Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Lynn Stokes and husband and I had decided that this year we would have a tremendous garden and raise enough corn, beans, potatoes, tomatoes, to do our family of seven for several months. We industriously put out the small garden at our house and got out about half of a much larger one that we rented on shares. So, what happens? Well, first of all it fronts two or three times the latter part of May, then stays cold for about a week, then rains at least once a day until at present, weeds are standing gallantly where the three rows of beans we planted should have been, the corn has to fight for its life and the potatoes will probably be all vine. We even went so far as to buy an additional chest-type deep freezer to supplement the old second-hand upright that we had for many years and, to date, there are five gallon of strawberries, nine messes of fish and 150 pounds of beef and altogether in both of them, and the prospect of the two freezers loaded with the produce of our gains looks dimmer all the time.

State Policemen Remember Murder

FRANKFORT, Ky. — Many an example of clever detective work has come to light during preparations by state police for their 25th anniversary celebration which will take place here on June 29.

One concerned a Falmouth woman who murdered four persons and very negligently got away with a fifth killing that of her infant son, before an alert county judge and a state police detective with intuition intervened.

With the frequency of those unexplained "crib deaths" in which babies sometimes suffocate without apparent reason, the boy's death might otherwise have escaped officials' notice when it was first reported as asphyxiation.

State Police Captain Edwin E. Miller, now commander of the narcotics unit at Frankfort, remembered the case this way:

After the child's death was reported, Miller and Pendleton County Judge Jack Dickenson got together to discuss it. Both men were agreed on one thing. The case needed looking into.

Although there was no "hard" evidence to support a suspicion of foul play, both men were thinking back to an earlier time—in 1957—when the same woman lost three other children under mysterious circumstances.

That time it was a fire, and a man who lived in the same building also died.

Arson investigators had questioned the woman off and on for nearly a year after the fire, but finally dropped the case against her for lack of evidence.

This time, however, it was to be different.

Call her, or call it a hunch, or say it's a hunch, but once we brought her to Frankfort for a lie detector test, she broke down and confessed to smothering her son with a pillow because her husband had left her."

But Miller wasn't satisfied. There still was the matter of those other deaths in the fire, and the thought of what might have really happened that day.

horn fly infestation. These flies can be controlled with chemicals, says the UK Specialist.

The horse fly and deer fly are semiaquatic and breed in wet or swampy areas. There is not much which can be done to control their breeding grounds, although draining or filling swampy areas will help reduce fly numbers. The dairymen who have the most problems with these flies have their cows grazing in or near such areas. Two ways to provide relief are to keep the cattle away from these areas and to apply chemical controls.

Wendlandt points out that chemicals are effective in controlling flies. However, because of low insecticide tolerance levels dairymen cannot afford to guess when using chemicals.

Your County Extension Agent has the new 1973 insecticide recommendations for dairy cattle. They provide an excellent guide for proper control of flies and safe use of the chemicals.

Wendlandt emphasizes that it is very important to read the

Flies Are A Summer Nuisance On Dairy Farms

Flies are one of the biggest nuisances to a dairy farmer. These creatures are annoying and harmful to cattle and irritating to the farm operator. They are also responsible for the contamination of milking equipment and milk which reduces milk quality.

Knowing a few facts about where flies reproduce will make it easier for you to control flies on your farm. That is pointed out by Ron Wendlandt, Extension Dairy Specialist at the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture.

Wendlandt says stable flies and house flies lay eggs in rotting materials. Stable flies especially prefer manure piles and built up litter. House flies will lay eggs in any rotting material such as spilled feed under feed troughs, rotting silage, manure piles, wet straw or garbage.

Proper sanitation can be a big help in controlling these flies. Wendlandt says no amount of chemicals will take the place of well-cleaned surroundings in controlling stable flies and house flies. On farms where these flies are a serious problem, the dairymen should look for the breeding areas and then attempt to do a better job of cleaning up this summer. It may also be necessary to use fly control chemicals.

Face flies and horn flies reproduce in fresh droppings and are usually a problem of cows on pasture. They should not be as much of a problem for cows in confined housing. Face flies and horn flies are hard to control because it is impossible to eliminate their breeding grounds. In addition, many dairymen do not see these flies because they will leave the cattle when they enter the barn.

Wendlandt says you should observe cows on a clear day when they are in the pasture to see the extent of face fly and

GOOD IDEA: hire an expert.

BETTER IDEA: a no-frost refrigerator-freezer.

Chances are an ice expert could get your defrosting done fast. But with a new electric refrigerator-freezer no frost need form in the first place—eliminating a real chore. You can also make fewer trips to the store, stock up on freezer bargains for better dining at less cost.

