all, and damage by the pest goes unchecked: Be sure you are using the correct material for the pest concerned. Another common mistake is improper application of a pesticide. For instance, herbicide drift on windy days to susceptible crops such as tomatoes or grapes (2,4-D), or volatilization of a herbicide on a hot day, may cause damage to susceptible plants. The application of any pesticide on a food plant closer to harvest than is recommended may render the produce unfit for consumption. The combination of incompatible pesticides may also result in plant damage. Always read the label and follow directions. Most pesticides deteriorate with age. Some become ineffective, but others become toxic to plants. In either case, injury to the plant may result. Try to keep pesticides relatively fresh. Don't buy too far ahead.

CONSUMER COMMENTS

Summer is the season when many printed materials' salesmen take advantage of sympathy, principles, or ideals in order to prey upon consumers.

Kentucky has a law designed to help consumers in dealing with such materials.

In order to sell printed material, the salesman must register with the local chamber of commerce or the local sheriff's office. Any orders or contracts for printed material are void and unenforceable, at the option of the consumer, if the salesman soliciting the order fails to comply with the registration law.

If such a salesman contacts you, we suggest you check with your local chamber of commerce or sheriff's office to see if he's registered. If the sales promotion appears to be "false, misleading, or deceptive," contact the Attorney General's Office on the Consumer Hotline.

Supt. Parsons Asks For Audit of School Records

Rockcastle County Schools Superintendent Charles R. Parsons has requested an immediate audit of school records by the Division of Finance.

In a prepared statement Monday, Supt. Parsons said, "In order to further prove to the citizens of Rockcastle County that the recent accusations made against our schools are wrong and unjust, I have written a letter to Dr. Lyman Glinker, State Superintendent, Frankfurt, and asked him to send an auditor from the Division of Finance to audit the school records immediately. I have asked that a report of the audit be released to the public by way of the newspaper and radio station."

Mr. Parsons further said, "I want to prove that the school money is properly spent and properly accounted for. The audit should be ready in two weeks."

Transportation To Cost More

The Rockcastle County Board of Education received only one bid on gasoline this year. Atlantic Richfield Company (ARCO) submitted the only bid. Other companies declined their bids due to limited supplies.

According to Supt. Charles Parsons, gasoline for school buses will cost 9¢ more on the gallon than last year and will be available in limited quantities. In fact, in a letter submitted with their bid, ARCO stipulated that sales of gasoline to the Board will be limited to the exact number of gallons sold to the Board in comparable calendar months in 1972.

In other words, the Board cannot purchase any more gallons of gasoline at the bid price, this year than they purchased last year; and it is calculated that the extra 9¢ on the gallon will cost the Board of Education an additional $8,000 during the 1973-74 fiscal year.

Other bids on tires, oil, lubricants and supplies also came in somewhat higher than last year, and it is calculated that it is estimated that it will cost the school system $15,000 more to transport the same number of children this year as it did last year.

FOOTBALL PRACTICE BEGINS JULY 23

Varsity football practice will begin Monday, July 23 at Mt. Vernon Elementary School, according to Glenn Polly, Head Coach.

The fee will be $25 per month and there will be a $5 registration fee.

DON'T FORGET THE HORSE SHOW JULY 20TH

$2,564,000 Spent For Food In Rockcastle Co.

With Rockcastle County residents earning more and spending more, the local economy has been moving into higher gear.

Figures just released show that per family spending for goods and services were at a relatively high level in the past year.

The details are contained in the annual market study made by the Standard Rate and Data Service. It indicates just how much was spent locally by the average family for food, cars, furniture, clothing, drugs and other items.

Comparable data is given for families in other parts of the country.

In Rockcastle County, it is shown, the largest part of the consumer dollar went for food.

Expenditures in local grocery stores, supermarkets, delicatessens, bakeries, butcher shops, and other stores selling food for home consumption added up to $2,564,000, an increase over the previous year's $2,458,000.

In addition to this, a sizeable amount was spent in restaurants, lunch rooms and other places where food and drink are consumed on the premises.

In effect, about 21 cents out of every dollar spent in local retail stores went for take-home food. It was more than in many localities.

If the total bill for food bought for home consumption was divided equally among the local population, it would average out to $662 per family.

