News and Views from your Rockcastle County Library

Did you see the picture of our new library building in last week's Signal?

We are elated over our new library building. Have you been to the site of our new building? Have you seen all the ample room we will have? Have you seen the parking space, no railroads, no busy streets to cross, no parking meters to feed? Have you seen the pretty scenery around the new library building?

We wish to thank Judge Carter and the Fiscal Court members for making this possible.

We also thank the Mayor and City Council of Mt. Vernon for the nice desk, chair and typewriter—which were purchased with money they gave to the library.

When the time comes, we will need help in moving all the books we now have, around 21,000. The library and the bookmobile together checked out 100,557 books to the people of Rockcastle County last year. Wouldn't you say the library was used and appreciated by the people of Rockcastle County?

New books received from the Kentucky Dept. of Libraries (Government Publications).

Working Mothers and the Need for Child Care Services—U. S. Department of Labor, Wages and Labor Standards Administration, Women's Bureau, Washington, D. C., June 1968.

Books for religious training of the family:

Parents and Religion—by J. Gordon Chamberlin. Philadelphia, Westminster, 1961. "Here 100 concerned readers of all denominations is a thoughtful and useful examination of current aims, concepts, and practices in Christian education."

Prejudice and your Child, by Kenneth B. Clark, Boston, Beacon, 1963. "A clear dispassionate analysis of factors which contribute to prejudice, along with helpful suggestions as to what you can do to reduce and prevent feelings of prejudice in your child." Book Jacket.

The Spiritual Education of our Children, by Jessie Orton Jones, New York, Viking, 1960. Unpretentiously and without bias, the author offers an exploration and examination of various ways of providing a rich and successful spiritual education for our children.

The Spiritual Woman, edited by Marion Turner Sheehan. New York, Harper, 1955. This is a book of inspiration and guidance for every woman concerned about her place in the world of today.

365 Table Graces for the Christian Home—by Charles L. Wallis. New York, Harper, 1967. An inspiring book to be used in any Christian home.

Your Children's Faith, by Florence M. Taylor. New York, Doubleday, 1964. This informal guide fills the need for a truly practical handbook for the average parent who wants to increase his child's grasp of the Christian faith.

Listed below are more books received recently. These are for physical and emotional development.

Between Parent and Child, by Haim G. Ginott. New York, MacMillan, 1965. "A psycho-therapist suggests fundamental principles and gives specific advice to guide parents in recognizing, understanding, and constructively meeting the ordinary psychological problems of childhood." Booklist.

The Child Worshipers, by Martha W. Lear. New York, Crown, 1963. This amusing and provocative book should produce soul-searching among all parents as infinite ways to turn a child into a status symbol are revealed.

Complete Child Care in Body and Mind, by I. Newton Kugelmas. New York, Twayne, 1959. "A modern parents' guide that covers everyday physical and psychological problems of infants, children and adolescents."

FLOODING—Paul Coats (right) and Burl Morris (left) view Coats' farm after a recent flood in Grayson and Ohio counties. About 95 of Coats' 100 acres of corn was under water. Morris lost half of the crops on 700 acres he works. Both blamed the damage on delays in constructing the last two of 10 proposed water retention structures in the area and delays in dredging 2 miles of Caney Creek. The delays, begun in 1972, involved obtaining an Environmental Impact Statement.

by: perilla m. auderick...

If you try to call the Signal office next week and get no answer, we're not out of business yet. It's time for our annual leave and that will, hopefully, be from this Friday until Monday, August 20th.

Of course, you realize that means that the news for the August 16th issue will have to be thought up by Thursday, August 9th. So, if you plan to do anything newsworthy in the next ten days, do it early, please.....

For the first time in four years, we don't plan on going anywhere — there's too much to do around the old homestead and, besides, I don't want to deprive my neighbors of the presence of my five kids for that long a time — they couldn't stand it, right?.....