A modern big-capacity refrigerator-freezer takes no more floor space than your old unit.

Operation Made History

Kidney Victim Rebounds

Despite the gloomy weather in the Lehigh Valley lately, the days have been bright for the Clarence Gilford family of 19 Catalpa Drive, Macungie R.2.

That is because 9-year-old Sandra Gilford has a healthy, contagious smile that yields no trace of the troubles of 15 months ago.

In February, 1972, little Sandra became the lightest person — at 27 pounds — to ever receive a transplanted kidney in the Philadelphia area according to a spokesman at St. Christopher's Hospital for Children in that city.

She had suffered a kidney disease for some time and had undergone dialysis treatment prior to the surgery.

The operation was a first from the Lehigh Valley point of view as well. It is the only time one member of a local family has donated a kidney to another family member, according to the Lehigh Valley Kidney Foundation.

The contributor was Sandra's father, who is also in good health following the transplant.

Sandra now weighs 45 pounds. She has virtually no restrictions, according to her parents.

"She was able to swim last summer," Gilford recalls. Clarence and Stella Gilford call the recovery of their daughter "remarkable and gratifying."

Gilford said he decided to be the donor after advice from doctors.

"They told us if the kidney came from just any cadaver or donor, the chance for complete success would be 50 percent or less. With a relative donating, the chances would be much better," Gilford said.

The father noted his daughter's and his blood types were compatible for the surgery. So they went ahead with the surgery.

The Gilfords said they feel the recovery of their daughter should be encouraging to others who may face finding a solution to a kidney disease.

DOING FINE — Nine-year-old Sandra Gilford enjoys a relaxing moment with her parents, Clarence and Stella, in the family's Macungie R.2 home. Sandra has had a "grafting" recovery following a kidney transplant 15 months ago. Her father was the donor.

YOU AND THE DRAFT
By Col. Taylor L. Davidson

Some draft registrants born prior to 1953 will very shortly be receiving a "good news" letter from their draft board.

The letter will tell them they have been reclassified I-H (a holding classification) and that under current "Selective Service" directives they are now eligible for assignment to a reduced priority selection group.

The breakdown into priority selection groups by year of birth is as follows:

Those born in 1952 will be assigned to the second; in 1951, the third; in 1950, the fourth; in 1949, the fifth; and in 1948, the sixth. Those born in 1947 (and not yet 26 years of age) will be placed in the seventh.

A young man in a reduced priority selection group has only a very little possibility of being considered for induction in the future, except in the event of a national emergency.

U. E. To Show Tobacco, Forage and Grain Research At June 28 Field Day — Plant tobacco with no-illage? Agronomy researchers at the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture are studying the possibilities.

"We're not yet ready to recommend this practice, but we're trying it out on some of our plots," says J. K. Evans, Extension Agronomist at U.K. Evans points out that no-illage planting is just one of many new crop production practices which farmers can check into on June 28. That's the date of the Farmers Research Information Day at U.K.'s Coldstream - Spindletop - Maine Chance research farms north of Lexington.

Ten different tours, including five agronomy tours, will be available to those attending the event. "Visitors can see everything we have to show or they can concentrate on the subjects they are most interested in," Evans points out.

The plots of no-ill tobacco and herbicide setter will be shown at the field day. With no-illage a contact herbicide is used to kill existing plant growth before setting and a residual herbicide is used to control weeds after setting. A modified tobacco setter is used for planting. It cuts a slit in the soil, sets the plant and closes up the slit.

New tobacco varieties, including plots of Maryland tobacco, will also be shown on the tobacco tour. Other stops will show tobacco plants grown from pollen grains, various fertilizer rates, and safe use of systemic insecticides.

Two of the field day tours will deal with forages. A mechanical pasture renovator developed by the University of Kentucky will be demonstrated, and plots renovated by the new machine will be shown. Visitors will also have a chance to learn the latest information of alfalfa weevil control.

A three-year-old stand of Kenstar red clover will be shown on one of the forage tours. This is a new variety which will soon be released.

Visitors can also view plots of new alfalfa and grass varieties. The sod webworm is a serious menace to home lawns in Kentucky. Several different strains of bluegrass which appear to have some resistance to the sod webworm will be shown at the field day.

Will herbicide residues from no-ill corn and soybeans affect the next crop? The results of research work on this question will be presented at the field day. Visitors can also see an underground collection system which checks the amount of water and nitrogen movement through the soil.