The SRDS report also shows how much was spent in the year by local consumers for various other kinds of articles. Their expenditures for automotive equipment, including cars, motorcycles, boats and the like, amounted to $600,000, as against the prior year's $712,000.

In stores selling general merchandise, their outlays reached $1,095,000. The former total was $989,000.

Purchases of wearing apparel, including all kinds of clothing, shoes and hats, came to $287,000, compared with the 1971 figure of $256,000.

In stores selling furniture and other home furnishings, they spent $171,000. The previous total was $151,000. Most retail lines ended the year on the upswing but a considerable part of the increase in their gross was due to inflation.

DON'T FORGET RABIES CLINICS

The time scheduled for each of the above Rabies Clinics will be 8:00 - 8:00 p.m., and the cost will be $1.50 per animal.

These clinics are being scheduled throughout the county for your convenience. Be sure to have your dog or cat vaccinated and protect against rabies!

HOMECOMING AT BRINDLE RIDGE

There will be a Homecoming at Brindle Ridge Baptist Church on Sunday, July 29. There will be an all-day meeting and dinner on the ground, and all former members of the congregation are also invited to attend.

Cox Appointed To Study Penal Code Revisions

State Public Defender Anthony M. Wilhoit has announced the appointment of Jerry J. Cox of Mt. Vernon to a committee to study the proposed Penal Code Revisions enacted by the last General Assembly.

The committee will study the proposed revisions from a public defender's or defense attorney's viewpoint and report its findings to the Interim Judiciary Committee before September 4, 1973.

The revisions will become law on July 1, 1974, unless further changes are proposed to the 1974 General Assembly.

The Public Defender system was created by the last General Assembly and represents people in criminal cases who are too poor to hire their own lawyers. About two hundred attorneys in all parts of the state participate in the program.

Others appointed to the committee are public defenders: Gordon M. Johnson, Bowling Green; John Simpson, Catlettsburg; C. Huston Ebert, Newport; Marvin Prince, Benton; Tex Fitzgerald, Louisville; Edward A. Mays, Jr., Mt. Sterling.

Betsy Carlolfts was crowned Miss Jackson County RECC 1973 at the annual meeting of the Rural Electric Coop last week. Betsy is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Carlos Carlolfts of Livingston and a 1973 graduate of Rockcastle County High School.

The Rockcastle County High School ROCK-A-DETTES recently attended camp at Cumberland College in Lebanon, Tennessee. There they received the Most Improved Corps Trophy out of eleven corps attending the camp from Kentucky, Tennessee, and Georgia. Rock-A-Dette Regina Taylor received the leadership award. Members of the Rock-A-Dette team are, from left to right: Sammie Spires, Tarina Morris, Karen Hoskins; back row, left to right: Lisa Randolph, Lisa Holbrook, Regina Taylor, and Kathy Bussell. Not present when the picture was taken was Teresa Lawrence.

The State Department of Highways is currently repairing Town Hill Road, just north of Mt. Vernon. The state, according to Evans Hilton, district highway engineer, plans to widen the road where feasible and apply a bituminous surface for one mile. Approximately 30 families live on the road.

Frankfort Watchline

In order to get plenty of mileage out of the Kentucky Democrats' difficulties over required reporting on their recent fund-raising campaign, let's take just one more look at them.

There's a factor or two here that may have escaped many of the party's critics...

First, in a period in which political organizations find themselves most doggedly watched where their finances are concerned, the Kentucky Democrats went overboard to comply with the new reporting law. At least, that's what we hear from some of the loyalists.

They claim that their only obligation under law was to report the 200-thousand-dollar dollars collected for the repayment of the campaign loan for Senator Walter Huddleston. In trying to be as open as possible, they pulled the top off a Pandora's box and now are faced with seeking sources of money they probably didn't have to report at all.

It seems an impossible job. Could it be more impossible, however, than that miraculous raising of 850 thousand dollars last spring in the first place? If one can be done, maybe the other can be accomplished.

As a Frankfort-based Democrat explains it, here's how much of that money for which there appears to be little hope of accounting came in. Each county chairman set up a brace of activities calculated to fill his campaign quota - door-to-door solicitation, direct mail, special activities.

