Bro. Sams To Accompany Revival Team To Hawaii

Ronald W. Sams, minister of the First Christian Church of Mt. Vernon, will accompany the nationally famous Revival Fire Team to Hawaii during the week preceding Easter (April 16-23) for a giant crusade effort for Christ in those islands. Cecil Todd, fourth director of Revival Fires Ministry of Joplin, Missouri, personally invited Brother Sams to accompany his team as an Associate Evangelist for the trip. Brother Sams has worked in Giant Tent Crusades with the Todd Team in the past as well as in numerous one-night rallies all over the mid-west and in several revivals with one of the team members.

Some thirty-nine ministers throughout the United States are accompanying the Revival Fires Team and such personalities as Vonda Kay Van Dyke, Art Linkletter, The Gospel Lads Quartet and many others on the trip. Each of these ministers has raised his own "mission" support from churches and friends who know him and have worked with him in past ministries and Crusades. Brother Sams' support for the trip has she is through egg-laying, she drops from the bag and dies on the ground in a short while. The eggs remain in the bag until they hatch the following May when the cycle begins all over again.

If your bagworm problem consists of only a few fully developed bagworms that are within reach on shrubs or trees, handpicking may be sufficient to check future problems.

When many small bagworms are attacking evergreens, insecticides are needed to prevent serious damage to the trees. The best time to use insecticides is when the bags are 1/4 to 1/2 inch long, or as soon as there is noticeable damage to the trees. This usually is late May or early June.

Bagworm insecticides recommended are: Bacillus Thuringiensis, Carbar, Dieldrin and Malathion. Follow directions on container.

Feeder Calf Sales Cancelled - The Richmond Feeder Calf Association Sales scheduled for April 9 and in October 1973 have been cancelled.

Several other graded feeder calf sales will be held in this area during the spring and fall. Contact your County Extension Office for dates and places.

Controlling Bagworms - Bagworms are perhaps the principal pest of evergreen trees in most of Kentucky. If there are enough bagworms, they will strip evergreen shrubs of their foliage and cause them to die. Maple, rose, box elder, willow, and many other flowering shrubs are also attacked by bagworms, though rarely are any of these damaged as badly as evergreens.

Bagworms are the larval or caterpillar stage of a moth that is rarely seen outside the bag. In fact, only the males develop into typical moths that are capable of flight. The adult female is grub-like and remains inside the bag except when she drops from the bag a few moments before she dies.

Bagworms pass the winter in the egg stage inside the bag that contained the female. In late May or early June the eggs hatch and the naked larvae crawl from the bag in search of food. By using silk and bits of leaves, bark, or twigs they soon build a small bag around their hindpart. As the larvae grow, they add onto the bag making it large enough to allow the larvae to withdraw into the bag when disturbed. By early September the bags reach their maximum size of 1-1/2 to 2 inches. At this time the larvae permanently suspend their bags from twigs with hands of silk. The larvae then transform into pupae, their resting stage.

In late September the pupae transform into adults. In the case of males, a hairy, black, clear-winged moth with about a 1-inch wingspan emerges from the bottom of the bag. The female merely splits her pupal skin, but remains right where she is. The fertilized female begins laying her 500-1,000 eggs, which forces her toward the bottom of the bag. When

Eating Horsemeat No Craze---Yet

By Bonnie Brockman
State News Bureau

Kentucky thoroughbreds can relax, at least for the time being. There doesn't seem to be much demand in this Commonwealth, for tenderloin horsemeat steak, a horse burger with fries, or even a tasty dish of horse stroganoff.

Although grocery shoppers in Oregon have been making news by buying horsemeat, Kentuckians seem to prefer seeing their horses on a racetrack rather than a kitchen table.

No Kentucky horses are being slaughtered for human consumption, said C.W. Grosse, area supervisor of Meat and Poultry Inspection for the United States Department of Agriculture (USDA). However, he said the government would okay inspected and properly labeled horsemeat in Kentucky, provided the meat was processed and approved in a USDA-inspected plant.

In at least one state, Oregon, consumption of horsemeat is on the upswing because of rising beef prices. Ed Carroll recently sold his 3,600 lb. supply of horsemeat in six hours at his Portland market.

protein rich, is much more economical than beef. Last Monday Carroll's most expensive item, tenderloin horsemeat steak, was priced at 95 cents a pound, compared to about $2.98 a pound for tenderloin beefsteak.

Kentuckians with an eye for horsemeat should use caution. "If horsemeat is being sold, make sure it is USDA-inspected meat," said Art Brockman, assistant director of Food Programs, under the Division of Environmental Services in the Kentucky Department of Health. "Don't stop off at the side of the road and buy some meat from someone who's just slaughtered his old mare."

Louisville stock yard dealer said he had no personal objections to eating horsemeat. In fact, "they're prettier than a hog, and probably a lot cleaner," he said. "Besides, we eat the inside, not the outside."

The dealer, who wished to remain anonymous, said his stock yard used to handle 30 to 40 horses a month. The horses were used for glue and dog food.

Now, although he said there are more pleasure horses in Jefferson County than ever, a horse is seldom brought to his stock yard. "Frankly, I don't know what they're doing with them," he said.

There is evidence that many horses are reincarnated as the contents of a dog food can. Mrs. Richard Moore, secretary of a thoroughbred horse farm, said many horses are given to a dog food company in Georgetown.

As for eating horses, "I don't think we're going to have to go that far," she said. "There are plenty of cattle around, even if they are expensive. Why slaughter a good-looking horse? I don't know, but those people in Oregon must be eating old nag."

Although it's fine with her if her neighbors want to eat horsemeat, Mrs. Moore doesn't want to touch the stuff herself.

"I'd never be able to eat horsemeat," she said, "because I sit here and look out the window at horses all day. I know, but those people in Oregon are even smarter than humans."