Research work on the use of herbicides in no-ill and conventional corn and soybean production will be shown at the field day. Plots of soybeans planted in a "stale" seed bed will be on display. With this system, the ground is plowed and weed seeds are allowed to germinate. Then the ground is sprayed and planted without further tillage. On the livestock tours, there will be presentations on holding down protein costs for beef and dairy cattle and swine.

The possibility of feeding Opaque-2 corn, which has about 25 percent more protein than regular corn, will be explored.

Visitors can see Fin-cross sheep which bear litters of up to six to eight lambs. There will be information on heat detection in cattle, liquid manure handling, beef sire selection, grass tetany, and forage testing.

The University's horse program will be a featured part of the program. There will be information on horse nutrition, health care, parasite control, and on the teaching of riding techniques.

Field day activities will get underway at 9:00 A.M. The field day will be the first of two such events conducted by the U.K. College of Agriculture this summer. Another Farmers Research Information Day will be held July 19 at the West Kentucky Research and Extension Center at Princeton.

A MESSAGE FROM JUDGE CARTER

This is a message of thanks to the voters that made such a gallant, glorious and honest fight for me during the campaign.

Hold your head up, I am proud of you and you should be proud, too. You were not bought, sold or coerced by any organization or individual as to how to vote.

So I say hold your head up and be proud, proud of your vote, knowing you voted as a God-fearing, religious and honorable citizen.

Hold your head up, we didn't win, but we are the victors as free citizens, as the Constitution sets out by the people, for the people and for the good of all the people.

I don't mean to take anything from the winner, but I want to remind him he did not get a vote of confidence by the electorate.

A vote of confidence MUST BE a majority of all the voters, and more than 2100 voters voted AGAINST him, so he fell far short of a vote of confidence.

Although I'll never be a candidate for any office again, I still believe in free voting without intimidation by any organization or individual.

Keep your head up, be proud.

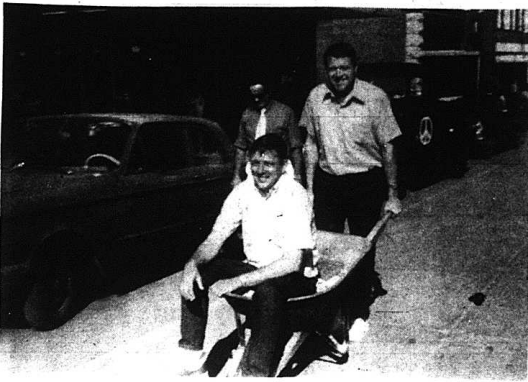

Your Friend, Chas. C. Carter

I want to take this opportunity to thank all my friends for their floral gifts, cards, prayers, phone calls and visits during my month-long stay in the hospital. I couldn't begin to thank you all personally for your kindness. I'm getting along well now, and ask you to keep up your prayers for a full and complete recovery. God's blessings to each and everyone.

IN MEMORY of Mr. and Mrs. Harrison Griffin:
Your gentle face and patient smile, with sadness we recall.

You had a kindly word for each, and died beloved by all. The voice is mute and still the heart, that loved us well and true.

Oh, bitter was the trial to part, from ones so good as you. You are not forgotten, loved ones, nor will you ever be. As long as life and memory last, we will remember thee. We miss you now, our hearts are sore, as time goes by we miss you more. Your loving smile, your gentle face, no one can fill your vacant place.

Sadly missed by daughters, Mary Roberts and Vallie Burton and families

IN MEMORY of my Dad Mr. Charles C. DeBord on Father's Day:

My Dad was a humble man; Beloved by one and all. Everyone who knew my Dad; Fond memories can recall. He lived a very quiet life. Content with what he had. I never heard him once complain. This man was my Dad. He gave me many things in life. That money can never buy. Gifts of honesty and truth; I treasure very high. He taught me to be thankful. With whatever things we had. Most of all I'm thankful I had this man for my Dad. Without Dad our lives are lonely; Now that he has gone on. But someday we'll meet him: At a great reunion. There'll never be any sorrow; And we'll never be alone. Because we'll all gather with Jesus; In that great heavenly throne.

Cook Explains No-Fault Insurance Stand - Senator Marlow Cook has explained that his approach to a no-fault automobile insurance program would keep the benefits of a no-fault system but would not force an unjust uniform system on all states without regard to the differences between those states. Senator Cook told a Kentucky trial lawyers' seminar in Louisville that existing proposals for no-fault insurance would take away an individual's right to sue for certain damages from an auto accident and that this was another reason he objected to the broadest no-fault plans. The Senator has introduced his own bill to solve these problems. That measure leaves it up to the states to set up their own no-fault coverage system, with only minimal federal guidelines.