It's easy to see that for all but the direct mail drive, you've got a pretty good handle on the sources of the cash. But how can there be accounting for $850,000 thousand that comes in during the last week of a campaign, not mailed to the chairman, but sent directly to the Frankfort headquarters or to Louisville bank?

That, we're told, is what happened that last week. Another point worth contemplation: If, as some have hinted, a chunk of the Democrats' recently-gathered wealth came from vendors doing business with state government and kicking back a portion of their fees, why in the world would we be getting the cash but so foolish as to include it in their grand campaign collection total? Why mention it for any reason?

To that, though, we think, would be dumb. Right? We are in no position to say that kickbacks and illegally-gotten funds don't exist. There are those who say they do, and there's much to be learned, yet, about those charges.

What we do say is that, no more than those who have run other times, the 1973 version of the Kentucky Democrat isn't suddenly stupid.

We have a political party riding a crest of power, of burgeoning national image for its leader. It's a party which has moved patronage from the Capitol Building to party headquarters and absorbed the cost... a party which has paid off a massive campaign debt... a party which has funded a new headquarters along with the quarter-million dollar cost of its first year's operation. All this costs money.

What members of that party are saying is that over the years, both political parties in Kentucky have raised money - lots of it. "Suddenly, we have been made to account for every penny," they say, "while others of both parties in Kentucky were not made to do this. Not only will we never know where millions of dollars in political campaign funds came from in other years, we'll never be told where those funds went."

As one member of Wendell Ford's administration tells us, "Maybe the best thing that's come of this controversy is to set Kentuckians wondering about what did others, Democrats and Republicans, do with the millions of dollars they've raised in recent years?"

Is it a fair question? Literature Litter? - The Bluegrass State will be reaping, we're sure, the benefits of last week's Kentucky heritage gala in the nation's capitol for many, many years.

But a major complaint of thousands of visitors and, we think, a legitimate complaint of those staging the Kentucky folk festival was that there was no literature available to tell those interested more about the Commonwealth.

Was it an oversight by the Kentucky Department of Public Information. No, it was not.

Picture this: The National Park Service, responsible for the hundreds of sights and points of interest in Washington, has available tons of pamphlets for tourists at each location. But in a tragic overreaction to the problem of litter in the Capitol, the Parks Service forbade the distribution of literature to visitors to the Folklife Festival.

Postcards, instead, were handed out so that those wanting more information about Kentucky can write to Frankfort and get it.

Where are the blackberries? They're scarce this year or, have they been getting that way for several years, and this is the first time I have noticed it because it's the first time in a long while I have wanted to pick any. When I got growing around to where used to be plenty of blackberry vines, I find that they are being bulldozed up for more grazing for cows or something. Of course, when we had our farm, we did away with quite a few vines but at that time we weren't too interested in picking berries and besides, at that time, I had some bad memories of picking them with mother when I was younger. You see, blackberries in Woodford County get ready earlier than they do here so, every Fourth of July, when other kids were out whooping it up with firecrackers and such, mother and I were out in the woods picking berries. Now, mind you, it wasn't the manual labor involved so much but the fact that mother had some strange ideas about how you dress to pick berries. First of all, you know how hot the Fourth almost always is, well there would be in a long-sleeved coat to keep from getting scratched, a hat, to keep from getting too much sun, long pants, of course, with boots, to keep from getting snake-bit and, oh yes, I can't forget the rags soaked in coal oil we had to wear around our wrists and ankles to ward off chiggers - who always managed to survive the smell and creep on you anyway. Believe me, it wasn't exactly a fun day but the blackberry jam and jelly always tasted pretty good in the winter. Can't you see most of the kids today, especially mine, going meekly out in a blackberry patch and picking berries all day long? I know, mine would appeal to the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children and if all else failed, would flatly refuse. Of course, mother would have had the answer to this with a few well-placed licks but then insurrection in a way against parents was practically unheard of so the comparison is not really applicable. Anyway, I do wish I could find a place to pick a few berries because the current cries of a food shortage and me with five children are combining to put more gray hairs than I really have use for in my hair...