Horsemeat, darker than beef, is cooked similarly, but whether millions of Americans will ever crave a good horse steak is unknown. Art Brockman has mixed reactions about the possibility of eating horsemeat.

"I don't know—I've never eaten it," he said. "I'd have to try it once. Whether or not I liked it might be psychological. I might really like horsemeat if I didn't know I was eating it."

as they are properly called, at his 24-acre farm off U.S. 60 near Millieville. The businessman, Hargeden says he keeps the buffalo because of the "pleasure of knowing I'm helping to preserve the species." He says several thousand people a year visit his farm, including many school children. He considers keeping his herd to be a "public service."

Jack Owen, of Cynthiana, keeps six buffalo on his farm. He says, "We thought we'd have them as sort of a hobby and for conservation. They certainly are not a money-making thing."

Hayward Spinks of Hartford, however, was planning to make some money on his herd of 12, until they got out of his fences and had to be destroyed. According to Spinks, some money can be made from buffalo. They are popular in parks and zoos, and the demand for buffalo meat is growing.

In the past many have tried to raise buffalo commercially, even attempting to breed with cattle to produce a hybrid called the "cattalo." It was theorized that such a cross breeding would produce an animal harder than the cow and more docile than the buffalo. One such experiment was conducted in 1815 by Robert Wycliff near Lexington. Wycliff worked on this project for 30 years without success. It was difficult to get the buffalo and cattle to breed, and when they did, their offspring were often unhealthy and unable to reproduce.

Keeping buffalo is not a simple matter, all the owners stress that these animals are still wild and "have to be treated with a certain amount of caution. Owen speaks with the majority of them when he says, "Never trust a buffalo." A herd of 47 is thriving in the Land Between the Lakes, and the State Department of Fish and Wildlife Game Farm near Frankfort has several buffalo.

The director of the Game Farm, Raymond Wiley, says, "If they really got mad there's no telling what they could do. Buffalo are large animals. Bulls may weigh as much as a ton and cows may tip the scales at 800 pounds, but Wiley emphasizes that buffalo are fairly docile animals and are not particularly dangerous unless provoked. "You just can't harm them in," he explains. Raising buffalo is complicated because they cannot be domesticated. "It takes something extra," Wiley says. "You have to remember that they must be handled, and cows get savage when you try to remove their calves from them."

At present, officials are unsure of the number of buffalo in the state. The Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife, in cooperation with the U.S. Department of Agriculture, is trying to determine the number of herds in Kentucky and their owners. Whoever they determine the number to be, there is no question of the buffalo ever again reaching the numbers found by the first settlers.

Daniel Boone is quoted as saying that in the Red River area of the state in 1770: "The buffalo were more frequent than I have ever seen cattle in the settlements, browsing on the leaves of the cane, or cropping the herbage of those extensive plains, fearless because ignorant of man. Sometimes we saw hundreds in a drove."

In less than a lifetime all the buffalo in Kentucky had been killed, a prophecy of the fate of others of their kind to the west.

Meadowlark Lemon, speaking for all the Harlem Globetrotters:

Buffalo Returns

By David Kennamer
State News Bureau

FRANKFORT, Ky.—After 175 years, the buffalo is returning to Kentucky.

Massive herds once roamed the central area of the state, but it took settlers and civilization only 30 years to kill all Kentucky's native buffalo. After a virtual disappearance prior to 1800, the buffalo is in the midst of an unlikely reincarnation—he is returning as a popular hobby.

Charles D. Hargeden is considered by other buffalo owners to be the "buffalo expert" in Kentucky. He keeps a herd of 17 American Bison.

The Children
in Memory of Kristina Bullock who passed away January 30, 1973.

An angel was called to her home above.

Oh! How much she was loved. But God must have loved her the best.

For he called our Kristy to rest. Our hearts were broken and our eyes filled with tears.

For no more could we hold her so dear. Her parting this life was so brief

And how we were hurt and filled with grief.

For our little Kristy had gone to sleep.

Forever to rest in peace.

Sadly missed by her Aunt, Laverne Hilder

12 AT CUMBERLAND

Twelve students from Rockcastle County, Kentucky, have enrolled for classes during Spring semester at Cumberland College in Williamsburg.

County Judge Charles Carter, along with Jerry Carter and Mrs. Jean Allen, of the Cumberland River Mental Health Center, are shown discussing plans for combating alcoholism in Rockcastle County.

School Board Meets

The Rockcastle County Board of Education, Monday night, voted to change its policy concerning maternity leaves for teachers. In the past, the policy had stated that no teacher would be allowed to begin teaching if she were aware that she was pregnant. However, Superintendent Charles B. Parsons stated the board was forced to pay the teacher a year's wages because it was found the policy discriminatory.

Although almost all of the board members didn't feel the ruling was a fair one to students, they nevertheless felt that with this precedence established, they really had no alternative except to change the policy.

In other action, the board awarded the school building and boiler insurance bids to Farm Bureau Insurance for fees of $6,418.61 and $600 per year, respectively. approved an amendment to the school calendar which will put the end of the school year at June 1 instead of May 24 as originally scheduled because the Calamity Days were not approved by the State Dept. of Education; employed Thomas Porter Weller of Lexington as teacher at RCHS to replace Mr. Coffey, who resigned to accept a position with Social Security; employed Mrs. Mabel Cash as Nurses Aide at RCHS and employed Charlene Arnold as vocational aide at RCHS, a job funded through federal funds.

The sales for the month of Kentucky were $6,874,581 and cumulative sales for the first two months totaled $13,549,726 of the annual goal of $71,200,000. Sales a year ago were $12,157,544.

