organizations as part of the current push for partisan dollars.

But also, as a price for public service, Gray's part in the film was cut out. Does Hollywood know what it's lost?

VOTE FOR IVORY ANGLIN for JAILER

I would like to take this means to announce that I am now a Candidate for the office of Jailer of Rockcastle County.

I have always gotten a good vote in Rockcastle County every time I have run and I hold high regard for all who supported me in the past.

Now, for the last time, I ask you again for your vote for this important office of Jailer. The best way I know to be a good Jailer is to be there twenty-four hours every day, to care and watch over prisoners that are locked up in cells, to feed them good, have respect for those who come to visit them and keep a clean jail and a sober jail.

Rockcastle County has always had good Jailers and let's keep our Jailer's office with good responsible people.

I am a life-long citizen of Rockcastle County, a member of Clear Creek Baptist Church at Disputants, a Master Mason, a 32 Degree Scottish Rite Mason, a Shrine and a life-long Republican.

I will sincerely appreciate your Vote and any influence that you may have on others to help me.

THANK YOU

$2000 PER ACRE BARRIER BROKEN BY PICKLE GROWERS
Prices Increased On Pickles For 1973

More pickle growers in Kentucky earned over $2000 per acre and $1000 per acre in 1972 than in any year before, with the Champion Grower on one acre earning $2031.64 while the Champion Grower on 1/2 acre earned $1110.47. This record was made even though the 1972 growing season, with its cold weather followed by more than usual rainfall, was not very good for a successful vegetable growing season in general.

Pickle growing should be even more profitable in 1973 due to a price increase in several grades to be paid to the farmer. Another increase in pickle earnings will come from a higher percentage of hybrids to be included in the pickle seed blend for 1973. It's hard to tell just how much more money this will make for the pickle grower, but there will be approximately 25% more hybrids in the seed blend.

The University of Kentucky Extension Service lists the following advantages to raising pickles:

- .. Guaranteed Market
- .. High Dollar Earnings
- .. Guaranteed Prices
- .. Quick Cash Crop (12 to 13 weeks from planting to end of harvest).
Planting is normally completed between the 1st and 10th of May. Picking starts around July 1st, and normally ends after the first week in August.
- .. Good Family Project
- .. Most labor takes place at a date which doesn't interfere with other crops such as corn and tobacco.
- .. Grower is paid at time of delivery to the receiving station.
- .. No special machinery or equipment is required.
- .. Out of pocket expense is small.
- .. Income is received when other crops are not ready for sale.
- .. Cucumbers are easy to grow.
- .. You don't have to be a big farmer to get a contract.
- .. Acreage is not government controlled.

All people in Rockcastle County who have idle land, or know someone who has land, are invited to find out more about the pickle program by contacting:

Rockcastle Recollections...

By JOHN LAIR 1973

The two earliest trails coming into central Kentucky from the south both crossed the area now embraced in Rockcastle County. They followed practically the same route from Cumberland Gap to Hazel Patch or the vicinity thereof, they divided. In the beginning, there had been but one, crossing Rockcastle River at what was once known as Horse Ford, not far from the mouth of Skages Creek, following up Skages to the head of Negro Creek and down it to the headwaters of Dicks River, near present-day Brodhead.

Both the creek and the trace following it were named for Henry Skages, one of the Long Hunters, who discovered them in attempting to get a better shot at him, he followed him along a narrow path to a ford of Rockcastle River and got his first glimpse of Glade Branch and the creek which he gave his own name. The beginning of the trail along the creek bank was soon developed into a regularly traveled route and was the first pathway through Kentucky to be given a definite name, with the exception of an ancient Indian trace known as the Warrior's Path, which led through Cumberland Gap and cut across the eastern end of the state from Cumberland Ford at Pineville, Kentucky.

Skages' Trace was soon established as the principal pathway to the rich bluegrass region and most of the pioneer traffic across the state followed its winding way through tangled cane and across the many crossings of Skages' Creek. Governor Hamilton, captured by George Rogers Clark on his spectacular raid on Vincennes in 1779, was escorted to the mouth of Skages' Creek, crossed Rockcastle County via Skages' Trace. Governor Hamilton, from the British stronghold at Detroit, had long been infamous as "The Hair Buyer," reported to have paid the Indians under his control a bounty for every scalp brought back from their forays into Kentucky. He had to be protected by his guards from the retributive wrath of the inmates of the forts and settlements through which he passed. At Logan's Fort, now Stanford, he had been probably one of his countrymen called from a Mrs. William Manifee tried to smash him up.