And speaking of the expedited food shortage - I'll have to express the opinion that President Nixon really flubbed his dib when he put price controls on suppliers of poultry, meat, vegetables, etc. without also controlling the prices they have to pay for items essential to their production - such as feed to fatten their animals and raise their chickens. Let's face it - I'll be the first to admit that I am not one of the world's great economist but you don't have to be to realize that there is something bad wrong with governmental policymaking when several basic food items get in short supply in this country. I don't know the (Cont. to 8)

Mrs. Danny Gayle Golden

Oliver - Golden

The First Baptist Church of Mt. Sterling was the scene of the wedding of Vicki Lynn Oliver and Danny Gayle Golden, at 2:00 P.M. July 14, 1973. Miss Oliver is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. O. L. Oliver, Jr., and Mr. Golden is the son of Mrs. Robert Estes and Vernon Golden, all of Mt. Sterling.

A program of wedding music was presented by Miss Lou Ann Stull, organist. Mrs. Albert E. Griffin and John Normal Oliver, brother of the bride, sang "Theme from Love Story." Mrs. Griffin also sang "Because" and "The Lord's Prayer."

The Reverend Albert E. Griffin, Lexington, cousin of the bride, officiated at the double ring ceremony. The altar was decorated with brass candelabra interspersed with greenery and white gladiolus, baskets of white gladiolus, and urns of jade leaves. The couple knelt for prayer on a double white and brass prie dieu.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a lovely gown designed with Satapeau and Guipure French lace. The new high neckline, bishop sleeves, lace bodice and Empire A-line silhouette added to the charm of the deep hem of Guipure lace that encircled the skirt and attached chapel train. Her veil was a profile of lace and pearl motifs and held the bridal veil of English illusion to complete the elegant picture. She carried a colonial bouquet of white carnations, rose pom-poms, and gypsophila.

Mrs. Richard T. Monteth, Jr. of Fairfax, Virginia, was Matron of Honor for her cousin, Miss Dianne Stull, Owingsville, was bridesmaid. They wore identical floor length gowns of pink poly-fiber tulle. The high necklines, long-sleeved sleeves, soft-floppy collars were enhanced with self ruffles and tiny narrow cherry velvet ribbon. Their headpieces were of floor length pink tulle veiling attached to pale pink flowers and their

News and Views From Rockcastle Co. Library

July was named most literally after Julius Caesar. The name was first applied to the month in 44 B.C., a few months after Caesar's assassination.

As the first full month of summer, July has the Miss Universe Pageant and more than its share of tourists, music and folk festivals and national lodge meetings. The three special months observed in July for some reason are all concerned with food. If the special weeks have any common note, it is safety - farm safety and boating safety - and the hope of safety prompts another observation on behalf of the captive nations. This is the month when, some years ago, the U.S. made the dollar bill smaller. Contrariwise, it is the anniversary of the end of New York's famous five-cent fare after almost half a century.

For scientists, July offers the anniversary of the issuance of the first U.S. patent. For political thinkers, it was the month of the first women's rights convention and the establishment of the end of New York's famous five-cent fare after almost half a century. Medicare went into effect and, no connection, P. T. Barnum was born. Finally, as a comfort to those who don't believe in taking things too seriously, July has among its monuments the wonderful flight of Wrong Way Corrigan, who insisted even after he reached Ireland that he really intended to fly to California.

Also, July is National Barbecue Month; and on this note we will leave the pages of history and go to the Rockcastle County Public Library to the pages of the following books for our own family get-togethers and cook-outs.

Rockcastle Recollections

© John Lair

Mrs. Christine Girt of Roselle, N.J., formerly Christine Gustafson of Rockcastle County, tells of a visit paid her family living in the old log house long known as the "Gus Staverson Place," at the head of Little Renfro. The visitors were two women from California who had been inmates of the old house in earlier days. Apparently they were members of the Adams family and legend has it that this old house, one of the county's oldest, was built by Devil Bill Adams for one of his sons, who occupied it for many years and raised a large family there.