ONE NIGHT RALLY AT FIRST CHRISTIAN

Sports broadcaster and minister for twenty six years with one congregation, Dr. Russ Martin comes as National Director of evangelism for Revival Fires ministry, to lead a one night rally of inspiration with the First Christian Church of Mt. Vernon, beginning at 7:00 P.M. Sunday night, April 8.

Sharing with him will be the Southland Gospel Couriers, famed singing foursome from Lexington, Kentucky. The Joe Wrights, Jim Cottrell, and Dave Waitt combine for pleasing gospel songs geared to bless listeners everywhere.

Martin, after twenty six years with First Christian Church, Miami, Oklahoma (now one of the nation's most famous churches, with a million dollar plant), dedicates his time and efforts to "bring the joy and blessing of Christ" to people everywhere. He came to Miami at the age of 28, five years as a nationally known evangelist. In the 28 years he was in Miami he saw over 6,000 people added to that church and another 9,500 baptized into Christ in evangelistic meetings all over the country. He has done play by play for college and high school football, basketball, baseball, and golden gloves boxing for the past 24 years - often serving as play by play man on the network coverage of National Championship games, as well. He has his own TV sports show, "Russ Martin's Sports," seen ahead of the CBS movie on Sunday nights in the midwest. He has interviewed such sports figures as Casey Stengel, Willie Mays, Leo Durocher, Mickey Mantle and Steve Owen!

The format of the Rally includes great music by the Couriers and a stirring, inspiring message by Martin. An emphasis on the total work of Revival Fires, seen each Lord's Day by millions on more than 156 television stations, and with a 22 facteted ministry that includes worldwide overseas Crusades, will be made at the close of the special rally night.

Ronald W. Sams, minister of the church, is inviting people far and wide to attend. More than a half million (500,000) persons receive the Revival Fires magazine every month - many of them in this area. Revival Fires is seen each Sunday in this part of the country on Station WLEX, Channel 18, Lexington, on Sunday morning at 8:30. The minister points out that the Rally is altogether undenominational in character, with people from any and all churches, or those with no church affiliation, especially welcomed.

Producers who chose wheat and feed grain program plans that included wheat acreage are being reminded that the five-month period during which grazing of set-aside is prohibited begins April 1, 1973. This limitation on the use of set-aside acreage applies to producers who want to earn the full program payment, said Homer Hale, chairman of the Rockcastle County Agricultural

Fiscal Court Hires Engineer For Library

In Tuesday's meeting of the Rockcastle County Fiscal Court, County Attorney William D. Gregory read the court an Attorney General's opinion concerning the building of the Rockcastle County Library without a registered engineer or architect. The opinion cited several statutes regarding the issue and also several test cases in Kentucky and ended with the opinion that for the building to be constructed in accordance with existing Kentucky Statutes, it would have to be built under the supervision of either a registered engineer or architect.

Since the opinion had earlier been discussed with Judge Carter and some of the magistrates, Judge Carter had contacted Jack Crawford, registered engineer, prior to the meeting to see if his firm of Crawford and Crawford, would do the engineering work on the building, Mr. Crawford, who happened to be in the court house, was called into the meeting and asked if he could give the court some idea of what his fee would be to undertake the job. Mr. Crawford told the court that without plans and specifications drawn up, he could only estimate his fee at between $500 and $1,000. He was hired by the court with Judge Carter promising to get with Mr. Crawford to give him the plans and specifications on the project.

The court received no bids on the lumber advertised for so they decided to buy the necessary lumber to construct the culvert and begin building it and to buy the lumber directly from the cheapest and best source.

In other action, the court turned down a motion by Magistrate Cleith Thacker to accept the point-to-point com-

County Officials Join Mental Health Center War On Alcoholism

Knowing that alcoholism has been one of the more serious problems in our part of the country for about as many years as it is old, local county officials as well as area doctors have joined forces with the Cumberland River Mental Health Center in urging all citizens to take a close look at this problem and do his or her part to try to help alleviate this problem of abusive drinking.

Last year in the area served by the London State Police, there was a total of 2,946 accidents, 36 fatal accidents, and 46 killed. In approximately half of these accidents, drinking was involved. Not only does the abusive drinker cause a problem on the highway, but each year this country loses approximately $23 billion in lost wages in labor because of the employee with a drinking problem. This $23 billion would build 115 thousand $20 thousand homes, and if four people were put in each home, we could house 460 thousand Americans.

Of the nine (9) million alcoholics in this country today only about five per cent are the "skid row" type. The remaining 95 per cent are those still holding down jobs and still have their families. Not only does the alcoholic suffer, but his family suffers as well.

We ask you to do your part in combating alcoholism. If you, a relative, or friend have a drinking problem, please call the Cumberland River Mental Health Center for help.

Magistrate C.W. "Wally" Phillips seconded Mr. Thacker's motion and Magistrate Hewitt Jones also voted yes, but made the statement that he felt the base station should be in the sheriff's office rather than the jailer's. Magistrates Danny Sargent and J.R. Cromer, both stated views the same as Mr. Jones and abstained on the vote, as did Judge Carter, causing a tie.

Communications system offered free-of-charge by the Regional Crime Commission.

During discussion on the matter, Judge Carter told the Magistrates that he and Sheriff Billy Kirby had talked with Larry Patrick, Executive Director of the Regional Crime Commission and that at that time, Sheriff Kirby had declined to allow the base station to be installed in his office. Judge Carter said that he didn't want "to go over the Sheriff's head" on the matter and that with a new sheriff and jailer coming in next year there was a possibility that neither one would want the system installed in their office.

After Sheriff Kirby had declined to allow the station to be installed in his office, Mr. Patrick had requested permission of the court, through a letter read to the court, by County Attorney William D. Gregory, to place the base station in the office of the county jailer. The charge for the system would be a $15.00 installation fee and $2.50 per month and it could be used to contact other law enforcement bureaus throughout the state concerning information on persons taken into custody here, at no cost to the county for the call. Now, when these calls are made to other bureaus, there is the usual long distance charge made for the calls.

