

150 Years of Service For Deaf School

By Sue Weller
State News Bureau

DANVILLE, Ky.—To communicate—to have someone really understand us, we all long for the deaf individual is no different. He, too, longs for meaningful communication—and at the Kentucky School for the Deaf (KSD), he is achieving that.

The Kentucky School for the Deaf (KSD), is helping deaf students from across the state learn to communicate. Founded in 1823, it was said to be the first school for the deaf west of the Alleghenies and the first free school for the deaf in the world. "People usually have the wrong conception of the school," said Winfield McChord, Jr., superintendent. "While often considered a 'hospital' or a 'home,' it is, in fact, a public school seeking to impart a twelfth grade education to hearing-impaired children."

The misconception often comes about because the school is a residential facility. This need arises from the fact that children come from every area of the Commonwealth. The school is a division of the Department of Education's Bureau of Instruction and must follow all guidelines set forth for public schools. This includes certified teachers and approved curriculum.

A happy, carefree environment prevails at KSD. Children with similar problems help each other discover the secret of communication in a world without sound.

Vocational training is offered in twelve separate areas including woodworking, cabinet-making, general shop, body and fender repair, dry cleaning, tailoring, pressing, dressmaking, cooking, arts and crafts, cosmetology, typing and office machines and printing.

"We also participate in major athletics with other public schools and state residential schools for the deaf," said McChord. "Football, basketball, baseball, track and wrestling, as well as cheerleading."

The school will soon have a new gymnasium-pool building which will include space for locker and shower rooms, hobbies, classroom and storage facilities.

A variety of extra-curricular activities are open for those with special interests. These include Jr. National Association for the Deaf (a student body government), Y Teens, Key Club, Boy Scouts and Eagle Scouts, a yearbook, safety patrols, office aides, and Boys' and Girls' Athletic Association. Driver Education is also offered to the KSD student.

In many ways, the campus resembles that of a small college with its dormitories and numerous buildings. Students are housed in dormitories according to age, with cottage or house parents in residence.

According to McChord, qualifications for attending the school include that the child be six years of age by December 31 of his first school year, that parents must be residents of Kentucky, and the child's hearing impairment would preclude satisfactory progress in public schools. Last month KSD celebrated its 150th birthday with many distinguished guests and alumni present. Gov. Wendell Ford spoke during special ceremonies and dedicated the two most recently constructed buildings on campus to two veteran educators and declared their "ideals of service will live for years."

The new primary education building was named for Miss Isabelle Walker and the food service building for Charles B. Grow.

KSD, many go on to receive additional degrees from Gallaudet College, Washington, D.C., the world's only liberal arts college for the deaf. Some attend the National Technical Institute for the Deaf at Rochester, New York.

Whatever their future endeavor in life, KSD strives to show each student that they are an important, integral part of society. That they can and will learn to communicate

Let's Elect Pleaz Mobley REPRESENTATIVE DISTRICT 80

Rockcastle and Pulaski Counties are Republican Counties. Lincoln County is predominantly Democrat. Heretofore, it has been the custom for the Representative to be alternated between the counties represented. Lincoln County has had the Representative for the past 12 years. Now it is time for Rockcastle and Pulaski Counties to have the Representative.

I am a Republican and a resident of Rockcastle County. Elect me as your Representative and I shall serve you, the people of the 80th District, to the best of my ability.

Thank you for your support and influence

You're never too old to yearn.

When you retire, you'll still want to take vacations. When you retire, you'll still want to buy new clothes, have an occasional night out, drive a newer car, buy gifts, and be independent. Will you be able to? If you have your month there's only one thing that's going to keep you from living the way you want to Lack of money.

That's where U.S. Savings Bonds come in. You can join the Payroll Savings Plan where you work right now. That way an amount you specify will be set aside from your paycheck and used to buy Bonds. It's an almost painless way to save, and before you know it, you'll have a sizeable nest egg built up for your retirement years. U.S. Savings Bonds. Because you want to retire from work, not from living.

Judge Charles C. Carter

Lists a bill of particulars and accomplishments for the past four years, commencing with schools. We have one of the best and nicest high school buildings in the State, which the Fiscal Court had to approve before it could be built. All school buildings come under the heading of Rockcastle County and MUST be approved by the Fiscal Court of the County.

In addition to the above the Fiscal Court re-financed the school bonds last year at a saving of $381,783, and same is recorded in the County Clerk's Office in Order Book 6 Page 109. Everybody is proud of our high school and I am, too.

Hospital: If the County could not have helped in the way we have, our hospital would have been closed long before this time. It is now modern, even to air conditioning, which is now ready for use. Along this line a medical center is now being erected near the hospital that I am sure we will all be very proud of.

Ambulance Service: We have had ambulance service for fifty years and will have it for fifty years more. Don't worry!

Roads: When have roads been in as good condition as they are now? In the past year there have been 20 new bridges built across creeks and branches, and nobody is waterbound now. There has been 17 miles of roads bulldozed and graded that have long been needed.

We have six new dump trucks, two road graders, a back hoe and gravel loader, all bought and paid for in the past four years.

Right-of-ways have all been cut in all important roads in the County, so you can see where you are going without being afraid you will meet someone head on.

Garbage: We have garbage containers scattered all around at different locations in the County. The containers are for a place to dispose of your garbage and not garbage pick-ups as some would have you believe, and the people in the towns of Mt. Vernon, Brodhead, and Livingston are at liberty to dispose of their garbage in these containers as well as any other citizen in the County. The purpose of this is to give people a place to dispose of their garbage without carrying it out on some county road and throwing it out. The County hauls off the garbage deposited in the containers at no cost to taxpayers. BUT WE DO NOT PICK UP GARBAGE. There will be some more containers after July 1st.

Taxes: I have been County Judge for twenty years and County taxes have never been raised while I have been County Judge and they will not be if I am re-elected. The County poll tax was discontinued under my administration in the past.

I believe election officers pay should be raised to $15.00 a day and will advocate that if re-elected, that is just $1.25 per hour.

All the above are true facts and not rumors. I don't believe in spreading rumors, but I do believe in spreading the truth and that is the reason for this being published.

I believe we have one of the best Counties in the State to live in, considering our schools, churches and citizens, none better as a combination.

I personally invite you to remain a citizen and urge others to locate here.

Next Tuesday is election day and I am sure you can give enough of your time to vote for officers that will serve you for the next four years.

Vote for qualified candidates for the office they seek.

How, then, do you relate price to quality? Here are some factors to consider:

Price and Quality Relation in Fashion—You get what you pay for" seems to be a common belief when you buy clothing. In other words, the price paid for a garment can be equated with the quality of the garment. Although that idea may be a guide to selection, price should not be considered an automatic guide to quality.

—A garment could be in the high-price range because the fabric is expensive. High-quality natural fibers are more expensive than some synthetics or blends. To cut the cost of garments made from high-quality or high-fashion fabrics, the manufacturer may cut corners on the amount of fabric used, the construction or the finishing details.

—The exclusiveness of the design will affect the price. Obviously, if thousands of the same design are produced, the garments will cost less than items of which only a dozen are manufactured.

—Price is affected by design. The number and shape of pieces in the design can increase the price.

—The type of construction, supporting fabrics used, trims and so forth, affect the price and quality. For instance, buttons can add considerably to the cost—four buttons priced at 3 dollars each will add 12 dollars to the cost of the garment.

The concept of what is high-quality or low-quality may vary. What is low-quality to you may be high-quality to someone else. Likewise, concepts of expensive and inexpensive within styles and fabrics vary among individuals.

Changes in one's economic situation are usually reflected in the quality of your clothes. As your income increases, you may expect to select a more expensive line of garments, rather than buy more of the garments you are currently purchasing.

Technological changes also alter the current concept of quality. Through the years, manufacturers in the textile and clothing industry have learned to recognize what sells. They know from your buying patterns that quality control merchandise is as important to you as the price you pay. Therefore, many fiber producers, fabric manufacturers and large retail companies maintain their own testing and research laboratories for the purpose of quality control.

Fashions for the Elderly—Today's "young" individuals can look forward not only to retirement but also to retaining their individuality through attractive dress. And personal appearance.

You can enjoy color and fashion as much in your later years as you did at age 20. Clothing tastes and needs constantly change as people mature. But how they change depends on life style, physical condition and all of the other personal characteristics that accompany each stage of life.

Until recently, it was assumed that when you reached age 50, you would don the "uniform" of the older person—drab colors and uninteresting designs and fabrics. It was also assumed that older people, both male and female, were not interested in clothing.

It is impossible to describe a "typical" elderly person, but there are some psychological changes that create common characteristics in individuals as they reach the older years.

As muscles lose their tone and strength, the upper arms tend to become flabby, and abdominal curves become more evident. Such factors, plus a re-distribution of weight (arms and legs thinner, waist thicker, hips larger) can increase the problem of finding ready-to-wear that fits comfortably and looks attractive.

Personal coloring changes are also evident. In addition, pigmentation of the hair and skin becomes less intense; skin wrinkles develop and deepen; and hair becomes thinner. Such changes may also mean that some colors—worn in the past no longer look attractive.

Many people find that they can attractively wear colors in their older years that they could not wear when they were younger. In addition, cosmetics, wigs and hairpieces help many older people achieve the special individual look they desire.

Fashions for the elderly need not be drab. The importance of lively colors—colors that reflect one's personality rather than the elderly stereotype.

MT. ZION TO ENLARGE BUILDING

The Mt. Zion Baptist Church, Oak Hill, Brodhead, will soon begin a new addition to their church building to make room for their growing congregation. Their present building provides space for fifty people in Sunday School. An addition of six new Sunday School rooms is planned, which will give more needed space in the Sanctuary also.