There's not really that much to ramble on this week. I can't tell you about our trip to King's Island a week or so ago and, I think I will. It went on — it really was. I went under duress and dragged Jim along, unwillingly. But, the day was about 20 degrees cooler than last year when we went to Disney World and had such an appalling time, the baby was a year older, and it wasn't as expensive. Most of the rides are fun. My eleven-year old son and nine-year old daughter talked me into riding the big "Wildcat." We used to call them roller-coasters to you less 'hep' people and, believe me, I suddenly realized that I had aged in the last ten to fifteen years. Where I used to ride the one at Joyland by the hour — this one I wouldn't touch again with a test-pole. My daughter and I, somehow wound up in the last seat and were thrown around unmercifully during the entire ride. I spent the whole time with my eyes shut, alternately praying and screaming for the kids to hold on. Needless to say, we made it, but the extent of the rest of my riding was the merry-go-round. The kids enjoyed the magic carpet ride the most. You know, that's the one where you come down the metal outdoors slide on top of a piece of an old rug. I didn't try it. Seriously, it is one of the nicer amusement parks — it's clean, the workers are all very friendly, and it's only a little over a two-hour drive from here.....

Tried our luck at fishing at Dale Hollow over the weekend — don't worry — there aren't too many fish there mourning the loss of a loved one due to our presence. We did catch a multitude of two-inch big mouth bass but, of course, they very quickly were thrown back in. I got tired of my eleven-year old son smarting off about, "Well, I at least bait my own hook," and finally got up the nerve to mutilate a few minnows. Dale Hollow is a beautiful lake, very clean and not too crowded. But, the crappie fishing there isn't too much at this time of the year — unless you're looking for a picture of me holding a huge string of fish.....

A Statement By Judge Charles Carter

In the July 26th Mt. Vernon Signal, Mr. Parsons had what he called an audit covering a $3,000.00 check.

If that was an audit, I have never seen one in my life. An audit covers all funds and not one item of the maximum tax revenue for Rockcastle County is $182,570.48 according to the records on file in the Clerk's office. If that was an audit, what became of the balance which amounts to $179,570.48?

The truth of the matter is Mr. Parsons called it an audit when in fact it was just a memorandum or statement made by Don Buchanan. He didn't call it an audit. Mr. Buchanan is an accounts examiner, not an auditor, all of which is on file in my office, and I invite anyone interested to come in and see for yourself. Charles B. Parsons is the only person that calls this an audit.

Second, that was not and is not the question to be answered. The question was by what legal authority did Cleston Saylor write a check?

This from K.R.S. 160.560:

(1) Each board of education SHALL elect a treasurer for the board. The board may elect its secretary to serve as treasurer. The board may remove the treasurer from office at any time for cause by a vote of three members of the board.

Subsection (4) reads as follows:

The treasurer SHALL issue his check on depository for payment of all legal claims which have been authorized for payment in accordance with rules and regulations previously adopted by the local board of education and approved by the State Board of Education.

Mr. Lloyd Shuts is the duly elected treasurer, and their by laws say all checks must be signed by Charles Parsons and Lloyd Shuts.

All teachers or anyone else that receives a check from school funds know that their checks are signed by the two above named. According to law and Kentucky Statute, the treasurer is the only one with authority that can legally write a check to be paid from school funds.

Mr. Parsons made the statement to Hewitt Jones, in the presence of witnesses, that Cleston Saylor didn't write a check because he (Charles Parsons) had to sign it. Again, I say by what legal authority did Cleston Saylor sign a check?

The little so-called audit hasn't changed my mind, and I don't believe it has changed the minds of the people of this County.

Title I Personnel Hired

Rockcastle County School Superintendent Charles B. Parsons and the Board of Education have decided to go ahead with a Title I Program for the schools this year, even though funding for the program is assured by the federal government only through September 30.

However, this year the Title I program will only cover instructional areas (reading and math). In past years, besides the instructional areas, salaries for music, art and physical education instructors in the grade schools had also been funded under the program. Mr. Parsons said that he planned to try and put physical education under the foundation program in all the schools.