Mrs. Girt, who was only a child at the time of the visit, remembers many of the stories they told as they roamed through the house and grounds, reliving old experiences. She remembers in particular one incident they related of Civil War days. They told her how their father had hidden his best horse in a particularly safe place before an expected raid by Southern soldiers. They said all their valuables were wrapped and packed and hidden away in and under the barn and the livestock hidden out to the best advantage but none so carefully as their father's favorite horse. Near the house was an old fruit cellar which, by the way, was still there a few years ago when the old house, regretfully, was torn down. This cellar, partly above and partly under the ground was entered by a door only three or four feet high. The horse, of course, could not be made to get on his knees and crawl through such a doorway, but Mr. Adams seems to have been a very resourceful man. With the aid of his slaves, he was able to back the animal up near the opening and get him to lie down. They then seized his hind legs and succeeded in dragging him, backwards, down the cellar passage. Naturally, nobody expected to find a horse in a cellar like that so he was not discovered by the raiders. The disappointed soldiers mounted Mr. Adams on a fence rail and rode him up and down the long front porch, which ran the length of the house, in an effort to make him tell where all his livestock was hidden but never succeeded in getting the information they were after.

At the time of this raid by the Rebel forces, and for some time afterwards, many residents of Mt. Vernon and vicinity had their choice horses hidden in different passages of Great Saltpeper Cave, where their owners took time-about in sleeping in the cave to guard them. Since the cave had an entrance on each side of the mountain and could be traversed from one end to the other by horse, it afforded a "back door" by which to escape if the raiders tried to enter and confiscate the horses.

Jones Durham used to tell me that near his home on Horse Lick was several cliffs and thickets in which people used to hide out their horses, which seemed to be the main objective of the raiders. He told me of a long, high ridge, terminating in a rocky point a considerable distance above the ground, at its base, which was the scene of a very painful accident to one of his family's slaves. It was that this man had fallen from this particular ridge because it furnished a very good look-out from which to watch for the soldiers. On one occasion, he caught the attention of a bunch of foragers who put their horses on the steep climb up the sides of the ridge and went in pursuit of him. His only way of escape lay out the ridge and its termination on a high cliff. Rather than fall into the hands of his pursuers, who probably would not have hurt him after all, he elected to take the plunge off the cliff and hide in the underbrush below. After nightfall, he managed to drag himself into a vacant cabin which stood nearby and up onto an old table which had been left there by the previous occupants. In the jump, he had injured his back so severely that he felt sure it was broken and remained stretched out on the tabletop for three days and nights before attempting to make his way back home.

The hanging at Hackney Corners, though often darkly hinted at, has never been fully told, or at least I have never been able to settle on any one of the scattering accounts of it which have come to my attention. Quite possibly it was one of the bloodiest acts of supposed reprisal committed within the confines of the county during the whole of the conflict. Maybe calling attention to it in this column will move somebody who knows all the particulars to give them to me for the preparation of a correct version in our forthcoming history. The oldest account I have seen of the facts leading up to this tragedy are furnished by a letter written by an old native of the county, J.K. McClary. In this letter, he states that in 1862, he was conducting a small country store at Lyncamp, on the old Wilderness Road, about 11 miles north of Barbourville. One evening, a party of 16 men, including Uncle George Thompson, Captain Harve King, Campbell Dameron and other former acquaintances of Mr. McClary's slipped into the store and informed him that they were being pursued by a group of Rebel soldiers and were nearly famished, having had nothing at all to eat for three days.

They explained that recently a body of Rebel soldiers had been shot from ambush in their locality and a blanket order had been issued by the Rebel commander to hang or shoot every able-bodied man living in that community. This group declared their innocence of any connection with the bushwhacking but felt sure they were being followed and would be killed if overtaken.

Due to repeated foraging in the vicinity of McClary's store, he was forced to tell them that there was no food of any kind immediately available. He told them to get back into the woods and hide for the time being, but that he would meet them at midnight in a designated spot and bring them anything in the way of food he had been able to stir up in the meantime.

In the home of the woman where he was boarding, he was able to rustle up a small amount of corn meal and Irish potatoes, which she prepared in an appealing manner as possible, and that night he and one of her slaves carried it to the fugitives at the appointed time and place.

A few days later, Uncle George Thompson came to him to report that all the others in the party had been shot and killed at Cumberland Ford, now Pineville, Kentucky.

About a month after this occurred the hanging at Hackney Corners, a small community surrounding Hackney's Tavern stand about two miles north of Livingston, Kentucky, took place. A party of six Confederate soldiers and sympathizers were captured by a group of Federal guerrillas and summarily hanged. According to tradition, they were all hanged from a single limb of a big tree that still stands today. Only one or two of the group were actually Rebel soldiers, home on furlough. Included in the remainder of the group was a fifteen-year-old boy who pitifully begged for his life, but to no avail. It was never claimed that any of the six victims had been in any way involved in the killing of the fifteen Union sympathizers at Pineville - they were simply hanged to help even up the score.