Mt. Zion, in its outreach ministry, sponsors a half-hour radio worship program each Sunday afternoon at 2:30 P.M. on WVKV, Renfro Valley. Their pastor, Bro. Joe Mobley, brings the message each Sunday. Bro. Mobley is presently attending Clear Creek Baptist School in Pineville, Kentucky where he is a second-year student. He and his family will spend the summer in Brodhead serving the Lord with their congregation.

ENVIRONMENTALLY SPEAKING

By Thomas O. Harris

We in the Commonwealth of Kentucky are extremely aware of our waterways, and more miles of streams than any other state except Alaska. I believe these waters must be protected from pollution so that future generations will have good clean water for recreation, for drinking and, in short, for all uses.

The Department for Natural Resources and Environmental Protection intends to bring Kentucky's waters up to a quality suitable for all uses, and then we intend to maintain that quality.

I believe clean water, along with clean air and wisely used land, is the greatest heritage we can leave for the future. I urge you to join me in attaining that goal.

On June 4, we will present a proposal to clean up our waters for all uses at a public hearing in Frankfort. By "our" waters, I mean all the waters shown on the 1973 "Streams of Kentucky" map prepared by the Kentucky Department of Commerce. That includes about 14,000 miles of streams. We do, however, have to make exceptions for water specially designated by law—such as wild rivers, which must be preserved in their free-flowing condition.

I believe this is a good plan and urge all concerned citizens to come to the hearing and to support the proposal. In this way you can help insure top quality water in the Commonwealth.

Once all procedural requirements are met, our proposal will be sent to the Kentucky Legislative Research Commission to become an enforceable regulation. A copy will be sent to the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency for its approval.

Our proposal will require all "point" sources of pollution discharging into Kentucky's waters to apply the best practicable control technology to treatment facilities by July 1, 1977. They must apply the best available technology economically achievable by July 1, 1983.

After adoption of the proposal, facilities holding a permit from our Division of Water (but not already in compliance with the new requirements) will be given six months to submit a letter of intent stating they will comply with water standards.

MANUEL SHEPHERD FOR SHERIFF

LAW & ORDER

LAW & ORDER

Who Are My Deputies???

Rumors name more than twenty-eight Deputy Sheriffs that have been chosen by me in the fourteen precincts of Rockcastle County.

I have named NO Deputies nor have I promised anyone a Deputy's position because:

(1) Kentucky Law, (KRS 70.030) requires that the County Court MUST approve the elected sheriff's appointed deputies.

(2) By Kentucky law, at the last Fiscal Court meeting, the County Fiscal Court fixed the number of Deputies the elected Sheriff may appoint at three.

(3) By tradition in Rockcastle County, prospective deputies who announce with the candidate for Sheriff obligate that candidate to keep them for four-year terms, regardless of their abilities to fulfill the duties of their office.

I intend to provide Rockcastle County the service and protection to which it is entitled. I will employ deputies in compliance with Kentucky law, and I will not hesitate to discharge any Deputy Sheriff who does not or will not fulfill the duties of the office. As your Sheriff, I will not appoint or keep an incompetent Deputy Sheriff just to obtain your vote for the office of Sheriff of Rockcastle County.

Gardening Tips from Extension Specialists at the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture

If the cucumber or cantaloupe vines in your garden have ever gone limp in the sunshine and then shortly afterwards shriveled up and died, chances are they are strangled by a microorganism which UK Extension plant pathologist John Hartman lists as Erywin tracheiphila.

This disease, says Hartman, is caused by bacteria that overwinter in life-bodies of those striped cucumber beetles often seen racing over melon hills and chewing on leaves of young seedlings. The vines are infected when the beetles feed on the tender young leaves and deposit the bacteria at the feeding sites. After infection, the bacteria invade and block the water-conducting veins or tubes within the plant, thus literally strangling it to death.

Once the plant is infected, there is nothing that can be done about it, and since the disease is entirely dependent upon the beetle, control of this bacterial wilt depends upon control of the insect.

In this control, it is essential that measures be taken early in the season, according to Extension entomologist Dr. Wes Gregory. Insecticides must be applied to keep beetle populations at a low level. He recommends dusting or spraying with methoxychlor, sevin, or malathion according to directions on the label. Repeated applications may be necessary to control beetles flying in from neighboring areas.

Bacterial wilt of sweet corn is another insect-spread disease that needs controlling in springtime. The culprit in this case, Hartman says, is Erywin stewartii, an organism that overwinters either in infected corn seed or in the bodies of the little black flea beetles that feed on corn and a lot of other plants.

Flea beetles feed as soon as corn comes up and infect the plant with the organism-causing Stewart's Wilt, as this disease is often called. Symptoms of infection usually develop slowly, but pale green streaks and eventually yellow-to-brown streaks show on the leaves. In many cases the plants wilt and die when the stalk is almost mature. The mild winter just passed could allow for greater survival of the flea beetle and also the disease bacteria. Thus, this could be a poor sweet corn year.

Planting commercially grown seed that is free of disease is an important step in wilt control. Also some sweet corn varieties, such as Golden Cross Bantam, Iochief, Marcross, and Goldcrest, are wilt resistant. Then, as with cucumber beetles, flea beetles that serve as carriers, or vectors of the disease must be controlled.

Fortunately, Sevin has proved to be fairly effective, not only against flea beetles, but also against the cornborer and the earworm, Gregory says. For small patches of sweet corn, 3 level tablespoons of 50 percent wettable powder to a gallon of water will dispose of flea beetles.

Both Netherton and Jones acknowledge the economic climate "that exists in and around Louisville as a formidable employment barrier.

Insuring certain types of disabilities and job obsolescence are only two of the problems the state employment service and the Jobs For Veterans Program must contend with.

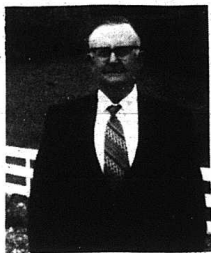

Netherton feels attitude is the "point where we all have to start."

"If a handicapped person doesn't have the right attitude, Q. I sent an old X-ray bill dated September 1970 along with some recent bills to Medicare. Although I received payment on the recent bills, I got nothing on the X-ray bill. A note in the letter said the deadline for submitting this bill had passed. Can you give me the deadline for sending in Medicare bills?

A. For doctor and other medical services you receive from January through September, you must file the bills by December 31 of the next year. For services you receive from October through December, the bills must be sent in by December 31 two years later.

NOTICE

CITIZENS OF THE FIFTH DISTRICT - LISTEN TO THIS VERY IMPORTANT NOTICE BROUGHT TO YOU BY ERNEST MASON, CANDIDATE FOR MAGISTRATE.

Do you want four more years of same leadership or do you want a progressive leader such as Ernest Mason to represent you in the very important position of magistrate? Ernest Mason is a man of integrity who will see to it that the best interests of Rockcastle County are carried out. Now is a crucial time for the people of this county as we are about to lose our ambulance service. Some members of the Fiscal Court are apathetic and take a "don't care" attitude. Ernest Mason cares and will attempt to solve the problem when elected. Another crucial problem is our county roads. Ernest Mason will see to it that the county roads are upgraded to the point that anyone would be proud to drive on them.

VOTE FOR ERNEST MASON FOR MAGISTRATE OF THE FIFTH DISTRICT, POSITION NUMBER 1 ON THE BALLOT. THANK YOU.

FORT SEQUOYAH

Combination Indian Village, Riverboat Town

The Indian Village and Riverboat Town at Fort Sequoyah are unique in the way the project was constructed.

In most of the replicas of a traditional Riverboat town, original materials were used in comparison to other similar projects were the buildings and interiors were built from new materials to simulate sights of yesteryear.

Once primarily an Indian village, the present facilities are in their first year with plans calling for additional expansion in the near future by Mr. and Mrs. Carlos Carlolis, owners of both the old and the new facilities.

As the name implies, the riverboat town is a major attraction and is complete in every detail, including an actual museum of relics from early Kentucky history.

In addition to the antiques and other attractions there are the excitement of gunfights, can-can dancers and other frontier entertainment.

A major attraction is one that due to necessity had to be constructed anew, The Rockcastle Queen, a replica of the famed paddle wheeler boats that once plied the major streams of the south.

The Rockcastle Queen carries passengers to the Villages on a cruise of the Rockcastle river for a short distance, and the excitement of a gun battle between attacking Indians and members of the riverboat crew.

The authentic attractions of the town include a post office moved intact from its original site at McWhorter in Laurel County.

The post office was built in 1916 by Morgan Bowling, and his wife was the postmistress until 1940 when she retired.

The original post office boxes contain many letters unaltered for with the original address and dates still intact. On the walls of the post office are posters of advertisements, including the sale of war stamps and business establishments.

Other attractions are a telephone office containing an actual switchboard and other antique equipment, an old bank with actual furniture, doctor's office furnished with original materials, an old bar and a complete blacksmith shop with antique equipment.

With only a short distance to travel a visitor can visit sights of old—not simulated—replicas of a town, as many tourist attractions use.

A gunfight, led by Leonard Elliott of Corbin as marshall, is also unique.

The town is built in the setting of a deep forest with the trails leading through refreshing lanes. A trip in the horse drawn surrey is also another major attraction at the village.

Fort Sequoyah is located near Livingston and is only a short distance from the Livingston interchange of Interstate 75.

Frankfort Watchline

Until recently, all the hubbub about state contracts has centered around the personal service kind — the type on which no bids are taken, but which are negotiated.

The usual complaint is that such contracts go to political favorites, which undoubtedly is correct in many or most cases. Correct, we say, not necessarily proper.

The basic idea — in theory — is that these are contracts for services the state has no experts for or would pay too much to get done otherwise.

That they have been abused is undeniable, but there is one built-in safety factor that has come to mind only since Kentuckians learned that they — the taxpayers, that is, could be had by way of the other type of contract. That's the price contract. That's a awarded by bids.