Magistrate C.W. "Wally" Phillips seconded Mr. Thacker's motion and Magistrate Hewitt Jones also voted yes, but made the statement that he felt the base station should be in the sheriff's office rather than the jailer's. Magistrates Danny Sargent and J.R. Cromer, both stated views the same as Mr. Jones and abstained on the vote, as did Judge Carter, causing a tie.

Frankfort Watchline

These days it's getting tough to tell the difference between the worthwhile programs of State Government and efforts to knock the pins from under a potential candidate for governor.

Want a prime example? The other day, amid cries of anguish from several dozen Kentucky counties, Gov. Wendell Ford said he's trying to arrange phasing in those stiff new ambulance service regulations recently created.

Part of the issue here is whether or not the new Medical Licensure Board pulled a sneaky when 250 pages of Health Department regulations were given the nod by the Legislative Regulations Review Committee.

The ambulance rules were buried inside somewhere. But, back to the politics. The governor's action followed by two weeks similar efforts by the Legislative Research Commission and by just days talks between Lt. Gov. Julian Carroll and Health Commissioner William McElwain.

To The Citizens and Voters of Magisterial District No. 2

Having filed for the office of Magistrate of District No. 2, subject to the Republican Primary Election, I will appreciate your support and influence in this campaign in my behalf.

If nominated and elected, I will represent our district to the best of my ability and work toward the betterment of it and the County as a whole.

I hope to see all of you if possible between now and election day, but, if not, I will appreciate your support just the same.

Fiscal Irresponsibility?

The action of the Rockcastle County Fiscal Court in failing to pass a motion to allow a base point-to-point communications system to be installed in the County Courthouse smacks to us just a little of fiscal irresponsibility.

The action came about at Tuesday's meeting of the court when County Attorney William D. Gregory presented the court with a letter from Larry Patrick, Executive Director of the Cumberland Valley Regional Crime Council, requesting permission to install a telephone line in the county jail. This line would provide law enforcement officials in the county with the ability to call anywhere in the state to obtain information concerning persons taken into custody here, free of charge, except for a monthly fee of $2.50.

Of course, this information is being obtained now except that each time a call is made to another law enforcement bureau in the state, there is the usual long-distance charge made to the county, and thus the taxpayers, by the telephone company.

The savings would have to amount to several dollars a month; but, that point seemed to weigh very little with the court. County Judge Carter told the magistrates that Sheriff Billy Kirby did not want the system installed in his office and that he (Judge Carter) did not think it was right to "go over the Sheriff's head."

Magistrate Cleddith Thacker made a motion to approve the request to have the phone installed in the jail and Magistrate C.W. "Wally" Phillips seconded it. Magistrate Hewitt Jones also voted for the measure but said that he did think the system should be installed in the sheriff's office, an opinion also expressed by Magistrates Danny Sargent and J.R. Cromer, both of whom abstained in the voting. Judge Carter also abstained and thus the measure failed to carry.

We were amazed, to put it mildly, at the court's action since as we see it, the system can do no harm and could prove extremely useful. The cost is negligible (a $15.00 installation charge and $2.50 per month) and, besides being a deterrent to the rising crime rate, the possibility is strong that once the base station was installed, there could be radios acquired under the same system for all the police cars in the county.

However, a decision has been made and little can be done about it, but we think it was an ill-considered decision.

Carroll and the LRC are in the mood to arrange the repeal of the Licensure Board in the early days of the 74 Legislature if the Board does not cooperate and extend the effective date of the worrisome new ambulance regs from January next year until July. That's give the lawmakers a chance to take a look at them.

Carroll had taken the bull by the horns and was making a little political hay thereby.

Ford, at least right now, would just as soon not help Carroll improve his chances at becoming the next governor.

This ambulance furor has worked itself into one of the hottest political issues of the season meantime, for other reasons.

Opponents of legislative incumbents running for re-election this November are saying that those lawmakers, by creating the Licensure Board in '72, are responsible for the ambulance crisis. And the legislators are hopping mad. They've been calling and visiting Ford, Carroll and anyone else with clout who'll pay attention.

Here's the problem. The regulations require so much expense in training and new equipment that as many as 50 counties appear to be threatened with extinction of service. Operators can't afford it.

And the meat wagon business being the losing proposition it's always been, the funeral homes who by tradition supply the service in return for getting some of the business that often follows are now using the regulations as the ideal excuse to just get out.

Anyway, we were just wondering how much of the Governor's motive was ulterior.

We're reminded of the time several weeks ago, when the governor's new office of Local Government Assistance was created. Ford's aides were saying that it had been on the drawing board long before the LRC's agency of similar purpose. It's more comprehensive, too, they add.

What they didn't add was that factional foe Carroll runs the LRC. That, despite the fact that the LRC's use of the state computer in researching statutes for mayors and county judges had been busy for months to the apparent satisfaction of those using it.

And there are other examples of what appear to be petty politics in our capitols hallowed halls. Oh, well.

TRANSPORTATION WOES — New Secretary of the Cabinet Charles Pryor appears to be having problems getting from place to place.

While Gov. Ford flies to the nation's capitol on political business in a plane owned by the members of Daviess County's Green River RECC, Pryor, his second-in-command has been doing the same thing on the highways. Since taking the new job, Pryor has been driving a car with Daviess County plates, registered to the Green River.

RECC: The car belongs to J. E. Miller, Green River executive. Oh, yes. . . Miller's also Kentucky's Democratic Party (Cont. To 10)

BASS FISHERMEN TACKLE WATER POLLUTION

At least 1,000 Kentuckians are hooked on bass fishing. About that many avid anglers gathered recently at the Second Annual Fishing Seminar at the Frankfort Convention and Sports Center.