IN MEMORY of our beloved Father, Swann E. Bullock, who passed away June 25, 1966.

He was not a famous man. Just lived a simple life Uncluttered by dissension, Devoid of hate and strife. History won't record his name Nor list his worthy deeds; Only God and us remember How he filled so many needs. He left no mansions here below, He sought no vast empires, But labored long at honest toil And never seemed to tire. And tho' he wasn't wealthy, He always seemed to care. In times of need, his neighbors knew He'd find a way to share. He was everything a man should be Patient, kind and gentle, Unselfish, thoughtful and sincere And somewhat sentimental. His gifts to us were cherished things That can't be bought with gold. Such gifts as honesty and truth Are treasures we now hold. He had no worldly craving For the life that others had, We're proud to say this humble man Was our own devoted Dad.

JOHN NICHOLS'

Frankfort Watchline

As we've said before, we don't know where Wendell Ford is going, except it's probably not back to his insurance business in Owensboro after one term as governor.

Apparently, it's not to the U. S. Senate either, at least judging from the remarks of Lt. Gov. Julian Carroll, who indicated last week the Ford forces—presumably combined with those of state Democratic chairman J. R. Miller—are trying to push him into the Senate race against his will.

We're guessing that if there is a Ford game plan, it involves the ultimate goal of becoming vice president of these United States. Many observers will feel our governor is too much of a lightweight for that post, but we're talking about what might be on his nimble political mind.

Now, winning a U. S. Senate seat is one way of achieving this, seemingly. But, projecting to 1976, Ford would have to resign his governor's job to do that and then resign his Senate post to try for Veep. Seemingly, too, that would be a little fast, a little too unpalatable for the electorate.

All right, let's for the sake of the game scratch the Senate as we must scratch another term of governor under Kentucky's constitution.

Then, where, as some politicians have asked us, does that leave Ford if he wants to continue a political career? The key may be in his election as head of the Democratic governor's caucus which will enable Ford to have a direct tie in with Congress and sundry national matters.

It also gives him the prestige and ability to wheel and deal with some 30 governors of his party, and governors often have a lot to say in picking the state presidential and even presidential candidates.

That's only scratching the surface and could be only the first step upwards for Ford—with possibly nothing less than the chairmanship of the national Democratic party his final goal before striving for higher elective office.

Remember, Chairman Robert Strauss is a close friend of Ford and has called him fit for any high office. Some don't think Strauss is keen to stay on after the Watergate and other matters are cleared up. Would Strauss be happy for Ford to succeed him?

This guesswork of ours is, of course, vague. It's not pipe in by self-serving politicians or from aides. It depends on timing and the luck of the draw. But it's not illogical.

Red Herrings, Anyone?—Rarely have we watched so many red herrings flipping around as when the Legislative Research Commission rehashed House Minority Leader Rufus DeMarcus' attempt to arrange a special legislative investigation of that state moving contract with friendly Jim Creech, formerly of the Ford campaign team.

Speaker Norbert Blume's crack that lawmakers won't stand for thievery by the press still has us spinning. What did he mean? What did that have to do with the Creech investigation?

There is also DeMarcus' remark that "there has been no indication that the administration" is intending to act. Well, with four people in effect fired, subpoenas out on Creech's records and the slight benefit of the doubt for the moment anyhow.

Then there's the dismissal of the DeMarcus' move by Speaker Pro Tem Billy Paxton as "political crap." Maybe so.

KENTUCKY BANKING SCHOOL DELEGATES AT UK—These participants were among those attending the annual Kentucky School of Banking at the University of Kentucky, June 3-8. They are (from left) Raddy Lee, Morgantown; Paul McNew and Stephen Owens, both of Mt. Vernon; William Dixon, Lafayette, Tennessee; and Jerry Gibson, Lancaster. The school is sponsored by the Kentucky Bankers Association, the University and the Kentucky Department of Banking.

but what does that have to do with a possible brewing scandal and waste of taxpayers' money?

And we must also comment on DeMarcus' holier-than-thou attitude that his effort was purely non-political. My goodness, Harold! And we thought all along that you were a politician.

Bureaucratic Rites—Tons of paperwork is so much a part of state government that we just take it for granted.

It's refreshing to hear a state official poke a little fun at the practice and at himself for being a part of paper pollution.

State Health Commissioner Dr. William McElwain did it during this month's Health Board meeting here last week. He was talking about the need for a report or study or memorandum on a matter under discussion and then broke into a grin about something one of his fellow board members had said.

"I know that when I leave this veil of tears," he laughed, "she thinks that I ought to be buried in pieces of paper instead of dirt."