Why? Simple. A personal services contract can run only one year and, therefore, is subject to renewal and, we hope, review by the state — and more important, there is a limit on the personal contract — a set amount that cannot be exceeded during the year.

In other words, the agreement is to pay Mr. Smith no more than $5,000 for services rendered on right of way, grave removal, helping the state bi-centennial or what have you.

Mr. Smith can pad the expenses and salary any way he wants but still cannot exceed the $5,000 ceiling.

Contrast this to the situation now under Finance Department investigation regarding All American Moving Co. of Frankfort, operated by Jimm (that's how he spells it) Creech, who used to be an advance man or aide for Gov. Wendell Ford and U. S. Sen. Walter Huddleston.

Creech got the contract to move state furniture and equipment, and he got it under the prior Republican administration by being low bidder.

Of course, the sweet part was yet to come. It was the big move of numerous departments and agencies to the new Capitol

Where Will You Be?

Next Tuesday, May 29th, is Primary Election Day. At that time, the voters of Rockcastle County will go to the polls to elect their nominees as virtually all county officials for the next four years. WHERE WILL YOU BE?

Will you, as you should go to the polls to exercise your privilege to vote? Will you be at the polls to fulfill your duty as a responsible citizen of the county to help in selecting those who will govern you for the next four years? Or, will you, as did 59% of the registered voters in 1969, simply ignore the fact that it is election day and go about your business as usual?

Undoubtedly, the Watergate affair will have some effect on the attitude of voters this election. Possibly, they will feel that politics are so corrupt on all levels that nothing can change them. This is not true. Whenever politics and politicians become corrupt the fact can be traced directly to an apathetic public — SUCH AS OURSELVES!

This nation has come a long way from its beginnings. A beginning based on the premise that man should have the right to choose by whom he is governed — a premise which was fought for and has been defended time and again.

Here in Rockcastle, county elections have always created quite a stir of interest among some of us. This interest should be county-wide and should be based on whether or not a candidate is the best possible choice for the office he seeks. This decision should be reached independently of anyone else after careful consideration of the issues involved.

Nevertheless, the important thing is that we do not once again let an election go by without our participation. Because, if you do, then you have absolutely no right to criticize any action taken by an elected official. Remember, you couldn't be bothered.

TUESDAY IS ELECTION DAY — WHERE WILL YOU BE??

Plaza office building.

Now, Creech obtained the contract legitimately, or so we presume, and look at what has happened. The state has advanced out, at this reading, close to a half million dollars for a move which one rival mover says should have cost one-fifth the amount.

Yes, the contract was competitive. But so, there is no ceiling on price contracts. There is only a per unit arrangement for goods and services.

Worse, according to knowledgeable finance officials, there were few if any controls and specifications.

And so Creech, months after completing the work, sends in a few whopping bills to the finance people. No limit. Not enough detailed accounting. Just so many alleged man hours and moves at so much per unit.

The result is something which the state says now never should have happened. There is an investigation underway, so we'll not make judgments. But we're guessing the state won't get much back from Creech despite what Finance Commissioner Charles Fryor calls many discrepancies.

Creech did, we must note, rebate 98-hundred dollars last month when his hand was c'nd on one bill.

Another question, of course, is whether the state administration is not in a sense investigating itself. We haven't been able to get to Creech for him to say anything, but we planned to ask him if he made any large donations to any party.

Reckon the Finance fellows will ask him that? We guess not.

Another advantage of personal service contracts is that a list of them comes out monthly, for perusal by the press. On the other hand, nobody knows about a price contract unless somebody asks, or the state has the good grace to make an announcement.

The Carefree Approach — One problem with a lawmaker's service on an interim legislative committee is that his continued service is dependent on whether the voters send him back to follow through on the work to which he's been devoting much of his time. And when a legislator chooses not to run for re-election, some of his interim committee thinking may take on a sort of lame duck flavor.

This struck us the other day, during a session of an interim sub-committee wrestling with the problem of equalizing spending public money among all Kentucky school children, rich or poor.

Chairman Gilson Downing, a Lexington Democratic senator who didn't run for re-election tossed out a poker-faced idea to the gasps of several other lawmakers, many of them in the midst of heated campaigns.

"Why not," he offered, "do away with all the school districts in the state and simply allow the state to run the whole show?"

Letter To The Editor

To the citizens and voters of Rockcastle County: Next Tuesday, the 29th of May, you again have the opportunity to exercise your privilege of voting and electing your county officials for the next four years. Will you, as good citizens, exercise that privilege? — or will you find some excuse for failing to vote!

Every man seeking the office of his choice are fine men and are asking you for your support in helping him be the winner. All of the candidates running cannot be elected; there can only be one winner and in some instances several losers — only you, the voter, can select the winner. I am sure that all of you are interested to, and discussed the merits of each of these candidates, and I'm positive you will vote for the man you judge to be the best qualified and capable of conducting the affairs of your county to the best interest of all the citizens. We have many problems now and the next four years will see some of these problems become more critical individual citizens cannot solve; therefore, we must depend on our county officials to provide us, the citizens, with the best solutions and administrations to the best of their abilities.

As voters it behooves us to exercise sound mature judgment in the selection of our officials. If we do not vote, then we cannot complain about the operations of our county government. Vote, good citizens, and vote for the man you believe to be the best to represent you, the citizen.

ROCKCASTLE COUNTY

As the May 29th Primary draws ever closer, I would like to take this means of trying to reach each and every voter in Rockcastle County.

I am a Veteran of World War II, married to the former Lucille Livesay, and have two children. I am a lifelong Republican and resident of Rockcastle County.

Due to my duties as Jailor, I am on duty 7 days a week, 24 hours each day. In this official capacity, I hear the many problems of our county, and as "COUNTY JUDGE", I believe FRANK DEBORDE is the man that can and will solve these problems.

I have been in law enforcement for the past 8 years and I believe my training makes me well "QUALIFIED" for the office of "COUNTY JUDGE".

SEN. DEE RUDDLETON REPORTS TO THE PEOPLE OF KENTUCKY

The great lesson this country should have learned from the Vietnam War is that gradual involvement can lead to large-scale involvement, that little wars can become big wars, and that we should be extremely careful about military commitments we make - especially those "small" commitments that often grow into major ones.

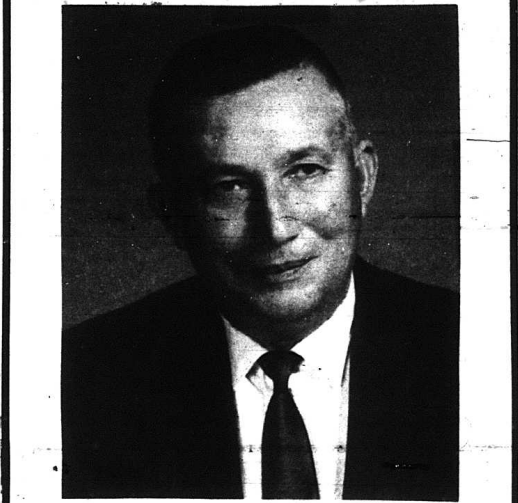

That's why the current U.S. bombing in Cambodia worries me. It is reminiscent of our early engagement in Vietnam, in which our initial commitment was a rather small contingent of advisors. As we all too well know, that commitment grew by leaps and bounds until we had more than a half million men in South Vietnam and many thousands more throughout Indochina.

Surely we have learned the lesson of gradual progression into a quagmire of involvement. We have finally extricated ourselves from South Vietnam; we have gotten our prisoners of war back from North Vietnam; and almost all of our troops have returned home.

Now is the time to completely eliminate our involvement - not only from South Vietnam, but from all of Indochina. Only by getting out totally can we guarantee against renewed involvement.

I have learned our lesson; let us now put it to practice. That is what I am trying to do in the Senate. I have joined in co-sponsoring two pieces of legislation designed to halt

FELLOW CITIZENS OF ROCKCASTLE COUNTY

Next Tuesday, May 29, is the day that you will decide on the real needs for our County. I'm sure that most of you have already made up your minds as to the candidates that you feel will best serve our County. I think that that is good. There has been plenty of time and opportunities for each of us to express ourselves concerning our thoughts and desires. Therefore, I hope that you will not be influenced by these last minute rumors that I understand will be circulated by one of my opponents. AGAIN I remind you that if there were TRUTHS to be told these could and should have been told two weeks ago so that you would have time to check them out.

At this time, allow me to recall some of my pledges and expressions of interest with you.

- These are:
- (1) I am convinced that you, the Citizens, should have a voice in deciding the most sensible way in which our revenue sharing money is spent. Folks, this is your tax money! We not only need, but we must make these dollars count.
 - (2) I have said that we need a real spirit of Cooperation throughout the County. Without cooperation, there can be no real progress for our County.
 - (3) Our County Judge needs to be Alert but also Able and Willing to take advantage of the opportunities that knock at our County's door. I believe that you agree that this is so.
 - (4) Our County Judge MUST have the respect of state and local law officers. Without this, we cannot hope to stop these storehouse breakings, robberies and disturbances.
 - (5) Our County Judge should work closely with our farm organization, schools, and public service agencies to make sure that our County gets the most benefits possible for its people.

Friends, I could go on but I believe that you realize that there is much more to being a qualified PUBLIC SERVANT than being able to say bad things about someone or just being in office for a long time. To me, a man needs to be Able to recognize what is right and be Willing to do it. Decide to elect me, and I'll work four years to prove that your decision was good.

Thank you ever so much.

Sincerely Yours
Hubert Thacker

Rockcastle Recollections

© John Lair 1973

Who remembers Uncle Jack Settles, who, in the beginning days of our restoring of the Renfro Valley Station, lived for several months in the old Redbus Schoolhouse? He made his permanent headquarters somewhere in the neighborhood of Grayhawk, Kentucky, but was, over a period of several years, a resident of Rockcastle County, as noted.