Hamilton wrote later that he was much impressed with the "wild beauty" of the Rockcastle River region. He added "the difficulty of marching through such a country is not readily imagined by a European." He mentioned the thickness of the canebreaks as a considerable deterrent and also made note of the difficulty of following along Skages' Creek and says he counted forty crossings of that stream as he traveled down it.

Another important personage who made several trips over Skages' Trace in the early days was Bishop Asbury, a noted traveling divine of that period. In speaking of Rockcastle Station he says, "Where we found such a set of sinners as made it next to Hell itself. Our corn here cost us one dollar per bushel." In going to Crab Orchard in 1792, he apparently followed a different route for he says, "On our return we came the old way, by Skages' Creek and Rockcastle River," supposing it to be safer, as it was a road much less frequented" which would seem to indicate that the new road through present Mt. Vernon had already been completed at that date, as will be touched upon later.

Reverend Peter Cartwright, who was himself later to become a famous evangelist and Circuit Rider, came over Skages' Trace as a small boy moving with his family to find a new home in Kentucky in the year 1788. In his autobiography published many years later, he says they were of a group of two hundred families traveling under the protection of a hundred young and active riflemen to insure them against attack by roving bands of Indians. He relates that they met on the trail a young man named Baker, who was bleeding profusely from a mouth wound, having been shot by a Indian and several of his teeth knocked out and his jawbone broken. He said he had been one of a party of seven young men returning from Kentucky to Virginia when they were fired upon by seven Indians. The battle had continued until only himself and one Indian were left. When he received his wound, Baker had hidden in a hollow log. The remaining warrior was searching for him when he heard the bell worn by a cow belonging to the approaching party of white families and had run away. Baker had then come out of the hollow log and had advanced to meet them. Arriving at the scene of the battle, the dead warriors and white hunters were buried in two separate graves and the party proceeded on its way. When within about seven miles of a settlement near Crab Orchard night was falling and a vote was taken on whether to go on through the darkness or to camp where they were for the night. The majority favored going on to the protection of the settlement but a few families decided to go into camp where they were. During the night, the Indians attacked and killed the whole party, except for one white woman and four children and an old colored woman who escaped in the darkness and the husband and father, Robert McClure, who deserted his family and ran away without making an attempt to protect them. He redeemed himself by taking active part in future forays against the redskins. This was what is known as McClure's Defeat and might possibly have been—although I am not certain—the massacre in which a Negro man was killed, thus giving Negro Creek its name. Since this Negro's name is Dick, I have heard it said that Dick's River, which heads up nearby, was named for him rather than for an Indian hunter known as Captain Dick to Colonel Knox and Henry Skages, members of The Long Hunters. It is generally stated in current historical works that General Benjamin Logan's party traveled in company with the party headed by Richard Henderson until they reached Hazel Patch, at which point Logan turned off the main trail and took a new path to present Stanford. Actually, just the opposite is true. Logan continued along the established route up Skages' Creek and the Henderson party branched off towards Boonesborough on a new path which Daniel Boone and his axemen were cutting just ahead of them. Boone himself, when sent into Kentucky in 1774 to find and warn a party of surveyors of impending Indian troubles, followed Skages' Trace across Rockcastle County.

As previously referred to in this article, a change in the old Skages' Trace greatly affected what is now the Mt. Vernon area. In the year 1792, a fund was raised by public subscription for improving the road from Crab Orchard to Powell's Valley. The biggest change made was in re-routing the road through the present site of Mt. Vernon instead of along Skages Creek. Bishop Asbury's account indicates that this change had been made and was well established early in 1792, and the journal of the French traveller, Andre Michaux, makes it quite certain that the route was well established by 1793 when he writes in his journal of having spent the night of November 11 at Langford's Station, ten miles south of Crab Orchard as he traveled the road leading to the southern settlements.

Langford's Station referred to was most likely the old log house which until recent years stood on an embankment just back of the court house in Mt. Vernon and was for many years known as the Bob McFerron House. It was occupied in the beginning by Stephen Langford, supposed to have been his builder, although now in some doubt. Robert Langford, Stephen Langford's father, occupied another very old house, known later as the Old DeVault House and only in recent years destroyed by fire. This old place also had a history of having been used as a tavern, or station, at one time and could possibly, though not likely, have been the tavern referred to by Michaux. Incidentally, I am hearing conflicting stories about the location of Langford's Station. I have always thought of it as the old house in Mt. Vernon, others have given the name to the old DeVault house and still another group says that the very old log house falling into decay down on Rockcastle River between Ft. Sequoyia and the mouth of Skages' Creek, and maybe the oldest house in Rockcastle County, was years ago always referred to as Langford's Station and was occupied by a relative of Stephen Langford. In fact, extensive research on the early Langford family has developed the fact that there were two Stephen Langfords, who represented two different branches of the Langford family, one of which was always referred to as "The Fighting Langfords."