Personnel hired for the program are: Patsy Baker, Secretary; Willard Whitaker, Social Worker; Doris Towery, RN, School Nurse; Patsy White, Ele. Library Clerk; and Sondra Mullins, High School Library Clerk. Nurses aides hired were: Mildred Hunt, Vornie Mink, Kaye Singleton, Gustava Peters, and Mabel Esal.

Teacher aides also hired under the program, were: Darlene Cameron, Virginia Mullins, Charlotte Bullwink, Carol Jean Riddle, Doris Wright, Ola Smith, Telvis Daugherty, Bonnie Kirby, Mary E. Leach, Thelma Mullins, Juanita Davis, Carline Singleton, Ina F. St. Clair, Edna Williams, Thelma Farthing, June Parsons, Lorene McClure and Precia Cobb.

Several bids were opened at Monday night's meeting of the Board. Among them were bids for several new pieces of equipment for the Mt. Vernon Elementary School classroom. Principal Buford Parkinson asked the Board to advertise for the bids and the money came from the school's funds.

Low bidder for the items was Campbell-Phillips of Lexington who submitted a bid of $4,742.75 for a dishwasher, serving counter and cook's work table.

Milk bids were also opened and Southern Belle and Chappell Dairy both submit identical bids of five a half pint which is three-fourths of a cent higher than the price paid last year. As in the past, the Board split the contract between the two dairies.

The Board also employed ten additional teachers, subject to certification and also subject to Title I funds being appropriated for the full year. Hired were: Lawrence Bullock, Career Education; RCHS, Jess Tom Piko, Livington Elementary; John Hale, Livington Elementary; Janice Coffey, Livington - "Title I readiness"; Robert Webb, Virginia Hunt, Brenda Stringer and Marshall Norton, all of Mt. City Fire Chief John Cox found a new use for the Fire Truck last Tuesday. The occasion was brought about when some Pulaski County men were relieved of some liquid refreshment in the form of eleven cases of beer. City Policeman Kelly Richards and Chief Clifford Pittman began disposing of it by pouring it down the drain; however, Mr. Cox came up with the idea of setting it down in the cases and backing over it with the Fire Truck. Needless to say, West Main Street resembled "Old Faithful" in an alcoholic way for awhile. The method was successful and the liquid was washed down the drain with the Fire Truck.

JOHN NICHOLS'

Frankfort Watchline

Since the Kentucky General Assembly plans to raise money to promote its annual sessions amendment, we have a question.

Where do the legislators intend to get the funds? A simple query, but in these days of Watergate and whatnot, perhaps a pertinent one.

Without taking sides on annual sessions - or what the Legislature likes to call the "legislative reform" amendment we would like to know, for example, if the lawmakers are going to ask lobbyists for the money.

Now, "lobbyist" isn't a dirty word. The specimen is necessary to a fairly smooth working of the legislative process and he does explain his special interest side of things.

But a lobbyist is not a defender of the public interest, to put it mildly. He is hired to do his best for his client and that is his prime responsibility. If he is a conscience-smitten person, he also will consider the public.

If the annual sessions proponents are going to ask lobbyists for money, obviously they should tap both sides. That way, they can always claim that neither made a contribution that would have left the Assembly in debt to him.

Forgetting that argument for a moment, we might ask what happens if a labor group refuses to donate while a business group comes across. Will the leaders of the annual sessions drive decline to accept only one side's contribution?

You might wonder if we're raising hypothetical nonsense or just doing an exercise in theory. No. We are informed reliably that the "Committee for Legislative Reform" is searching for donors among various interests involved in any legislation during any session.

Understand, we're not condemning this, if it's true, but raising questions that really should be asked. The amendment, incidentally, will be on the November ballot and calls for yearly sessions lasting as much as 45 days, but not necessarily consecutively.

What that means, if voters approve, is that you'll be seeing the Kentucky Legislature in Frankfort on and off for the first six months of every year.