I am writing from memory, without looking up dates, his age, etc., and my recollection is that he was around eighty-four years of age when he first came to us. Uncle Jack had many a tale to tell of stirring adventures in different parts of the world and for a long time I paid but little attention to his stories, considering them largely figments of his imagination. Noticing that he always seemed to have money about him I asked him one day where it came from. He told me that he drew two pensions for military service, one from the U. S. Government and another from the Canadian Government for service with the Princes Pat-Regiment in overseas services in World War II. Owing to his age, I questioned that statement, but he was so sure and so confident and remarked that he had a whole bunch of medals to prove it, as well as several more from service in the U.S. Forces. He asked me if I would like to see them and I told him I sure would, believing that he would be about at the last time they would be mentioned. A week or so later he drove up in his rusty old Ford Coupe and said "Well, I got them things, if you want to see them." He opened up the trunk of his car and there they were! The gallon bucket in which he had carried them was turned over on the floor of the car and at least a quart of assorted and various words spilled out around it. After that, I was ready to listen to everything he told me.

He often told me that he was in perfect health and the only thing that bothered him was a sore and itching, which had never gotten over being kicked by highpower rifles. He offered to run a hundred yard race with me or anybody of my choosing and offered to bet on him self to win. He once came over from Grayhawk with some old fellow at least as old as he was. Both had refreshed their spirits somewhat with spirits and were definitely out for a good time. The first thing his companion said to me after being introduced was "Me an' Uncle Jack, we like the gals."

Uncle Jack was a great tourist attraction. I dressed him up in a red flannel shirt and a floppy old black hat and sat him down on the front porch of the Renfro Valley Lodge to talk to visitors and it would be long until he had a crowd gathered around him, entranced by his stories, many of which he had heard on his way to Canada on matters pertaining to his pension and my two little daughters of around six and eight always cried to go with him. He generally brought them back some kind of a souvenir, which they always prized highly.

Uncle Jack played a guitar just well enough to hammer out an accompaniment to the songs he sang. I once heard him singing "Home on the Range" and he was in it. Both had refreshed their spirits somewhat with spirits and were definitely out for a good time. When I questioned him about it, he told me he had learned it from a bunch of buffalo hunters out in Kansas and that that was the way they sang it. To my further amazement, he sang a verse he said Buffalo Bill had made to it following his killing of Chief Yellow Hand in battle. I have no doubt of its authenticity, as it tells the story much as Buffalo Bill would have told it.

I questioned him further about old songs, which were always of special interest to me. Among others, he told me the following story. He said that he and a companion (Joe somebody, whose last name I do not now remember) were young men prospecting for gold in the Klondike who were smitten by the charms of a dance-hall girl named Nellie. What little gold they were able to find all found its way into her hands. He said the older prospectors, more wise to the ways of the world, kidded them about this and that one of them, later-famous Robert W. Service, wrote a poem about it that everybody's heard of and got a big laugh out of. The rest of them soon forgot all about it, but he and Joe were quite serious and failed to see anything funny about it. They took such of the poem as they could remember and finished it up to suit themselves. It soon gained circulation over the country as "Jack and Jo" and in the earlier days of country music radio, could be heard on about all the programs. If you are familiar with this old song and with the poems of Robert W. Service, his style in it is unmistakable. He actually was in the Klondike at the time Uncle Jack told about and the many poems he wrote there were later gathered into book form and made him famous.

Another of his songs later gained wide circulation among country singers and was revived only a few years ago. This was "Squaws Along the Yukon." One of Uncle Jack's sons who still visits me occasionally, told me the last time he was here that he was trying to collect royalties from this song for his mother, Uncle Jack's widow, who is still living. Having had several similar experiences, I could have told him how impossible that would be. Once you let a song get away without a copyright you have lost it forever—sometimes even if you have a legitimate copyright, as in the case of my "Freight Train Blues."

Another interesting story I had from Uncle Jack was his account of how he and another old-timer were called to Kansas City, Missouri, to identify the body of a man killed there who was said to be Jesse James. The railroads had offered a big reward for Jesse and wanted to be sure they had the right man before they paid over the money. He said that they were kept around there for three or four days but were never allowed to see the corpse. That, together with the fact that the railroads never did pay out the reward, led Uncle Jack to conclude, as did many others at the time, that the man killed was not the real Jesse James. He was reasonably excited a few months after coming to Renfro Valley with the story of an old man showing up who claimed to be the original Jesse. He used to tell me "I shore wish I could talk to him. I'd know in a minute whether it was Jesse or not." Later when the old man came to Louisville, I paid Uncle Jack's expenses and sent him up to report on the claimant. When he got back, he said "No, it wasn't Jesse. I asked him some things Jesse woulda knowed about an' he didn't give me the right answers."

Uncle Jack is gone now—passed on several years ago—and with his passing went one of the real old-timers whose life was one long living adventure.

Another unusual character in Rockcastle County history I want to learn more about was Joe Cornell. It is only in recent years that I have learned his real name. When I was a boy he was always referred to as "Jokeneil," like it was all in one word. I remember meeting him on the road many times, always driving a cow in a two-wheeled cart or else riding her. I never saw him walking and I never saw him using any means of transportation not furnished by his faithful cow. He was said that at one time he had owned both a cow and a horse and when the time came that he did not feel he could support both he had chosen to keep the cow, butchering and eating the horse. He explained to curious neighbors that he had eaten horse meat in the German Army before coming to America and knew it was good. Also, that he had kept the cow instead of the horse because she could do anything the horse could do, and in addition, furnish him with milk. When he rode about the country, there was always a pint tin cup laid on his saddle; and when he felt the need of refreshment, he had only to dismount, back the cow off on the side of the road, and draw his rations.

In the early days of the Renfro Valley Bugle, we printed a picture of Joe and his cow, furnished, I believe, by Belle Jones of Wildie.

It was a little faded and dim but did reproduce fairly well. Who has a copy of that picture now, and who can tell me more about Joe Cornell—where he lived, when he died, where was he buried? Any information of any kind on him would be highly appreciated.

TO THE CITIZENS OF THE 4TH DISTRICT

As election day draws near, I would like to take this opportunity to thank the people of the 4th District for the kindness and encouragement you have graciously shown me in my campaign for Magistrate. I realize that there are those who have not yet been able to contact whose vote I solicit.

I wish to remind you that, if elected, I will do all within my power to see that ALL MONEY IS SPENT PROPERLY for the benefit of the people. I will work for the BETTERMENT OF ROADS and not limit my services to a select group.

On May 29, I urge you to cast your vote with Rockcastle County's future in mind

YOUR VOTE AND INFLUENCE WILL BE HIGHLY APPRECIATED

Kentucky Afield

By Hope Carleton
Dept. of Fish and Wildlife

Of all the varieties of fish in Kentucky, possibly no other species offers more varied fishing, or winds up a stringer in greater numbers than does the White bass.

Several weeks ago, while the whites were running on their spawning spree into the headwater areas of the major lakes, casters and minnow fishermen caught these gallant fighting fish in limit numbers. At times anglers using dual lures caught two whites at once.

One fisherman, casting dual do-jigs on the South Fork of the Cumberland River near Devil's Jump, caught ten white bass in five casts. Needless to say, he was at the right place at the right time.

Now that the runs are all but over, White bass have snookered anglers in stores for Kentucky fishermen fishing at night under the lights. Anglers using minnows will account for many excellent strings from the big lakes.

Night fishing has long been a popular method for taking these silver fighters. Though Luke Herrington saw the beginning of the white bass fishing story in Kentucky, as time has gone by more major lakes have been created and the Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources has stocked many of these impoundments with these excellent game fish.

Lake Cumberland, for example, is a top-rated impoundment for White bass fishing. At times the harvest has been so good that anglers, instead of saying, "I caught 60 White bass" (the daily and possession limit for White bass), have just referred to the number of pounds. "Well, they sure were hitting last night - I caught 112 pounds."

And at the same time the night fishing occurs for these fish, the "jumps" are also beginning. June fishing is practiced in the still, large open waters when schools of shad move to the surface. Packs of white bass like hungry wolves, thrash into the shad and gorge themselves.

Anglers who cast flashing spoons, spinners and plunker-and-fly combinations into these schools have some of the most exciting action of the season from the bull-dogging White bass.

Casting and minnow fishing are not all that the White bass afford there is always trolling - another productive way for taking these fine gamesters. Trolling starts before the runs occur and will often continue until late fall.

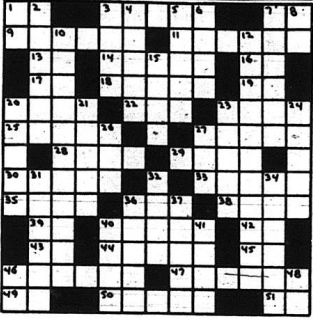

White bass are also taken in the tailwaters of many of the major lakes. The areas below Kentucky and Barkley Dams are possibly the hardest fished, but very productive.

When the mayfly hatch occurs in the sister lakes of Barkley and Kentucky, night fishermen rig several mayflies on a hook instead of minnows - and believe it or not - take limits consistently.

There are just some of the more common methods that take White bass in Kentucky.

The best seasons are just beginning for fishing at night, trolling and casting the jugs. For all sections (with conditions are right), the White bass is tops.

KET REVIEW

LEXINGTON, Ky.—State finals for the Kentucky Federation of Women's Clubs' Music Contest will be broadcast statewide at 7 p.m. EDT Tuesday, May 29 over Kentucky Educational Television (KET).

Finalists from the state's nine KFWC districts met at KET's Network Center for the state contest. From 125 total entries, winners were chosen in two categories, piano and other instruments.

Winning the piano finals was Lisa McKnight, 17, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hila Merchant, 2313 Ponder Place, Owensboro. Miss McKnight performed Robert Schumann's "Intermezzo."