Five well-known professional fishermen-Ray Scott, Bill Dance, Tom Mann, Yank Dean, and B. J. Woods-took turns topping each other's fish stories.

They also shared their knowledge of the latest bass-catching equipment and techniques.

The fishermen watched several films on their sport. One film, with excellent underwater photography, showed a six-pound bass shaking loose from the hook after a three-minute fight. The seminar was sponsored by the Bluegrass Bass Club of Lexington. The proceeds, about $2,500, will be donated to the Kentucky Bass Federation for use in preventing water pollution in the state's lakes and streams.

About a third of the audience sported jackets bearing emblems of various Kentucky bass clubs. Clubs heavily represented at the seminar included the Frankfort Bassmasters, Capital City Bass Club of Frankfort, Thoroughbred Bass Club of Lexington, Lexington Kentucky Bass Club of Lexington, Dixie Bass Club of Lexington, Hillbilly Bassmasters of Ashland, Shelby County Bassmasters of Shelbyville, and the Woodford County Bassmasters of Versailles.

Last week's article dealt with Skaggs Trace as being the first named path through Rockcastle County and possibly the whole state, if we leave out the Warriors Path of great antiquity. Next we consider Boone's Path as the second established route into the interior, or Blue Grass region, of the newly-developing frontier.

Even before the formal ratification of the treaty by which Richard Henderson and associates, under the title of the Transylvania Company, bought from the Indians twenty million acres of land lying on the south side of the Kentucky River and including most of what was later to be known as Kentucky, Daniel Boone and a party of thirty woodsmen had left the treaty grounds and were on their way to lay out a path to the confluence of Otter Creek and the Kentucky River where their first settlement was to be made. They undoubtedly followed as far as Hazelpath approximately the same route as that which was continued as Skaggs Trace after crossing the Rockcastle River. At Hazelpath, Boone led off from the established trail and continued north and a little to the west in attempting to work out and mark a more direct route to his objective. He crossed the Rockcastle at the mouth of Parker's Creek, in the vicinity of the present Lamero Bridge, turning down the Rockcastle to Trace Branch, up the branch to its head, across Gansley Ridge and down to Crooked Creek. Following down Crooked Creek to where it flows into Roundstone Creek they went up Roundstone to Cove Branch, where they camped at an overhanging spring known as Boone's Spring, at which in 1915, the DAR erected a metal marker, near the old Cove Schoolhouse. From this point, they went across Buckeye Ridge and down to Renfro Creek, probably near where the old log Buckeye Church used to stand, then down Renfro until it emptied into Roundstone Creek, up Roundstone to near its head and then through Boone's Gap, at which point, it left Rockcastle County and proceeded on its way to the future site of Boonesboro.

These were the two principal routes into early Kentucky, both of them crossing Rockcastle County, so that a great majority of the early settlers of the future commonwealth left their footprints within the confines of the present boundaries of our county. Neither of these was the far-famed Wilderness Road, later to be the route most closely associated with the history and growth of the new state. This road came into being by an act of the November, 1795 session of the legislature which called for a wagon road to be opened from Crab Orchard to the top of Cumberland Mountain to facilitate travel between the old settlements and the new frontier.

Up until this time, the matter of roadmaking had been left almost entirely up to the Buffalo and other game that traveled between feeding grounds, watering places and ash licks. Their trail ran in all directions, without any north-south or east-west consideration. Only the Warrior's Path, trod by many generations of the Indians from the beginning of time, led in a continuation of direction for any distance, threading its way through the bottleneck of Cumberland Gap to provide a north-south route for the many tribes that visited and hunted and traded with each other between the northern lakes and the southern coast. We are apt to think of early Kentucky as a tangled and pathless wilderness through which early comers had to cut their own way. Actually, it was covered with a network of trails and paths and the job of the pioneer was to find just how to connect these various paths into one continuous path to his destination. Early pioneers have been given much credit for a wonderful job of engineering when actually the credit belongs to the buffalo and before him the Indians from the beginning of time, led in a continuation of travel between two given points. Nathaniel Hart, son of one of the proprietors with Henderson of the Transylvania Company and who spent his boyhood in Boonesboro, in a letter written in later years, scoffs at the idea of Boone being given so much credit for establishing a path to Boonesboro. He gives it as his opinion that Daniel never so much as cut a bush out of the way between Cumberland Gap and Boonesboro but followed game trails all the way. What is considered the first really engineered road in Kentucky was the road laid out as a result of the legislative act referred to previously, Boone, by the way, applied for the job of laying out this proposed road but was turned down.

While Skaggs Trace, Boone's Path and later the Wilderness Road were the main arteries of travel into Central Kentucky, other and less prominent paths were sometimes used. With at least one of these Boone himself was associated. When he left Boonesboro to go back to North Carolina to bring out his own family, and several others who came with him for mutual protection, he did not follow the path he had previously cut to Boonesborough when guiding in the Henderson party. He apparently traveled the old Skaggs Trace to the head of Dicks River at Brodhead, followed up Boone's Fork and headed across the road to strike the Boonesboro path somewhere between Roundstone Lick and present-day Berea. I have just received a letter from James Henderson, in a nursing home in Hamilton, Ohio, a descendant of Richard Henderson, who says that after the collapse of the Transylvania project, Henderson and party, in heading back for North Carolina, followed a trail up Dicks River, leaving Boone's Fork and across Brindle Ridge, coming down near Horseshoe Bend and down Renfro Creek to Roundstone near

According to the magazine "True," The Wilderness Road was the first state highway built in America with state funds. This information was contained in "Man to Man Answers" department in their issue of May, 1964.