Note well that we said "if voters approve." They never have yet.

Running Hard and Early - In his unannounced campaign for governor in 1975, Lt. Gov. Julian Carroll is overlooking no popular or unpopular issue on which he can take a stand as early as possible.

For example, Carroll came out strongly the other day against abortion. And earlier, he stood foursquare against obscenity.

Well, we know a little about Kentucky and can predict four-square that most people in the Commonwealth are indeed against abortion and obscenity, though we hesitate to lump those issues together.

Carroll's stand strikes us somewhat as being in favor of motherhood and pies made of apples. That certainly puts him in with the multitude, but so what? Who with any power or following is going to come out for abortion and for obscenity?

In other words, does Carroll really make any hay - gather any votes - by strong early stands on obvious issues?

Same Name, Wrong Figure - Time now for another episode in that running gun battle between Eastern Kentucky University chief Robert Martin and Parks Commissioner Ewart Johnson.

It all came to light several weeks ago during ceremonies at Fort Boonesborough State Park when the two acknowledged they're in fierce competition to see who can lose the most weight the fastest.

The comments quickly dipped to thinly veiled, but grinningly-delivered insults and that's where the saga rested until the other day when we got a note from Johnson.

Johnson says he just got a call from Martin, the portly educator accusing him of playing dirty pool, not being straight, using every low tactic to win the race against the weight. And then the lowest cut of all. We'll read you that part of Johnson's note.

"One night last week a Lexington TV station had my comment about the operation of the parks last year. Bob and his lovely wife were watching and he said to her, 'Honey, look at him, look how young he looks, he has quit eating in the parks, look how much weight he lost, he looks better than I have ever seen him. What, Oh, Lord, am I to do?'"

"I wasn't until after his frustration that his wife brought to his attention that the studio had mistakenly placed Public Safety Commissioner Ron Johnson's picture on the screen while quoting my remarks."

Government To The People

FRANKFORT, Ky.—Gov. Wendell Ford said today that he plans to set up a temporary office in various locations around Kentucky on specific dates, beginning mid-August.

Already two locations have been determined—Northern Kentucky, August 14-15 and the State Fair, August 20-25.

The Governor said he wanted to make himself and members of his staff available to citizens in the different regions of the state who might otherwise not have such an opportunity.

"There are those who can, in my opinion, be better served by state government if we extend our accessibility to the areas where they live," Ford said. "I am also interested in learning more of their expectations from government, their complaints and their problems."

The first government-to-people visit will be in Northern Kentucky, where a branch Governor's office will be established for two days in Kenton, Campbell and Boone counties.

A branch Governor's office also will be set up at the State Fair, and the Governor will be in attendance part of each of the six days. This will be the first time a Kentucky Governor has established an office at the fair.

The branch office will be located in the center aisle of the East Wing of the Kentucky State Fair and Exhibition Center.

"Citizens will have an opportunity to talk over matters of their own choosing on a first come basis during each of the scheduled visits. Ford will be joined by members of his office staff, and various other state officials who will be available to work on specific matters with those citizens who come to the branch offices.

"I believe this will be an excellent means to bring government closer to the people, and at the same time gauge public opinion on programs which might be considered by the 1974 General Assembly," he added.

Additional details of the Northern Kentucky visit and State Fair work sessions are expected within a week.

The following Civil War story is from the pen of Ralph Griffin and appeared in his column "Rockcastle Facts and Stories," which ran in the Mt. Vernon Signal some years ago. Here is the story just as Ralph wrote it.

Adam Griffin and his wife, Margaret, lived with their three children in a little cabin on Roundstone Creek. They managed to eke out a small living by tending a garden and cow crops, which were supplemented by hunting, fishing and trapping. Adam had managed to construct a forge and make a number of hand tools which enabled him to pick up a bit of change by doing odd jobs for the neighbors.