Mary Julian Rapier, 14, won in the instrument category performing Handel's "Concerto in B Major" on the harp. Miss Rapier is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leon Rapier, 1208 Royal Ave., Louisville.

KFWC awarded $100 to the winners in each category and $75 to the runner-up. This was the 22nd year that the KFWC has sponsored the contest, and the second year that the finals have been taped for statewide broadcast by KET.

KFWC music chairman Mrs. Luther G. Hundley coordinated the finals, and will present the awards on the television program.

Lynn Gentry, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W.R. Gentry, 110 West Wind Trail, Bardonia, was the runner-up in the piano category. Sharon Gentry, daughter of Dr. and Mrs.

Harold Wortman, 430 S. 7th St., Williamsburg, was the runner-up in the instrument category, performing on a clarinet.

To the voters of Rockcastle County

Since announcing my candidacy for County Jailer, I have traveled over many parts of the county and have talked to many of you citizens and you have given me great encouragement - for this I am thankful.

We have discussed many of the problems of the county and especially the duties of County Jailer. Citizens, the Jailer's office is a responsible job and I promise, if you will elect me your jailer, to be on duty 24 hours a day, seven days a week. This I can do for I will have no other business interest. And, I will be the Jailer, with no one else involved whatsoever with the duties of your County Jail.

Parents, I will be responsible for the safe-keeping of many of our young people from time to time and Parents, these young people need a SOBER County Jail, one who can be responsible for their safe keeping at all times. If I am elected, you will have a SOBER County Jailer.

Since the election is drawing near, time will not permit me to see each voter personally, but I want each of you to know that I solicit your vote and help in my candidacy for Jailer.

I was born in Rockcastle County and I am a life-long Republican, a 32nd degree Mason and have lived among you all my life. This will be the last time that I will ever ask you to vote for me. Now, it is in the hands of you, the good people, to elect me YOUR JAILER.

Thank you and may God bless each one of you.

SS QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

Q. I'm a college student, and I get monthly social security checks. I work at both a part-time and a summer job and, because I earned $2,500 last year, I had to refund an overpayment to social security at the end of the year. How can I prevent this same thing from happening again this year?

A. If you know your earnings for this year will exceed $2,100, notify your social security office right away. If you know how much you will earn this year, your checks will be stopped only for the number of months required to make certain you are not overpaid for the year.

continued military involvement in Indochina. One bill would cut off all funds for hostile military activities in or off the shores of North Vietnam, South Vietnam, Laos, or Cambodia. This bill has already been approved within the Senate Foreign Relations Committee as an amendment to a pending authorization bill. It should come up for a vote in the full Senate after the Memorial Day recess, which concludes May 29.

I am also co-sponsoring a joint resolution declaring that Congress views the continued bombing of Cambodia as well as other American military actions in Indochina to be "contrary to the laws of the United States." The Gulf of Tonkin resolution, which is generally recognized as the basis of our military engagement in Vietnam, has since been repealed. I do not believe we have any legal authorization for further military activities in Indochina.

I might point out that the full House of Representatives and a Senate Appropriations subcommittee have already voted to bar the transfer of other funds to support the bombing in Cambodia.

I believe all of these legislative actions will increase pressure on the administration to finally get out of Indochina totally. If the administration does not get the message, Congress could very well legislate the end of our involvement.

TO THE VOTERS OF THE 5th DISTRICT

I want to thank all of the good people for their encouragement which has been given me in my bid for re-election. I have served you to the best of my ability. My record is an open book in the office of the County Court Clerk.

During my terms as Magistrate, I have always stood for what I thought was the best interests of the people of this good county. We have a nice central county high school, a new courthouse, improvements to our county hospital, a new library under way and a new clinic being started. All of these things I have worked for and voted for without raising your taxes one dollar. Some are paying more taxes but it is due to the rise in property assessment.

As to ambulance service, I am for helping work out something whereby our ambulance service, which we need so much, can continue.

Also during my terms in office, I have shown no partiality but have strived to work for all of my district. I have not done all the things that I would have liked to have done but with a limited amount of money, I have done my best.

I am taking part in no one else's election. I have always been ready to help someone in need. Also, I do not think anyone can say that I have not been loyal to the Republican Party.

Again, let me say thank you for what you have done for me in the past. When you go to the polls Thursday, cast your vote for me and I will appreciate it very much.

WAKE WATCHERS—State boating safety officials say that boaters are responsible for damage caused by their wakes. With the summer boating season approaching, enthusiasts are reminded that speeding boats are very dangerous to fishermen, swimmers and other boaters. Important precautions are wear of life preservers, proper loading and being familiar with safety regulations.

BOATING SAFETY EMPHASIZED

By David Kenamer
State News Bureau

FRANKFORT, Ky.—Kentucky is a water wonderland, but every year the state's lakes and streams become scenes of tragedies for those who ignore boating safety rules. There are 14,000 miles of navigable streams, a number second only to Alaska, and 306 lakes of more than 10 acres in Kentucky. The state's 90,000 registered boats, and the estimated 40,000 that come from surrounding states each year, indicate the size of the problem.

As a result of various kinds of boating mishaps, 36 people died on Kentucky's waterways last year.

According to the Division of Water Enforcement in the State Department of Transportation, there are a number of steps that each boater should follow in order to insure the safety of his boat and passengers.

David C. Collins, director of the division, and Ben Wright, senior officer, agree that the first step a boater should take is to obtain a copy of the "Kentucky Rules and Regulations" concerning boating. They can be obtained from the Division of Water Enforcement and from each of the state's county clerks.

These contain specifications concerning the proper maintenance and operation of boats. A boater should evaluate his craft and, if necessary bring it up to the state specifications before he puts it into the water.

A second step is to obtain a map of the waterways the boater intends to be using.

When the boat is ready to be put into the water another set of precautions should be observed. One of the most important is that a boat should never be overloaded.

Wright describes this as "one of our biggest problems." Collins said he remembers seeing a 12-foot boat with 10 people in it "I thought we would have to rescue them all," he said.

They also recommend that a boat not be overpowered. A motor too large for the boat can drag the back of the boat under water or even pull it apart.

Wright and Collins stress that "every boat is responsible for its own wake," that boaters should be careful about their speeds, and should at all times "respect the rights of others."

Above all, they emphasize the use of life preservers. Wright says, "The biggest cause of death in boating accidents is an insufficient number of life-saving devices."

Boating is growing very rapidly, so rapidly that Wright describes it as the "fastest growing sport in the United States" and predicts a 400 percent increase in Kentucky by 1980.

One of the most disturbing phenomena of this increase to the people concerned with boating safety is the new interest in canoeing. It's disturbing because, in the words of Wright, "We're expecting a lot of drownings." Several people have been reported killed in canoe accidents already this year.

Wright attributes his expectations to "young people who go canoeing without surveying the many hazards involved. They go to rivers with rapids and begin their canoeing experience at too rapid a pace."

He recommends that people interested in canoeing join clubs and consult with experienced canoeists before attempting this exciting but potentially dangerous sport.

All trips should be well-planned, the difficulty of the stream determined along with the exact locations of the most difficult parts, and instructions left with someone to initiate a search in case something should go wrong.

And above all, they say no one should attempt a whitewater canoe trip alone.

News And Views From Your Rockcastle Co. Library

By Alleyne Davis

Repairing leaky roofs, fixing doors that stick or squeak, repairing screens - this is the time of year to make repairs around your home.

Simple repairs can keep a plumbing system working very well according to Jackson Hand's Complete Book of Home Repairs and Maintenance. A faucet may leak when the washer wears out, the packing around the stem wears out or packs too hard or when the valve set wears out. The solutions to these problems and others concerning sink sprays and shower heads are also given in various home repair books at the Rockcastle County Public Library.

Many electrical repairs can be done by a husband or wife. Instructions on repairing and replacing a wall switch, re-playing a ceiling fixture, adding an electric outlet, and outdoor wiring can be found at the library.

Leaky roofs can cause damage to the interior of a house. Methods of stopping leaks vary with the type of roofing material used, but all are relatively simple. Curled composition shingles can be cemented and nailed down again with holes being filled with asphalt cement. On roll roofing, a mix of asphalt cement or tar mixed with fine sand will do the trick.

Detailed instructions on repairs for floors, walls, windows, foundation (including damp basements), masonry and other subjects of home care are available at the public library. Some of the books are America's Handyman Book by the Family Handyman Magazine; Super Handyman's Encyclopedia of Home Repair Hints by Al Carrell, The Unhandy Man's Guide to Home Repairs by Barbara O'Neill, Practical Home Repair for Women by Bruce Cassidy.

GOV FORD LEADS MARCH FOR INDUSTRY

Governor Ford earned the call of Kentucky with him last week as he led a 70 member contingent of government, business and financial representatives to California, seeking to entice west coast industry to the Bluegrass State.

The industry-hunting trip was co-sponsored by the Kentucky Chamber of Commerce and the Associated Industries of Kentucky. Meetings with California industrialists were held in both Los Angeles and San Francisco.

Ford said he and other state officials and businessmen made the trip to the West Coast "to tell what's good about Kentucky." He listed several items which were stressed in the conference-Kentucky's "liveability factor," viable work force, favorable tax climate, and an abundance of natural resources and trained workers.

Prior to the 3-day trip there had been indications that some California based firms are looking for expansion room. Ford said he expected the state has a good chance of attracting such facilities since some California industrialists seemed "most interested" in exploring the possibilities for locating home offices.

An advance party from the Department of Commerce arranged the final details for the meetings and advertisements were run in Los Angeles and San Francisco newspapers which Ford said provided "an excellent opportunity to generate interest in our state by these seeking new plant locations and corporate expansion."

Ford said there may be later trips to hunt for new industry.

PINKYEY MANAGEMENT-

Pinkye in beef cattle is one of the most frustrating and damaging problems of the beef cattle producer. While vaccinations against secondary infections, home remedies, and good management have all appeared to help the pinkeye problem at times often the "answer" to the problem one year may have little or no effect the next.