Another act of the Legislature, approved March 1, 1797, provided for the building of a branch of the Wilderness Road extending from Milford, then the county seat of Madison County, to a meeting with the original Wilderness Road near what was later to become Pittsburg, Kentucky. At first known as The Madison Road, or the Madison Branch of the Wilderness Road, it later became more generally known as the Old State Road and was one of the first regularly established stage coach roads in this part of the country. This road ran out the ridge north of Mershons Cross Roads, paralleling the Rockcastle River in its general route, going down to the river and crossing it at Cruises Ferry, up Whiteoak Branch and on toward Richmond past the old house now occupied by Wally Phillips, which is the only one of the old stage coach taverns and overnight stops still in existence. So, even at the date in the early eighteen hundreds when this stage coach road was in operation, travelers following this route to Central Kentucky still had to cross present Rockcastle County to get there. Rockcastle County might in all truth be called "The Gateway to Kentucky."

Recently acquired information enables us to add the following names to the list of Revolutionary War veterans who settled in Rockcastle County between 1806 and 1830. James Dysart, James Chastee, John Hamm, William Moore, Thomas Onaley, Sr., John Pruitt, Jacob Stevens, James Anderson, William Craig, William Cash, Mirajah Frost, Richard Gentry, Thomas Gadd, Henry Haggard, Thomas Johnson, George Procter, Henry Pumphrey, Mourning Roberts, Jesse Scott, William Taylor, Charles Woodall, Jesse Woodall. Others may come to light with further investigation.

So far, nobody has come up with names of any veterans of the War of 1812 living in Rockcastle other than those mentioned in a previous article in this series. It is a well-known fact that several from this area saw service in that war as Indian scouts or mounted infantry. One, William Hays, whom I believe we forgot to mention in a previous article, had a kneecap split by an Indian tomahawk and walked with a limp for the rest of his life, being generally known as "Cripple Billy." He is buried in the old cemetery at Renfro Valley.

Another category not mentioned contained the names of those who fought in Indian Wars after the early 1880's. James Dysart, Alexander Henderson and others were so engaged and there must have been more. We are depending on some of their ancestors having pride enough in their accomplishments to tell us their names and where and when they fought. One other we know of was William Henderson, who was at the Battle of the Thames, a member of Colonel Richard M. Johnson's Mounted Infantry, when Tecumseh was killed. Another member of Col. Johnson's group was Col. William Whitley who lost his life in the charge on the Indian breastworks and was believed by many of his companions to have been the one who killed Tecumseh, although Col. Johnson got credit for it and was elected Vice President of the United States largely on account of this reputation. Although himself a statesman and officer, Col. Whitley went along on this fateful expedition as a private in the ranks under Johnson. He had had a premonition that he might be killed and had exacted a promise from one of his comrades to bring his scalp back to his wife if he fell in battle. His request, however, was not honored and he was buried on the battlefield.

YOU AND THE DRAFT

A young man, whom we shall identify as Bart, wrote that he had made application for a loan through his employer's credit union. The application was turned down, as it was company policy not to approve a loan for an employee in Class 1-H who had not attained the age of 22. Bart had interpreted the rejection to mean that the company had considered him a poor "credit risk."

We wish to share with you pertinent facts outlined in a letter to the employer, sent to convince the company that Bart was not a "credit risk" because of the fact that he was in Class 1-H and under the age of 22.

Bart was classified 1-H in September, 1972, then placed in the second priority group of that classification in early 1973. The 1H classification is a holding classification and there is virtually no chance that men in this group will be drafted.

Because of deferments and exemptions, many draft registrants do not become eligible for a high priority selection group until age 22 or older. Because most deferments are being phased out, ultimately the majority of young men will experience their prime draft exposure when they are 20 years old.

when they are 20 years old.

The 1-H classification will be the largest of any class in a standby draft operation. If at some time in the future the Department of Defense cannot maintain an adequate armed forces on an all-volunteer basis, there may be a need for the drafting of young men. This situation could necessitate the reclassification of those draft registrants in the first priority group of class 1-H to class 1-A. However, those presently classified 1-H and in the second priority selection group would not be vulnerable to induction until all those draft registrants in the first priority selection group have been processed.

Workshops Completed

Two clothing workshops were held at the Harry Sparks Vocational School during February and March. An Advanced Workshop and a Basic Construction Class met once a week for eight weeks. Twenty-one women met in one or more meetings of the advanced workshop and saw demonstrations on altering patterns, lining a jacket, sewing men's clothing, making bound buttonholes, and sewing on special fabrics and using trims. Those who attended five or more sessions and completed a garment received certificates. They were Judy Berry Lawless, Dorothy French, Sarah Adams, Lola Hubbard, and Phyllis Hines of Mt. Vernon; Ester Fullerlove of Livinston;

Katie Sanders of Crab Orchard; Ivie Thomas of Eubank; Edie Miller and Laura Owens of Orlando.

The basic clothing workshop was held for beginner sewers. Those who completed the classes and received certificates were Lois Baker, Sharon Denise Baker, Barbara Browning, Martha Carter, Precia Cobb, and Elizabeth Stokes of Mt. Vernon, Violet Cash and Ramona Denny of Brodhead.

Both the advanced and basic clothing workshops were taught by Cheryl Witt, County Extension Agent for Home Economics and were conducted as part of the Home Economics Program of the Cooperative Extension Service.

Kentucky Afield

By Hope Castleton
Dept. of Fish and Wildlife

Fishing for rainbow trout in Kentucky has been growing in popularity by leaps and bounds. In fact, some 16,000 bona fide trout anglers attest to the excellent fishing opportunities in the stocked creeks, lakes and tailwaters in the Commonwealth.

Two of the hot spots for rainbows are Rock Creek in McCreary County and the tailwaters of Lake Cumberland in Russell, Clinton and Cumberland Counties.

Even though the trout stocking program, conducted by the Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources and by the U. S. Bureau of Sport Fisheries and Wildlife, is on a "put-and-take" basis, monster rainbows are harvested annually.