In time, he built a small shop and became known as a good blacksmith. Home-made tools were far apart and horses were not numerous during the Civil War period. Possibly, for this very reason, the people who were so fortunate as to own livestock of any kind took mighty good care of it. Horse owners rode for miles around, dodging both Federal and Confederate troops, to have Griffin shoe their horses.

From a small supply of metal, which he managed to obtain from some source, the blacksmith made and turned his own shoes and even made nails. For doing the entire job, he got about fifteen cents per hoof and it usually took the best part of a day to shoe a horse all the way around.

One day Adam and his six-year-old son, Jim, (father of your correspondent) had just entered the shop where Adam had a bit of left-over work awaiting. Suddenly they heard the sound of a galloping horse approaching. Ever alert to such sounds, Adam seized his son's hand and was out of the door in a moment. He was too late. A lone soldier wearing some kind of officer's uniform, almost rode them down before jerking his horse to a halt. Drawing a huge pistol, he dismounted and ordered Adam back into the shop.

As the scared son, Jim, remembered the occasion. The officer was a man of few words, he merely ordered, "shoe that horse." The blacksmith explained that he would have to fire the forge, then he applied it would take a long time. The soldier merely waved his gun significantly as he said, "Get on the job and don't waste time. If you ever expect to shoe another horse."

Evidently Adam did expect to shoe other horses, or at least hoped to. He later said that it was the quickest job of shoeing that he ever did in his life. The small son helped to bring in wood and then pumped the forge for his father. Never once did the soldier offer to help with anything. He merely sat and glowered, pistol in hand and a constant threat in his eye.

Griffin did a bit of praying as he worked. He earnestly hoped that no other soldier happened along — if they happened to be of a different political faith to his untried guest there was sure to be a gunplay. To make sure that he wasn't attacked from behind, in such an event, the blacksmith was likely to be the first casualty. A man can imagine a lot of things when death is breathing down the back of his neck; or so it said.

Fortunately for the Griffin posterity, nobody came. There was nothing to delay the work and horse was newly shod in record time.

The officer examined the work critically, walking the horse up and down the road a few times to make sure that he did not limp; then appeared to be satisfied that all was as it should be.

He ordered Griffin to face the wall and raise his hands. This the poor man did, fully expecting to be shot in the back as payment for his work. Evidently, however, the officer was merely protecting his head because he swung into the saddle, slipped his huge pistol in its holster, dug spurs into his steed and galloped away.

Regardless of who he was, or what force he belonged to, he had been poorly raised, for he never even bothered to say "Thank you," Adam did. He raised his eyes and devoutly said, "Thank You, Lord."

A new Civil War story, in connection with Great Saltpetre Cave recently came to light when a man named Storey, living in Indiana, visited the cave last week and talked with Richard Mullins. When Richard told him of his interest in such matters, he promised that when he got home he would shortly send me the complete details with names, dates, etc., plus a picture, in uniform, of the soldier concerned in the incident.

The story deals with a Union soldier by the name of John Storey, who was present at the Battle of Wildcat Mountain, where he had an arm shot off by a Confederate soldier and an eye put out when his horse became unmanageable and ran into a patch of woods and the eye was damaged by the limb of a tree. He was brought to Saltpetre Cave, along with several other soldiers wounded in battle, and was kept in what is known as the Hospital Room of the cave until their wounds were healed. He said that at this time, the Union Army took over complete possession of the cave and maintained an armed guard there for several months. Later, he became a permanent member of that guard, since he could not again take up active duty in his regiment. Being unable to handle a musket, he was armed with two big cap-and-ball Colt revolvers.

Mr. Mullins did not secure the home address of his informant, who said he was a grandson of John Storey, but expects him to be in communication with us soon, at which time we can record the entire episode for our Civil War section.