But, there are practices that should reduce the severity of the problem, such as:

A. Proper Vitamin A nutrition. Vitamin A does function to keep soft tissues and the eye in healthy condition. A deficiency of the vitamin can result in eye problems but there is no evidence that levels of Vitamin A over and above the requirement can "ward off" pinkeye.

Multiplicity of Dusts and Sprays Need Not Bewilder The Gardener

The number of sprays and dusts available for the control of garden insects and diseases seem endless. These often appear in such bewildering array on the market that the average home gardener may feel like throwing up his hands and leaving the job to the birds like they did in the good old days.

It would be a nice thing, indeed, if birds could accomplish this feat, but they can't. They must have some help, and to help simplify the problem of what materials to buy, H. Lee Durham, County Extension Agent for Agriculture, says only three kinds are actually needed to control most garden insects and the same number for most plant diseases.

Although sold under a variety of trade names, the main insect control materials are Sevin, malathion and methoxychlor and for plant diseases, maneb, zincb, and captan. When buying "medicines" for treating the ravages of insects or diseases, read the label and be sure you are getting these ingredients.

The trick in effective insect and plant disease control, says Durham, is in timely and correct application. To control diseases using fungicides, the best time to start is when plants show first symptoms of leaf spotting - then repeat at regular intervals. Insect control should be started as soon as there is evidence of plant injury.

In the application of dusts and sprays, be sure to cover the entire portion of the plant and, since some bugs never feed on the top side, give careful attention to the stem and undersides of leaves. Spray or dust every week or 10 days from the time the plant emerges until harvest time - often if there is a lot of rain.

Repeated application of control materials is necessary, not so much because rains may wash them off, but because vegetable plant is constantly putting forth new leaves, new fruit, or both. As a consequence, this new growth not hitherto covered by previous spraying or dustings must also be protected.

Reading the label to be sure what you are getting and for what purpose is, of course, very important. But just as important is this: some insecticides and fungicides leave a residue for several days and should not be applied just before harvest. The label will tell you how many days you should wait before you eat the vegetables. Some insecticides have a short breakdown period and may safely be eaten in from one to three days after being applied.

Another factor in good insect and disease control is good garden equipment. Cheap dusters or sprayers that cannot do the job efficiently hinder the effort and purchasing them is usually poor economy. Good equipment, properly handled and used according to the recommendations by the manufacturer, will last longer and, in the long run, pay off. For more specific information on pest control, stop by the County Extension Office in Mt. Vernon.

Research Aids Tobacco Growers

By David Kenamer
State News Bureau

LEXINGTON, Ky.—Tobacco, one of Kentucky's most important cash crops, is also the subject of one of the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture's most important research projects.

Dr. Glenn Collins is the project leader of a tobacco genetics and breeding program which, he says, emphasized "development of new and improved varieties of both burley and dark tobacco."

Collins says the major thrust of the tobacco research is in the area of "alteration of the chemical and genetic makeup of the tobacco plant." In the past six years, this research has resulted in the release of seven new varieties of tobacco. One of the project's goals is the development of a tobacco strain that is resistant to the five major diseases of tobacco common to Kentucky.

However, Collins says, "Our most significant contribution has been the development of breeding lines of tobacco which have a 10- to 20-fold reduction in nicotine, a compound of major interest in tobacco."

Collins says these new tobaccos have resulted from what he terms "the tremendous interest recently in the tobacco and health question."

One of the College of Agriculture's many teacher-researchers, Collins says that since it has been shown that nicotine levels can be changed, they are working on other compounds.

The purpose of this research, according to Collins, is to anticipate developments in the tobacco and health controversy. He says for example, "Should tobacco and health researchers say that nicotine is important, we will have an answer: a nicotine-free tobacco."

Collins, a native of Grant

County said that four areas of importance have been identified in tobacco genetics and an breeding research. They are: tobacco diseases, chemical alteration of the tobacco plant, development of uniform varieties, and basic or supporting research.

Uniform varieties, types of tobacco in which all plants grow to the same height, have the same shape, and in general the same handling characteristics, are very important, because they are necessary before mechanization of the tobacco growing process is possible.

Collins and others involved in the program are working on other topics which will be very useful to many areas of plant breeding.

One of these is known as "pollen culture," a process in which cross-pollination, the normal reproductive process of plants, is bypassed. Genetically pure plants can be produced in a matter of weeks without the production of seeds.

KENTUCKY GOLD—Dr. Glenn B. Collins, project leader of the tobacco genetics research program at the University of Kentucky Agricultural Experiment Station, examines a specimen of wild tobacco in one of the greenhouses on the UK campus. Researchers are looking into the transfer of desirable traits of wild tobacco plants, such as disease resistance, to the cultivated varieties.

In this way, the time required for producing a plant for breeding can be reduced from as many as four years to only nine months.

Another process being worked on in the tobacco project is called "cell fusion." Researchers often find wild species of tobacco that have certain characteristics, such as disease resistance, which they would like to transfer to cultivated varieties.

However, the wild and cultivated varieties may be too different to undergo normal cross-pollination. Cell fusion is a way of bypassing this process and cross-breeding varieties where it would otherwise be impossible.

Besides Collins, Dr. Paul D. Legg and Mr. C.C. Litton are also project leaders in the tobacco research project. There are four lab technicians, two Ph.D. candidates, and several undergraduate students also involved.

Several laboratories, greenhouses, and 25 acres of land are used to study tobacco. All tobacco produced is used for research.

FAIRVIEW

We, at the Fairview Baptist Church, are very thankful for the 114 persons who attended Sunday School here on Sunday, May 20th, and the large crowd for worship services. Hope you were able to attend services somewhere, too. We always receive a great blessing from being in the house of the Lord.

Mr. and Mrs. William Norris of Augusta, Ga. visited relatives here last week. They were en route to Chicago to visit their son William, Jr. and family. On Tuesday they visited Mrs. Hubert Chasteen and later accompanied by Mrs. Chasteen they visited Mr. and Mrs. Tip Reppert of Mt. Vernon, and Mrs. Bill Stephens also of Scaffold Cane. The Norris' were also guests of Mrs. Lucille Reppert and Belinda of Fairview and Mr. and Mrs. Curtis Reppert of Fairview and Mr. and Mrs. Curtis Reppert of Berea. Mr. and Mrs. Cletus Peters and Beverly and Mrs. Barbara Peters visited Mr. and Mrs. Ronnie Reppert Tuesday night. Mr. and Mrs. Johnny Barrett of Louisville were Sunday guests of Mrs. Thursa Blain of Fairview and Mr. and Mrs. Virgil Bullens and family of Scaffold Cane.

Mrs. Glarcia Lamb and Mrs. Marie Holbrook of Dayton, Ohio were week end guests of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Malone and other relatives here. They attended Sunday School and church at Fairview Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Elwood Treon and family of near Fairview and Mr. and Mrs. Larry Cox of Berea were Sunday guests of Mrs. Mona Treon.

Brenda and Bruce Treon were visitors of their grandmother, Mrs. Mona Treon, Saturday night.

George Cope of Berea visited his brother, Willie, and family Sunday.

Sunday dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Kidwell and family of Brodhead were Mr. and Mrs. Wade Graves and sons and a friend from Sand Springs.

Mr. and Mrs. Ronnie Reppert of Conway, Mr. and Mrs. Tip Reppert and family of Scaffold Cane and Mrs. Collie Scott of Berea.

Mrs. Thursa Blair was guest of her daughter, Mrs. Virgil Bullen, and family recently and attended revival services at the Macedonia Baptist Church.

Mr. and Mrs. Allen Williams and son of Covington were recent guests of Mrs. Thursa Blair.

Mr. and Mrs. Howard Lanter and daughter of Paris were overnight guests of Mrs. Della Bullens of Scaffold Cane Friday. They were joined on Saturday by Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Grand of Kirksville, Mr. and Mrs. Gib Lamb of Berea and Virgil Bullens of Scaffold Cane. While there, the men all did some work on Mrs. Bullens' front porch. The ladies prepared dinner and visited together.

Mrs. Barbara Peters visited at the home of Mrs. Hazel Dean in Berea Sunday. Also visiting Mrs. Dean were Mr. and Mrs. Garret Peters of Hamilton, Ohio.

Mr. and Mrs. Hubert Chasteen visited their sons, Wayne and Junior, and daughter, Joyce, and family in Berea Sunday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Alexander visited Mr. and Mrs. Ballard Owens at Johnetta Sunday.

Mrs. Barbara Ann Peters visited her grandmother, Mrs. Liddie Reppert, at Mt. Vernon Monday evening.

Our deepest sympathy is extended to the family of Ballard Owens of Johnetta, who passed away Monday night. May God bless and comfort his loved ones in their sorrow.

Please remember church and Sunday School. It seems like the world is full of trouble, heartaches and sorrows but God still loves and cares for us.

Tombstone Junction Open Daily; Nashville Stars to Appear

Tombstone Junction Scenic Railroad and Western Town has opened its gates to the 1973 Spring and Summer season. Their seven-day-a-week business will begin Saturday, May 26.

As part of the 1973 season, Tombstone Junction will continue to offer its unusual brand of western style entertainment. Realistic western shootouts will be staged many times each day, and new and different gunfights are being introduced this year. Thousands of people from throughout the United States have traditionally enjoyed the on-stage music which is presented in the town's Red Garter Saloon. That music will continue in the current season, with several shows to be presented daily. Louis Duncan and Bill Ball, already known for their outstanding musical performances the past two years, will head the list of entertainers at the Red Garter Saloon. In addition, an outstanding steel guitar artist from Nashville, Tennessee, and female vocalist have been added to the roster of musicians performing. Special Saturday night music shows at the Red Garter will also be held weekly beginning May 26.