I understand that the name of the community was immediately changed from Hackney Corners to a name I do not know and that the residents of the community would never talk about the incident and that many of the old timers still will not discuss it. For the sake of the truthful recording of this deplorable bit of the history of Rockcastle County, I hope that someone who knows more about the affair, on good authority, will come forward and give us further details. We promise not to make known the name of our informant if he does not want to be quoted. The outline of the story is probably correct, in bare outline, but we need to know more about it while someone is yet living who can tell us the particulars. We would like to know the names of more of the people who were involved, especially the little boy whose tearful plea to be allowed to live was so ruthlessly turned down. We would also like to know where some of the victims of any of the shootings are buried and if they have any relatives yet living in the county. Also, we would like to know what name Hackney Corners now goes by.

Nation's Most Important 13-1/2 Acres of Corn

In a year when a very wet and late planting season has cast a shadow of uncertainty over potential yields and production, and extra heavy demand is biting into an already tight supply, 13-1/2 acres of the 1973 corn crop are assuming a major spot in U.S. Agriculture.

It's not that these acres will relieve the strain, but rather what they will help indicate about total 1973 corn production. Starting in late July, about 250 trained enumerators of the U.S.D.A.'s Statistical Reporting Service will enter corn fields in the 19 States producing about 96 percent of the Nation's crop. After walking a prescribed distance into the randomly selected fields, the enumerators will mark off two rows, each 15 feet long. In all, some 6,400 of these sample plots totaling 13-1/2 acres will be visited monthly throughout the growing season. About 280 of these plots are in Kentucky, and 14 trained workers will be in the fields. Charles Van Lahr, Jr., in the Federal State Statistician's office in Louisville, is heading up this objective field work locally. A training school for field enumerators is being held at Elizabethton, on July 18 and 19.

Plants in the plots are counted, ears measured, maturity stage checked and other data recorded. The indications from this objective yield measurement program and thousands of farmers' responses to mail questionnaires about how their corn crop is doing are the basis for State and National yield and production estimates. The first results will show up in the August Crop Production Report.

The enumerator will harvest several ears in each field when they are mature for indication of gross yield. After the farmer harvests the field, the enumerator gleans all missed ears and kernels in a small plot to adjust for harvest.

Rockcastle County 4-Hers attending electric classes during their stay at J. M. made in most communities throughout the country so that young men may obtain guidance and be able to register without the need for travelling to the local board administrative sites. With no inducements, few problems are expected to arise to the registrants which would require visits to the local board administrative sites.

Mr. Peppone explained that young men have three legal responsibilities: 1. They must register at age 18; 2. They must notify their local Selective Service boards when they change addresses; and 3. They must carry their draft cards with them until their liability expires, which for most men today is age 26. Selective Service must maintain an available manpower pool in the event a national emergency prompts Congress to authorize the resumption of inductions into the armed forces.

Registration with Selective Service takes less than five minutes," Mr. Peppone remarked. "The penalties under the law for failure to register are such that to avoid registration is a risk which all parents and young men alike should think about," he stated. Approximately two million young men reach age 18 each year.

For you long-suffering subscribers to the Signal - relief is in sight. For the past two months we have been trying to get everything in order to install a new addressing system. This has delayed us somewhat with keeping our records current and we apologize. The way things stand now, we should be using the new system in about another month and hopefully this will enable us to get your paper to you more quickly and efficiently and to some of you at all.

Even though we have one of the finest country music shows in the country right here in our county in the form of Kenfren Valley let me tell you about another show nearby that one of our local people will be involved in this week. At Tombsstone Junction, near Cumberland Falls, Stonewall Jackson will be appearing this week end. Playing lead guitar for Mr. Jackson will be none other than Clyde "Butch" Phillips, son of "CW" "Wally" Phillips of this county. Mr. Phillips, who was raised in the Red Hill section, has also played for Danz Dudley, Dana Trask and Wayne Kemp and in addition plays on the Grand Ole Opry in Nashville every week end that his band is in town.