There will be much more to be said about the old Langford Tavern and its builder and original owner when we get into the beginnings of Rockcastle County and the town of Mt. Vernon, some of which may be rather surprising.

SS Questions & Answers

Q. Before I retired last year and started getting monthly social security payments, I had taken up basket weaving as a hobby. Now my hobby has turned into a small business. I generally make the baskets during the winter months and sell them during the summer. If my earnings go over $2,100 during the summer months, can I still get my full social security payments during the winter months?

A. No. Since you are self-employed, the total time you spend in your work each month—during the winter months as well as during the summer months—must be considered. For a more detailed explanation in your specific case, you should call any social security office.

To My Friends In Rockcastle Co.

As previously announced, I am a candidate for Judge of our county. I am proud to be a citizen of Rockcastle and I know that you feel the same. Even though we are proud of what we have and are, we must also keep looking to the future for opportunities to better our county for both ourselves and our children that will take our place. I know that you are pleased, as I am, with our new effort to locate the Monticello Sewing Factory here in our county. We should all get behind the effort as it can mean as many as 200 of our people. Based on $100 per week for each worker, this would add a payroll of over one million dollars in a year for us. As you can see, by the time that this million dollars is put in our banks, added in our stores, service stations and on our farms, that it will be multiplied several times over. I'm for it - How about you?

"Sure insulated against care, woes and cold in our electrically heated mobile home!"

Life's much simpler in our mobile home. And electric heat helps plenty. With good insulation, we're comfortable as those bugs in the rug. And the insulation keeps electricity costs down—just as the system itself keeps maintenance costs way down. We haven't spent a nickel since we installed it.

Take a tip from the Turnbows. If you're in the market for a mobile home, insist on electric heat for the utmost in comfort and convenience. Insist on a quality home insulated to electric heat standards to keep that comfort inside and help keep heating costs to a minimum.

Editor's Note: The article below is being reprinted from the March-April issue of the Berea Almanac.

"Thank You Mr. Mac"

He was born on October 28, 1882 at Pine Hill in Rockcastle County, Kentucky, the son of Alfred and Susan McFerron. Simple arithmetic tells you that John D. McFerron is in his ninety-first year. His quick wit and sprightly step belie his years, however, and you can easily mistake him for one twenty years younger.

As a boy John McFerron worked on his father's farm in the spring and summer and in the coal mines during the winter months. He was the sixth of twelve children. His three older sisters all became teachers, and when he was nineteen, though his formal schooling was only the equivalent of about sixth grade, he went to Mt. Vernon with them for a teachers' meeting and while there took the teachers' examination. He passed, was certified to teach second grade, and taught for three years in Rockcastle County.

At that time work on the railroad was attractive to industrious young men. Young McFerron took a job as fireman on the L & N route from Cobbin, Ky. to Lebanon Junction, Ky. A train wreck, in which he narrowly escaped death, soured his outlook on that exciting profession and he quit after eight months.

Shortly thereafter Professor Dinsmore of the Berea faculty was holding a teachers' conference at Mt. Vernon. Mr. McFerron attended the meeting and was encouraged by Mr. Dinsmore to come to Berea. He was told he could do a little teaching and work toward a certificate in the Normal School. He was quite good at mathematics and was asked to teach two periods each day for fifty cents an hour. Since his room was provided and board cost only $1.25 per week he was able to get along very well.

He enjoyed his work and studies and received his Normal certificate in 1908. He decided to continue his education and received a diploma in Pedagogy in 1912. During this period he was president of the Phi Delta Literary Society.

The following fall Mr. McFerron went to Florida as principal of the high school at Wildwood and continued to teach in Florida off and on until he retired in 1942. From 1920 to 1925 he was superintendent of schools in Ft. Myers.

During an interim when he was out of teaching in the late twenties, Mr. McFerron made some wise investments in real estate and was highly successful in that field. He sold his holdings in 1962 and returned to Kentucky. He now resides with his wife in a modest home in Mt. Vernon, only a few miles from his birthplace.

Mr. Mac, as he is affectionately called, says Berea College gave him his start in life. Just recently he gave the College an income trust of $70,000. Upon his death the remainder of the trust will become an endowment fund to support the education of numerous Rockcastle County young people. In this way Mr. McFerron is tangibly showing his gratitude to the College.

The Week at Livingston