The colorful old steam locomotive at Tombstone Junction will also continue to make its trips this season. Winding through Daniel Boone National Forest, "Old 77" makes several trips each day.

Famous Nashville Entertainers To Appear Weekly:

Major among new attractions at Tombstone Junction will be the addition of special Country and Western Music shows each Sunday throughout the summer. Nationally known entertainers of Nashville fame will head the list of star studded personalities. Kicking off the special Sunday shows will be the incomparable Dottie West, on May 27. The following week, June 3, Jim Ed Brown will appear personally at Tombstone Junction. Ensuing weeks will star such entertainers as the Wilburn Brothers, Kitty Wells, Jack Green and Jeannie Seely, The Stoneman's, Jay Lee Webb and Peggy Sue, Tex Ritter, Bill Anderson, Ernest Tubbs, Charlie Rich, Stonewall Jackson and many others.

Nashville stars will conduct live stage shows at an elaborate new Opry House which has been added to Tombstone Junction this year. The large theatre can be viewed from all points in the town and represents a substantial new addition to the community.

When explaining the events of the summer, Tombstone Junction owners pointed out that there will be no additional charge for added entertainment at the Junction. Gate admission prices of $1.00 and $1.50 include all activities available in the town, with train rides on the steam locomotive being the only optional price feature. Admittance to a host of shops and museums are also available to the public at no additional cost.

Last year Tombstone Junction added a 1,200 car, black-topped parking area to accommodate the thousands of visitors. The town, located approximately one mile from Cumberland Falls State Park, is open from 9:30 A.M. to 7:30 P.M. daily.

YOU & THE DRAFT

As part of the phasing down of the "military draft" to a standby status, "reduction in force (RIF)" notices are being sent to 24 Selective Service employees in Kentucky by the Selective Service Center in Atlanta, Ga.

Nationwide, it has become necessary to reorganize the Selective Service System to account for its standby status. The three-phase reorganization will result in "transfer and consolidation of functions in approximately 100 counties in the state, with personnel reductions occurring as the reorganization plan is fully implemented.

Many of those scheduled to receive a RIF notice have been able to find employment with other federal and non-federal agencies. Others have elected to take an early retirement and thus take advantage of an indicated increase in annuity triggered by the Consumer Price Index.

In the standby concept it is necessary to provide for the young men having an obligation under the draft law. Kentucky has been most fortunate in securing more than 250 volunteer registrars to perform registration of those in counties where draft board offices have been or will be closed in the near future.

Registrars only register. After registration has been completed, the remaining administrative functions will be taken care of by personnel in the respective area offices. Classification action will be made by the local board members meeting the counties having jurisdiction over the individual's address.

JOB FOR A VET—Walter Moore, 23, left his legs in Viet Nam. After being turned down for re-employment by his previous employer, Moore returned to the Governor's Alliance Jobs for Veterans Program for help. As a result of a unique cooperative agreement between the Jobs for Veterans Program and the Jefferson County Fiscal Court, Moore is now training for a permanent position as a police radio dispatcher with the Jefferson County Police Department.

VET GETS JOB AS DISPATCHER

By David Wilson
DES Staff Writer

FRANKFORT, Ky.—Walter Moore left his legs in Vietnam. After recovering from the trauma of wounds, surgery and personal readjustment, the 23-year-old veteran returned home to pick up where he left off.

Moore worked for General Electric in Louisville before he was drafted into the Army. Upon release from the Veterans' Hospital in Louisville, he went back to GE to resume work.

He was told, however, that because he had "waited too long" and because of prescribed rehiring regulations, GE could not take him back.

"After I found out that I couldn't get back on at GE," said Moore, "I decided to do some checking around on my own. I went to several local businesses, but I didn't have any luck."

A few days later, Moore contacted Rick Netherton, local handicapped veterans' representative for the Governor's Alliance—Jobs for Veterans Program. Netherton found him a job as a police radio dispatcher for the Jefferson County Police Department.

"Mr. Netherton made inquiries," said Moore. "He got in touch with Mr. Sam Jones, director of the Jefferson County Personnel Department, and they found this job for me."

Moore is now receiving on-the-job training. After training, he expects to be placed on permanent job status.

Moore found the job as a result of his own initiative and a cooperative relationship that exists between the Jefferson County Fiscal Court and the Governor's Alliance—Jobs for Veterans Program.

"We decided over a month ago," said Jones, "that hiring disabled and handicapped veterans was something we were going to emphasize. We probably have 600-1000 job applications, but we couldn't have found better employees than the three disabled vets that have been working with us for the past six weeks."

Moore works at the Jefferson County Police Headquarters; Terry Uelch, 20, is working as a mail clerk in the fiscal court; and Henry

TO THE VOTERS OF THE 4TH DISTRICT:

As many of you know, I am a family man, a father of four children, all of which are in school. My interest in the roads of our district is as great as any of yours. I believe that our roads should be observed and maintained more regularly and when the need for improvements arise, immediate attention should be devoted to this need.

I am also a businessman. I am engaged in a business in Mt. Vernon and I operate a farm in our district. Although these operations need time, I promise you that I will not let them interfere with my duties as magistrate.

I know the needs of our district and will try my utmost to attend to them. I hope all of you agree with the way I believe the 4th District needs to be attended to and will help me in carrying out these needs by voting for me May 29.

Your Support Will Be

MEMORIAL DAY-1973

State & Federal Aid To Flood Victims

FRANKFORT, Ky.—The wheels of government have moved swiftly since May 11 when Gov. Wendell Ford's request for a disaster declaration in Western Kentucky received federal confirmation. Representatives of the eight federal agencies and their Kentucky counterparts met

May 15 in Paducah and the next day started various assistance measures in motion for those affected by the mass flooding. Farmers suffered the greatest losses, although the entire population of the five counties in the disaster area has felt some of the impact. For some farmers, whose situation was unstable prior to 1972, it may mark the end, but for most, enough assistance is available to get them back into production. Many of the same lands covered by flood waters held crops unharvested due to last year's heavy Fall rains.

Those whose loss included homes, furnishings and personal property will be eligible for loans from the Small Business Administration. In these cases, the first $5,000 loss can be forgiven, making it essentially an outright grant. On all loans over $5,000 the interest rate is only one percent. The loans can be extended over 30 years depending upon the person's ability to pay.

The Farmers Home Administration supplements this with loans for damage to "anything used in pursuit of agriculture," as well as operating loans. These too, are based on ability to pay, but can run for no more than five years and carry five percent interest rates.

The land itself has been badly damaged by the flooding and the emergency funding measures of the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service will be utilized to aid in the process of recovery. Problems from erosion, slips, delays in plowing and seeding and the additional work that will be needed to repair the land for production are covered by the ASCS. Farmers outline the measures necessary to produce a crop and can secure 80 percent of the cost.

For both the farmer and non-farmer suffering home damage, temporary housing will be available while repair or replacement of their damaged dwellings is underway. The U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development will perform this service, first utilizing any federal housing available. This temporary housing is provided for 12 months on a rent-free basis.

Persons whose damage is only a side-affect of the flood will also be eligible for help. Emergency unemployment insurance compensation will be provided for those who have been laid off as a result of the business loss in the flooded area.

This compensation is available to anyone affected, the self-employed as well as those working in an area where unemployment insurance coverage is not normally paid. This measure will also be available to the few farmers who, because of previous losses and setbacks, are left literally bankrupt as a result of the current disaster.

The Department of Economic Security will handle these requests through its Employment Service, as well as those for emergency food for those left in indigent circumstances as a result of the disaster.

Flood waters continue to cover much of the bottomland in the five counties—McCracken, Carlisle, Fulton, Hickman and Ballard. The Corps of Engineers has announced it will soon move to pump flood waters from 8,500 acres near Reelfoot Lake where waters cannot drain.

Finally, for the individual, there is the tax deduction. Those suffering losses have the option of filing an amended 1972 return to include the damage, or taking the loss deduction on their 1973 return.

To coordinate all of this assistance, Kentucky Civil Defense and other state agencies will be manning two registration centers, one in Fulton at the Civic Center and one in Paducah at the National Guard Armory. All persons suffering any damage from the flooding will register at these centers and then be referred to the proper agency for the relief to which they are entitled.

City and County governments also face problems with damages to streets, roads and bridges. This assistance, channeled through Kentucky Civil Defense, will bring in other agencies such as the U.S. Bureau of Public Roads, the Kentucky Bureau of Highways and the U.S. Corps of Engineers.

But these actions will not begin until the individual problems of citizens have been resolved, says Bob McFerrin regional representative of the Office of Emergency Preparedness who is coordinating the disaster operations.

Public damage assessments should begin within a week.

ELECT T. J. PARSONS SHERIFF

DEAR FRIENDS:

During these last few weeks Joe Mink, George Jones, and I have talked with most of you about our interest in next Tuesday's election. I know that we have missed some of you but we have tried and we do desire your support. To you that we have talked with, I want to thank you for giving us such a kind reception and your good encouragement.

Friends, my position and platform in this race has been simple and easy to understand. The one main objective is to provide ROCKCASTLE COUNTY with the best potential for law enforcement throughout the County.

I believe that my proposal to you will fulfill this obligation, because:

- (1) Once elected, I will have a representative of the sheriff's office living in the Calloway-Livingston area, the Brodhead-Gum Sulphur area, and the Wildie-Mt. Vernon area.
- (2) We are three men that are pledged to be available and on call at any time that we are needed.
- (3) We are pledged to live up to the responsibility of seeing that you, the Citizens, have a chance to live in peace without the fear of constant vandalism, housebreaking, or other acts that threaten the security of your everyday life.

Before closing, I would like to comment on this question of NAMING DEPUTIES. As you know, the law does not require, nor does it prohibit a candidate from naming deputies in advance. That is strictly a privilege of decision by the Candidate. My decision to do so was based on my belief that you THE VOTERS have a right to know who the representatives of the Sheriff's Office will be. I think that you want to know.