Selective Service News

Selective Service Director Byron V. Peppone today reminded the nation's young men that even though there is no draft, they still are required to register with Selective Service at the time of their 18th birthday.

"I am concerned that many of our young men may fail to register when they reach 18 years of age because they are unaware of their responsibilities to Selective Service," Mr. Peppone said. "It would be unfortunate if a young man should break the law because the proper information has not been made available to him," he added.

Failure to register is a violation of the law, Mr. Peppone emphasized, and could result in prosecution by the Department of Justice.

The President's authority to induct men into the service expired on July 1. The Administration does not plan to seek an extension of this authority, and the Defense Department is relying on volunteer enlistments to supply military manpower.

"A very important point that has been missed in most reporting on the cessation of inductions is the fact that the Military Selective Service Act remains in force," Mr. Peppone said. "The Act states that all young men have a continuing legal obligation to register with Selective Service at age 18. They have 60 days to do this, beginning 30 days before their 18th birthday. Men not registering within that period may be considered as violators."

"I would urge the parents and friends of all young men who reach 18 to remind them of their legal responsibility to register with Selective Service," Mr. Peppone said. "They should register at the nearest local board or with a registrar for the Selective Service System who resides in the young man's community."

"The Selective Service System currently is undergoing a reorganization as it moves into a standby system of operation. The number of local board administrative sites is being reduced to 925 nationwide from a total of 2,700 which were in existence in December, 1972. Wide-spread appointments of volunteer registrars and advisors to registrants are being

Home Freezing of Fruits and Vegetables (Free publication available at Extension Office)

A new freezing circular, prepared by foods specialists at the University of Kentucky, is available at your County Extension Office.

The attractive new circular gives step-by-step directions for freezing 22 fruits and 29 vegetables. Special picture directions are given for strawberries, peaches, green beans, and broccoli. Also included is a list of recommended varieties to freeze, and general guidelines on freezing temperatures, containers, sealing and labeling, record keeping and storage time. There seems to be an increased interest in the home preservation of foods this year. Freezing is an excellent way to preserve most fresh fruits and vegetables. If you use good methods and correct temperatures, your garden produce will keep most of its food value, natural color, flavor and texture. Freezing gives families an opportunity to have fresh vegetables and fruits the year around. By careful planning the homemaker can prepare foods ahead of time and freeze them for busy days, emergencies, unexpected guests and special occasions.

It should be kept in mind that the quality of the food taken out of the freezer is no better than the product before being frozen. Although it is quicker to freeze foods than to can them, good methods and packaging materials must be used to obtain high quality frozen products.

Here are points to remember when freezing:

1. Foods should be quick frozen very soon after they are packed.
2. Pack only so many containers at a time as can be frozen in the home freezer in 24 hours.
3. Place packages next to freezing plates or coils, but spread out so freezing air can move between them.
4. Have freezer temperature at least 0°F or preferably -10° to -15°F.
5. If power for a home freezer is interrupted or if the freezer fails to operate, do not open the cabinets. Food in a loaded cabinet will usually stay frozen for two days, even in summer. If repairs cannot be made in 1-2 days, use dry ice to keep the food frozen or remove frozen food to a commercial locker plant.
6. Fruits and vegetables are best if processed and placed in the freezing compartment within six hours after they are gathered.
7. Vegetables must be scalded or blanched to halt the enzyme action that would otherwise cause loss of food value, flavor, color, and texture. Other useful how-to-it publications are "Jellies, Jams, Preserves, and Marmalades," and "Home Canning of Fruits and Vegetables" are available also. Your County Extension Office is located at the Courthouse, Mt. Vernon.

DON'T MIS-USE PESTICIDES

Every year we receive many samples of crops with injuries caused by negligent use of herbicides and other pesticides. There are undoubtedly many cases we never hear of. The most common cases are those in which a neighbor borrows a sprayer which has been contaminated with 2,4-D or some such material, or he actually uses the borrowed sprayer to spray with 2,4-D and then returns it contaminated. Another common mistake is to apply too much of a pesticide. Sometimes the damage is only minimal, but in other cases, the plant may be killed or ruined. Be sure and follow directions exactly.

Many times the wrong material is used for a particular