Also, I have come across two pages of what's-ast-into-it have been a three-page account of the Morris family, particularly Mark Morris for whom it is assumed Morris Valley, near the cave, was named. The complete story is not here, but it seems that a son of his James Madison Morris, was living in Lexington, during the war, in charge of a coffin factory operated by Federal forces in an imposing private residence from which its Rebel owner had been forcibly evacuated. James Madison had only one eye, so was not subject to military service. He was on picket duty at the coffin factory the night the Rebels came in and took over the town. He was missing next morning and his wife was greatly concerned, fearing he was either killed or captured. His brother, John Morris, who was with the Federal troops that later ran the Confederates out of Lexington, laughed at her fears and assured her that in his opinion James Madison and his buddy, a man named Roberts, were right then back in Morris Valley, safe and sound — which late proved to be the case.

Another brother, Henry Morris, was in the same regiment with John. John Morris was evidently killed later, because the US Government sent in a regulation service tombstone for his grave but it was never put up. Where Henry died and was buried is not known.

Kentucky Afield

Kentucky's hunters are some of the most safety-minded individuals anywhere. Out of an estimated 300,000 hunters, there were only three fatal hunting accidents in Kentucky during 1972.

While this is a good record, it is still not good enough. Our goal should be no fatalities at all. If each and every hunter would learn and practice the "Ten Commandments of Gun Safety," we could probably realize this goal.

The "Ten Commandments" are as follows:

1. Treat every gun with the respect due a loaded gun. This is the first rule of gun safety.
2. Guns carried into camp or home, or when otherwise not in use, must always be unloaded and taken down — or have actions open — guns should always be carried in cases to the shooting area.
3. Always be sure barrel and action are clear of obstructions, and that you have only ammunition of the proper size for the gun you are carrying. Remove oil and grease from chamber before firing.
4. Always carry your gun so that you can control the direction of the muzzle even if you stumble; keep the safety on until you are ready to shoot.
5. Be sure of your target before you pull the trigger; know the identifying features of the game you intend to hunt.
6. Never point a gun at anything you do not want to shoot; avoid all horseplay while handling a gun.
7. Unattended guns should be unloaded; guns and ammunition should be stored separately, beyond reach of children and carkeys.
8. Never climb a tree, fence or jump a ditch with a loaded gun; never pull a gun toward you by the muzzle.
9. Never shoot a bullet at a

10. Avoid alcoholic drinks before or during shooting. Practice these ten major rules of safe gun handling and encourage all those you know to do the same. Hunting is a safe sport, but we all need to work to make it even safer.

STATE ACQUIRES 41 HOSPITAL UNITS

Kentucky this week secured forty-one hospital units through the state Division of Civil Defense. The 200-bed hospitals, valued at $1,298,111.40, are emergency units which had previously been stored throughout the state as part of the disaster program in Kentucky.

The Department of Health Education and Welfare has released the hospitals as surplus property and Kentucky has elected to retain the units now based in the state.

Elmer Beckett, Jr., deputy director of Kentucky Civil Defense, said the hospitals will remain in the counties where they are now located unless the local officials request that the units be transferred.

Each unit provides a complete hospital, including three operating rooms, dental lab, x-ray units and two weeks of supplies to care for two hundred patients. All are self-contained, with water pumps and generating units.

Joe Palmer, director of the Division of Surplus Property, said the transfer would include the later acquisition of fifteen trailer loads of back-up supplies should materials be damaged or

"Last winter's electric heating bills were even less than our estimate."

Wilbur Peveler, Rt. 1, Bremen, Ky.

Here's why...

"Before we started our conversion to electric heat, we made sure our insulation was up to par. Caulked where necessary, checked the weather stripping around doors and windows, and so on. Then after the conversion, we just set the thermostat. We try not to monkey with it much during the day 'cause I think that helps."

Mr. Peveler had the right idea. First, decide to convert to electric heat. Then make sure your home is as well-insulated as it can be... to keep the heat in, cold out... and to heat more economically. With the variety of electric heating systems available, you're sure to find one just right for you. And don't forget — electric heat is remarkably clean, virtually maintenance-free. See us for a free estimate.