In closing, I wish to urge every eligible voter to cast his or her ballot for the candidates that you feel will be available and serve you best.

If you elect me, you will elect a Sheriff that will maintain an ACTIVE Sheriff's Department.

Opportunity Of A Lifetime

By Lynn Pearson
DES Staff Writer

FRANKFORT, Ky.—Wanda Leppard is finally free.

After years of struggle, she has broken loose from a cyclic experience that can permanently deaden a person's hope, incentive and motivation—welfare.

Ms. Leppard, a 23-year-old Louisville mother, escaped the welfare rut with help from the Work Incentive Program (WIN), a federally funded program administered by the Department of Economic Security. WIN helps people receiving Aid to Families with Dependent Children (AFDC) find jobs.

She completed her nurses training at Jefferson Community College this month. "It is wonderful for the WIN program," Ms. Leppard said, "I'd still be working 80 hours a week, clearing about $60 and I'd be caught in that vicious little circle forever and ever.

Under the WIN program, Ms. Leppard received tuition, books, travel and child care expenses plus an extra $30 a month above her regular AFDC money grant.

During her two-year academic career, Ms. Leppard maintained a 3.7 overall grade point average. This, coupled with outstanding scores on the National League of Nursing Examination, landed her the opportunity of a lifetime—the opportunity to work with famed Houston heart surgeon Dr. Michael E. DeBakey.

She will begin working May 28 in the medical-surgical intensive care unit at the Methodist Hospital in Houston.

"It was funny the way I got the job," she said. "I originally went to Houston to interview with the M.D. Anderson

Cancer Research Hospital. She called Methodist Hospital to see if an interview could be arranged. Since M.D. Anderson had already referred Ms. Leppard's credentials, the interview was quickly set up.

"I was offered the job and I took it," she said. Ms. Leppard will work in the medical-surgical intensive care unit until she feels confident enough to transfer to the Brown and Fonder Building where all of Dr. DeBakey's patients are hospitalized.

Her starting salary will be $875 a month with an automatic raise in six weeks. She plans to get her cardio-vascular nursing specialty training within the next two years.

According to Ms. Leppard, the WIN program is the "greatest thing ever to come up."

"Most people I know have a great deal of pride and self-esteem and like me, they don't like accepting AFDC money," she continued. "I knew I had a head on my shoulders, but I didn't know where to go or how to go about getting help."

Ms. Leppard believes that most welfare families want to get out of the rut they're in. "We're stuck in the ruts our parents were in—it's all many of us have ever known," she said. "You're kicked in the face and once you're down, you stay down."

At the age of 13, she was deserted by her father, forcibly separated from her mother and tom from the six sisters she'd practically reared. She moved from one foster home to the next, and in her words, "how many people do you know who are willing to take a well-developed 13-year-old into their homes?"

At 14, she was in reform school. "They couldn't think what else to do with me," she said. Her aunt and uncle, who live in Louisville, battled for her release and won. She married at 17. When she was three months pregnant, her husband, like her father, deserted her.

SUCCESS STORY—Wanda Leppard, a Louisville mother, recently joining Aid to Families with Dependent Children, recently completed her registered nurse's training at Jefferson Community College under the Work Incentive Program. Ms. Leppard will begin work May 28 in the Medical-Surgical Intensive Care Unit of Houston's Methodist Hospital. Eventually, she will be transferred to the Fonder & Brown Building to work exclusively with Dr. Michael DeBakey's heart patients.

"I started working at a restaurant 80 hours a week," she said. "I took a week off to have Michael (who is now four years old) and went back to work. Later, I quit—I just couldn't stand it. I almost never saw my son."

After about six months on AFDC, Ms. Leppard got a suggestion to check into the WIN program from her social worker, Jan Hatfield. She took tests at the employment office and made it through the entrance exam at Jefferson Community College.

"I really can't say enough about the WIN program," Ms. Leppard said. "It's given me a chance to be a human-being again. I'm not saying it's easy—you have to work hard. You just have to decide how much you want to respect yourself."

Job placement figures in Louisville ranged from 875 under the WIN I program (February, 1969-June, 1972).

Court Considers Criminal Justice

By Jeanne Beckett
State News Bureau

FRANKFORT, Ky.—Criminal justice standards, ranging from arrest function to the verdict and sentencing, may be studied in Kentucky.

Such a study could be conducted in the Commonwealth at no cost to the state, according to retired U.S. Supreme Court Justice Tom C. Clark. Clark, who is a member of a committee which is attempting to implement a set of criminal justice standards adopted three years ago by the American Bar Association, described the ABA proposals at a recent Frankfort press conference.

The ABA has prepared 17 general standards resulting from five years of study which comprise the thinking of criminal lawyers on what is needed to assure defendants a fair trial.

Three states, Florida, Arizona and Texas, have adopted the standards in their entirety, while in 14 others portions of the standards have been made a part of criminal court operations, Justice Clark said.

The retired justice cited the omnibus hearing as one of the recommendations. This provides that at the time of arraignment, the prosecution presents all of its evidence to both the person charged and the defense attorney. Where this has been practiced 82 percent of the defendants have pleaded guilty in comparison to 50 percent prior to the use of the omnibus hearing, Clark said. "What happens, he explained, is that where evidence is overwhelmingly against the accused, he will accept his guilt more readily knowing what he faces. This increase in guilty pleas has eliminated the trial process in the additional 32 percent of the cases.

JUSTICES COMPARE NOTES—Hon. Tom C. Clark, retired U.S. Supreme Court justice, discusses the American Bar Association criminal standards with Chief Justice John S. Palmore of the Kentucky Court of Appeals. Justice Clark spent Friday with the Kentucky court members reviewing the 17 general standards prepared by the ABA, which cover the entire criminal justice system from the police function through all court actions up to the verdict and sentence. (Photo by Steve Mitchell)

Should Kentucky's Court of Appeals approve a study of its criminal justice standards, the ABA would fund up to $3,000 of any cost involved and federal matching funds would be available, Justice Clark explained.

In Kansas such a study was conducted by lawyers and completed in three months, according to Chief Justice John S. Palmore of the Kentucky Court of Appeals. In New York, students conducted a study which was also finished in three months.

Justice Palmore said 45 states have taken some steps toward analysis of criminal justice practices.

Justice Clark, on his visit to Kentucky, had high praise for the state's highest court. "The Kentucky Court of Appeals hands down more opinions per judge than any other court in the land," the Federal jurist said.

He also expressed implicit faith in the jury system and in the U.S. Supreme Court. Justice Clark said he felt that attempts by Presidents to secure their wishes through Supreme Court appointments have failed completely. "I have known five presidents, four of whom have told me of their disappointment in results from their appointments," the jurist said. He cited, as examples, the capital punishment and abortion decisions, both of which differed from the wishes of President Nixon.

GOV. FORD ANNOUNCES ANTI-CRIME AWARDS

FRANKFORT, Ky.—Gov. Wendell H. Ford has announced a $125,000 in Kentucky Crime Commission grants to support six criminal justice programs across the state.

In a major effort to inform the public of the link between crime and other social problems, the Department of Mental Health will receive $66,192 for a program of drug and alcohol education. The grant will be used to purchase films, books, pamphlets and other reference and loan materials to be used in school programs and in public education seminars throughout the state. In previous years, demand for these educational materials has increased to that frequently large volume requests had to be answered in only token amounts, small requests went unfilled and many professionals had no access to any materials for distribution. In 1968, the Kentucky Crime Commission began responding to this need, and has since awarded over $70,000 for public drug and alcohol abuse education programs.

In recognition of the need for graduate programs in the administration of justice, the KOC will award $35,000 to the University of Louisville to develop a program to train students for careers as practitioners and teachers in various areas of criminal justice administration. The specific objective of the six-month development project is to develop curriculum for a master's degree program in the administration of justice, using an approach that would allow students to select a plan suited to their individual career needs from several options. Actual operation of the program should begin in the fall of 1974.

The city of Henderson will receive $18,726 for a program of improved technology in crime prevention. This award will provide Henderson's police department with a crime prevention and training officer, and will supply the office with all necessary demonstration materials and films, and equipment such as microfilm units and evidence collection kits.

With a $3,813 grant, Todd County will continue operation of a newly consolidated office of police records to serve all local units of government within the county. The Todd County experiment, the first such program funded in a rural area of the state, will operate in conjunction with the statewide police communications network to provide police officers in the field with immediate information on crimes at the local, state, and national levels.

The city of Maysville will establish a police photographic center to be shared with the Mason County police as part of its effort for improved crime technology with the aid of a $684 grant.

Floyd Day, WIN supervisor in the Louisville employment office, said that about 77 percent of the WIN I graduates were placed in Louisville area jobs.

"We're running about the same on WIN II," he added. Under the WIN I program, which began in 1968, the emphasis was on job training. In July, 1972, Congress established the WIN II program, shifting emphasis to job placement.

"If a girl with Wanda's potential came into our office now, we'd probably try to place her immediately as a nurse aide," said Day. "We couldn't give her the kind of training she got under WIN I. The most she could have been in the nursing field would be a licensed vocational nurse, which is not anywhere near a registered nurse in pay or status."

By Ed W. Hancock
Attorney General

A very angry young man called on our Consumer Hotline recently and told us that his wife had signed a contract for $100 worth of baby pictures after a salesman had called while he was at work.

In the past, such a contract would have to be honored at the expense of the consumer. Now, however, under the new "three-day cooling-off period" law, the consumer may rescind, in writing, within three days, any contract amounting to $25.00 or more made by a salesman who contacted him at his home without being invited to do so.

This relieves the consumer from most, but not all, responsibilities under the contract. The law also provides that, upon cancellation of a contract on which there has been a down payment, the seller is entitled to keep, at a cancellation fee, 5 percent of the cash price if that amount