The best area for big rainbows is the Cumberland tailwater which provides trophy trout angling from Wolf Creek Dam to Burkesville and even farther downstream. All state record rainbows have been harvested from this area. The present record tipped the scales at 14 pounds and 6 ounces. The proud fisherman who caught this fine trophy is Jim Mattingly, Somerset, Kentucky.

Trout fishing, to many, is simply using whole kernel corn, flavored cheeses or worms. However, trout fishing is also for the pros who use fly rods or spinning rigs and artificial lures. 1972 was a banner year for trout stocking, with some 375,000 rainbows being placed in 37 streams, 7 tailwaters and five lakes. This year, 400,000 trout will be distributed to the same areas.

The total number of rainbows to be stocked in selected areas by the Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources this year is 330,000 (an increase of 10,000 over 1972), while the U. S. Bureau of Sport Fisheries and Wildlife has allotted 55,000 adult rainbows and 17,000 sub-adults to the streams of the Daniel Boone National Forest.

The Department of Fish and Wildlife will stock 26 streams, five lakes and seven tailwaters. The Daniel Boone National Forest offers eleven streams with catchable trout, and seven remote streams which are stocked in the fall with sub-adults.

The purpose of the sub-adult fall stocking program is to provide wilderness type fishing for the angler who doesn't mind a good long hike.

Trout fishermen in Kentucky must have a valid fishing license and a trout stamp which costs $2.25. There is no size limit on Rainbow trout. The creel limit is eight fish per day, or eight in possession.

STATE GOVERNMENT'S WEEK OF ACTIVITY IN BRIEF

Governor Concerned - Gov. Wendell Ford has suggested phasing of ambulance licensing regulations to prevent undue hardship on Kentucky citizens. The Governor has asked Laurel True, secretary of human resources, to meet with the licensure board in April to explore possibilities.

New Education Planning - Dr. Lyman Ginger, superintendent of public instruction, has announced plans to increase emphasis on vocational education at all levels in Kentucky. The plan outlined by the superintendent includes expansion of vocational schools as well as an increase in vocational education at the lower levels.

Water Plan Endorsed - The new state Environmental Quality Commission has endorsed a plan to upgrade Kentucky's streams to meet the state's highest water-quality standard. The plan will eventually provide better recreation on all Kentucky streams, including fishing and swimming.

WHAT IS DURABLE PRESS?

Have you become acquainted with durable press yet? Treated with this finish, garments keep their just-pressed look all day long, and they never need ironing.

Durable press is a finishing process for fabrics that makes pleats and creases longer-lasting. It eliminates wrinkles for the normal life of a garment.

There are several ways to give a durable press to fabrics. Most of them require heat and chemicals. Generally, the chemicals are applied to the yard goods, the garment is made, and the finish is then set or cured by baking in an oven or by special pressing.

When you buy durable press fabric by the yard, the finish is what has already been set or cured. Thus, the seams and creases in the handmade garment would not have the set that those in a ready-made garment have.

Durable press fabrics presently are available in manmade fibers, cotton, and blends. Fabrics vary in weight from light to heavy, according to the type of garment.

Selecting Readymades - A wide range of durable press garments is available for every member of the family: blouses, shirts, children's clothes and women's dresses, men's pants, jackets, and raincoats.

You cannot tell by looking at a garment or piece of fabric that it has a durable-press finish. This information is on the hangtag or label.

A garment with a durable-press finish may be higher in price than a similar garment without the finish. However, this extra cost may be offset by the need for fewer garments, since they can be quickly and easily laundered. This is a bonus for families with children who quickly outgrow their clothes.

When selecting a ready-made garment with a durable-press finish, ask yourself these questions: (1) Does the hangtag give fiber content? Brand name? Is a permanent care label attached to garment? (2) Are the seams, pockets, plackets, and zippers flat and smooth? (Puckers won't come out in laundering.) (3) Are there any wrinkles in the garment? (These wrinkles will not come out.) (4) Is the color even, with no streaks or mottling? (5) Does the garment fit? (Alterations are difficult to make.)

Alteration Tips - Since the finish was set after the garment was made, readymades cannot be successfully let out, as the old seam lines and creases cannot be removed. Even in garments made at home, the seam lines and creases cannot be completely removed.

You can make garments smaller, but the seams may not be as flat or the creases as sharp as you would like.

To avoid having to change the hem in a skirt, shorten it at the waist.

shorten pants in one of two ways: (1) cut off the pant leg under the cuff and then restitch it at the desired length. (2) Rip out the cuff hem, cut off excess length and then re-cuff. When you use this method, old creases will show and the new cuff will not have a sharp crease.

Care-First of All - Whatever the washing and drying method, always first turn garments inside out to protect creased edges. For good results, soak oily stains and badly soiled areas in liquid detergent. If possible, wash garments before they become heavily soiled.

If your washer and dryer have "durable-press" settings, follow the directions that came with your machines. If your washer and dryer do not have these special settings, the following pointers will help you get good results: (1) Set the wash-water temp dial to "warm" or "moderate." Keep the washing period short. (2) Rinse in cold water. If your washer does not have a cold-rinse setting, put the dial on "warm" and turn off the hot-water supply before the last rinse water runs in. Fabric softener in the last rinse helps to reduce wrinkles and static electricity. (3) Use the "warm" or "medium" dryer setting and dry the clothes just long enough to get out all the dampness. Keep each dryer load small.

And, one other alternative is to turn off the heat before the drying cycle ends and allow the clothes to tumble in cool air for a few minutes. Remove clothes from dryer as soon as the tumbling ends. Put them immediately on hangers.

No dryer? If you do not have a dryer, use a cool rinse and medium spin-for-line-dried items. Use no spin at all for drip-dry.

Hand washing? When washing durable-press garments by hand, do not twist or wring.

Durable-press garments may also be satisfactorily washed or drycleaned by a commercial cleaner.

LOYAL CLOVERS SUCCESSFUL IN FUND DRIVE

During the recent Red Cross Fund Drive, the Loyal Clovers 4-H Club solicited donations in and around our community. Last year we collected only a meager sum, and therefore were especially proud of our grand total this year. Several members participated and our club gave cash awards to the top four collectors.

On Friday 23, we ended our soliciting by turning a grand total of $106.50 over to Mrs. Sue Burdette, local Red Cross Chairman.

Also participating but not shown in the photo was Billy Cameron.

4-H'ers Compete In Area Talk Meet

Ten 4-H'ers from Rockcastle County journeyed to Barboursville on Saturday, March 31, to participate in the Wilderness Trail Area 4-H Speech Contest. Rockcastle County came home with one champion and one alternate champion, Anthony Davidson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Arnel Davidson won champion in the 11-year old boys category. He will be giving his speech on pollution at the State 4-H Talk Meet on July 6. Marita Stewart, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Stewart was alternate champion in the 14 and 15-year old girls division. Others who presented blue ribbon speeches were Dawn Brumley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Brumley, Tressia McGuire, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur McGuire; Nancy Cass, daughter of Mrs. Jewel Cass and Mr. Billy Cass; Bobbly McClure, son of Mr. and Mrs. William McClure; Marcia Lamb and Carolyn Lamb, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Lamb; Elaine Robbins, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Melvin Robbins; and Billy Cameron, son of Mr. and Mrs. Billy Cameron.

At the speech contest, winners of the area achievement were presented. The achievement awards were based on project record books submitted by 4-H'ers. Those receiving champion ribbons from Rockcastle County were Marcia Lamb, senior clothing; Carolyn Lamb, junior clothing; Lisa Owens, daughter of Mr. & Mrs. Lawrence Owens, junior crocheted; Vonda Croucher was not present but received a ribbon in junior foods.

CHAMPION—Anthony Davidson, a fifth grader at Livingston School, was Champion of the Wilderness Trail Area 4-H Talk Meet held at Barboursville Saturday, March 31.

Pryor says it's a matter of convenience, since he doesn't have a car and Miller and he live in the same Frankfort apartment building.

What we ask, do the Green River ratepayers think about this matter of convenience? Do they know? And what's wrong with Pryor simply using his prerequisites of office and grabbing himself one of the state's fleet of new Rambler Ambassador Broughmans? All the other commissioners have cars.

Wouldn't it save a lot of questions? Maybe Pryor's too used to Buicks. Recall the time his highway deputy cracked up one of the state's Buick Electras right after the ascension of the Ford Administration? Pryor brought that deputy to the Capitol Annex. Pryor says, though, that he doesn't have a state car.

Whoever's using those Buicks is breaking the law. Though they bear official state license tags, they sport no official state silver seal on the doors. Check KRS Chapter 186.

ARROGANT THIEF—Holland McTyeire, an assistant attorney general, contends that a thief added insult to injury when rifling the glove compartment of his car parked in Louisville the other day.

McTyeire said he found the compartment contents strewn all over the seats and floor. However, the culprit found nothing worth stealing and McTyeire is a bit put out at such selectivity.

Kentucky has been selected for 1973 because of its distinctive contributions to America's culture.

Docks Damaged—Parks Commissioner Ewart Johnson has promised immediate action to repair the heavily damaged dock dock at Kentucky Lake in time for the spring fishing season. Johnson visited the lake after winds which had battered the facility did damage estimated in excess of $1 million. There was also extensive damage to private boats docked at the park's facility.

We were greatly encouraged at Monday night's meeting of the Rockcastle County Board of Education to hear County Superintendent Charles Parsons tell the Board that the new math books being ordered were "a trend from modern math."

You parents know what modern math is, that's where educators decided why multiply or divide a problem, with only two steps when you could use four. In attempting to help my child with some homework math problems last year, I was quite amazed to see the procedure used to divide four into sixteen. I won't attempt to explain it here, because I couldn't anyway, but suffice it to say that, in my opinion, it made a complicated procedure out of something that is relatively simple.

Of course, I'm not an educator, or hadn't you guessed, and there may have been a good reason for instigating the modern math program, other than making parents look dumb, but I'm glad to see the beginning of a return to the "tried and true" methods....

An editorial in Tuesday's Lexington Herald concerned the possibility of 50-mile-per-hour speed limits on interstates and expressways due to the expected shortage of gasoline this summer. The editorial stated that reducing the speed to that level would save 15 to 20 percent of the gasoline consumed by cars traveling at a higher rate.

I kinda liked the idea, my husband didn't, at all. But then we don't usually agree so it was no surprise. I felt that it might cut-down on traffic accidents for one thing and for another, it might help us set a more leisurely pace in our actions and our attitudes....

It seems I incurred the wrath of a few farmers in the area when I sounded off about the high beef prices a couple of weeks ago. One farmer told me that even with the higher prices he was receiving for his cattle, what with the increased price he was having to pay for feed, he wasn't making anymore just handling more. We realize that it's a vicious circle and we don't really think the President's freeze on prices is going to be all that helpful. He seems to have taken the position of treating the disease without trying to find out its cause. But, believe me, either way, I'm out of it. I'll keep quiet and munch on my fish and poultry and think about the steaks and roasts that something caused me not to be able to afford....

The deadline for candidates filing for office in the May Primary was Wednesday night at midnight. At noon Tuesday, we had 51 Republicans and 1 Democrat filing for the sixteen county offices up for grabs. Of course, others may file in the interim period and, of course we'll bring you completely up-to-date next week. But, it seems as if the Republican Primary in this county is shaping up to a typical "Grand Old Kentucky Election".....
